GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

GARRISON INSTRUCTION.—PROMOTION.

Head Quarters, Simla, July 1.—No. 163.—With reference to G.O. 152 of 1871, the following Horse-guards' G.O. is republished for general information and guidance:—

H.E. the Right Hon. the C. in C. in India, in directing the immediate attention of general officers commanding districts and divisions to the above General Order, has remarked that, in no less than twenty-six regiments serving in the three Presidencies, officers have failed to take advantage of the first course of garrison instruction held in India.

In some few instances it is possible that the requirements of the service may have prevented any officers being spared from their regiments, but his Lordship is of opinion that such cases must be of rare occurrence.

It will be observed that the Horse-guards' G.O. now published renders the "special examination" compulsory upon all subaltern officers for whom there may be accommodation at the classes. In selecting officers to go through the course, however, preference should generally be given to those upon whom the examination was made obligatory by para. 1 of Horse-guards' G.O. 65 of 1870.

His Lordship directs special attention to the concluding para. of the Horse-guards' G.O. now published, as well as to para. XIII.* of Horse-guards' G.O. 65 of 1870; and in order that he may be in a position to decide upon the cases of all officers who have not passed before Dec. 31, 1873, general officers are requested at the half-yearly inspections of British regiments to ascertain and report how far commanding officers have availed themselves of the services of the garrison instructors for the training of the younger officers of their regiments.

Horse-guards' G.O. 35, dated April 1—Examinations for Promotions.

* XIII.—The cases of officers who may not have had an opportunity of attending a course of instruction in a garrison, are to be referred for special consideration.

I.—With reference to G.O. 65 of 1870, all officers who entered the army prior to May 1, 1870, must pass the special examination before December 31, 1873.

II.—Commanding officers will, upon that date, report to the adjutant general the names of all subalterns under their command who have not done so; forwarding, at the same time, any explanation those officers may have to urge as a reason for not having complied with this G.O.

RESPONSIBILITY OF COLLECTORS, C.S.

Simla, July 5.—No. 933.—The following orders issued by the Government of India, in the financial dept., are published:—

No. 886, dated Simla, July 4.

From R. B. Chapman, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department.

To the ———, Secretary to the Government of ———

I am desired to state that as it was owing to an absolute neglect of rules on the part of the collector of ——— that the embezzlement of Rs. 1,606-11-0 by ———, late money order agent of that station, became possible, the Gov. gen. in Council is compelled to direct that the whole amount of the irrecoverable balance be made good by the collector.

It is absolutely necessary that those officers through whose hands Government money passes should be made to feel such a weighty sense of their individual responsibility in respect thereto as shall prevent carelessness on their part, and shall ensure their maintaining proper supervision over their subordinates.

Ordered that the above be published in the Gazette of India.

Strangways, of infantry, is cancelled, at that officer's own request. Surg. T. Mathew, M.B., medical department, for two years.

OFFICERS' CLAIMS.—The C. in C. in India has received a communication from the Horse-guards representing that difficulty is constantly experienced in the settlement of regimental debts of officers who proceed to England on duty or on leave, and who whilst at home retire by sale of commission. To prevent such inconvenience in future, the C. in C. directs that, when forwarding the leave or other papers of such officers to army head quarters, commanding officers shall certify that all regimental claims have been satisfied to date of departure.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.—The Governor general in Council is pleased to rule that no person shall be appointed to the public service in India in a grade eligible to pension without a certificate by a commissioned medical officer, or by a medical officer in charge of a civil station, that he has no disease, constitutional affection, or bodily infirmity, unfitting him, or likely to unfit him, for the public service. COURTS-MARTIAL.—At a general court-martial, assembled at Dinapore, on the 22nd day of May, 1872, Corporal J. Evans, 96th regt., was arraigned on the following charge:—Insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Dinapore, on the 7th April, 1872, struck with his clenched fist, on the face, Sergeant major J. D. Sharp, 96th regt., the said Sergeant major Sharp being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. Finding: The Court finds that the prisoner is guilty of the charge. Sentence: The Court sentence the prisoner to be reduced to the ranks, and to suffer penal servitude for the term of fifteen years.—C. R. O. EVANS, col. R.A., President. Dinapore, May 24, 1872. Approved and Confirmed: The court have performed a painful but imperative duty in awarding a suitable sentence for the very gross act of insubordination of which Corporal Evans was guilty, the evil example of which was enhanced by the rank of the prisoner. As Corporal Evans had previously borne a very good character, it gives me deep regret that I cannot diminish the punishment awarded; but the sergeant major whom Corporal Evans deliberately assaulted has the most arduous and responsible duties, and it is necessary that he should be protected in their performance.—NAPIER OF MAGDALA, General, Commander-in-Chief in India. Simla, June 29, 1872.—At a general court-martial assembled at Rawulpindiee on the 5th July, 1872, Private T. Neville, 70th regt., was arraigned on the following charge:—Charge: The prisoner, in confinement under sentence of a district court-martial, is charged with insubordination accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Rawulpindiee, on the 15th May, 1872, used violence against Captain H. Greatwood, of the 70th regt., by throwing a piece of tobacco at him, and thereby striking him in his face, the said Captain H. Greatwood being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. Finding: The Court finds that the prisoner is guilty of the charge. Sentence:—The Court sentence the prisoner to suffer penal servitude for the term of ten years.—H. BENT, Lieut. col., R.A., President. Confirmed. The prisoner committed a wanton and insulting act of gross insubordination towards his superior officer, Capt. Greatwood; for this offence the sentence is too lenient. The first five years of the sentence to be carried out in India.—NAPIER OF MAGDALA, General, C. in C. in India. Head quarters, Simla, July 19.—At a general court-martial assembled at Hazareebaugh on July 10, 1872, Private C. Power, 63rd regiment, was arraigned on the following charges:—Charges: Insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Hazareebaugh, on May 28, offered violence against Corp. W. J. Bell, of the same regiment, by discharging at him a rifle loaded with ball, the said Corp. Bell being his superior officer, and in the execution of his office. 2. Insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Hazareebaugh, on May 28, offered violence against Serg. F. H. Burrows, of the same regiment, by discharging at him a rifle loaded with ball, the said Sergeant Burrows being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. Finding: The Court finds that the prisoner is guilty of the first charge, and not guilty of the second charge. Sentence: The Court sentence the prisoner to suffer penal servitude for life.—C. M. YONGE, Lieut. col. R.A., President.—The Prisoner, Private Power, was guilty of a deliberate and malicious attempt to murder Corporal Bell; his crime was greatly aggravated by the breach of military discipline in the use of his rifle against his superior officer when in the execution of his office. Had the sentence been death I should have considered it my duty to confirm it. It is necessary for courts-martial to remember that it is their duty to protect the persons of those who are placed in authority in the army, and to uphold discipline by visiting the unlawful use of his weapons by the soldier with the severest punishment. The first five years of the sentence to be carried out in India.—NAPIER OF MAGDALA, General, Commander-in-Chief in India.—Head quarters, Simla, July 19, 1872.

THE BURDWAN FEVER.

The following resolution by the Government of Bengal, dated July 23, has been published in the Calcutta Gazette :—

Read,—A letter No. 367, dated July 6, from the Commissioner of the Burdwan Division, submitting a review of the fever relief operations in the district of Burdwan, from the outbreak of the fever in July, 1871, to May, 1872.

1. The Lieut. governor is glad to believe that, as regards the season which has passed, and the assistance which has been rendered to those suffering from the effects of the fever, all that was possible has been done. It is very consoling to know that there is now a lull in new cases, but the Government must necessarily look with much anxiety, as the season advances, to see whether the fever breaks out virulently again, and must make all preparations to cope with the disease. No aid has, therefore, been even temporarily withdrawn; but, on the contrary, improved supervision has been provided, and the large body of medical officers now in the district are doing what they can to raise the general standard of health.

Home.

MESSRS. GLEDSTANES AND CO.

"Gledstanes" was a firm of high repute. It had been among the foremost for half a century. Like Reid, Irving, and Co., whose fall its failure may bring to remembrance, one of its partners is on the Bank direction, while another is a director of the London and Westminster Bank. It is, indeed, openly said, now when their business is stopped, that "Gledstanes" have not been what they were for these six years past. In the fatal year 1866 they are said to have had losses, and it is possible they never fully recovered them. Their friends thought they had weathered the storm, and were as sound and healthy as ever; but the event has shown that they had not the strength to stand a fresh trial. Nevertheless, the firm has always borne, and, we believe, always will bear, a high reputation. Fortune has of late been unfriendly; but its partners, whether in the height of prosperity or struck down by adversity, remain, and are individually trusted and respected.

Whether the fall of Gledstanes and Co. will be an isolated calamity is a question of much doubt and uncertainty, which time alone can answer. Hope is at present in the ascendant, and in such a case hope is an element which has even a pecuniary value. The firm were East India merchants, with an allied house at Calcutta; and to be an East India merchant in these days, whatever it may have been in days which are the subject of tradition, is to be exposed to great vicissitudes of gain and loss. Rupees can no longer be picked up without risk. They may abound to-day, but they disappear to-morrow. The close of the American war was followed, as we all know, by a great collapse in the East. The effect of the revulsion of prices was most felt on the Bombay side of the Peninsula, but it extended to Bengal also. "Gledstanes" did not pass through the fire without suffering, and perhaps it may prove, when a full analysis of their books is made, that they did not come out of the trial of 1866 with a balance in their favour. A firm may have liabilities exceeding its assets and yet be able to go on and make profits, and even recover itself, if its credit remains good. "Gledstanes" got over 1866, and for some time afterwards were supposed to be prospering. After the first reaction there was a recovery in the cotton market, and other Indian produce rose in price. "Gledstanes" had their full share in the advantages of the change, and, as their business continued in its old dimensions, it was believed that they were completely resuscitated. This year, however, has been a hard time for men in the East India trade. Prices have steadily dropped in most of the staples of the East, and especially in cotton. It is said that from three to four millions have been lost by the holders of cotton in the last half-year; and, although the statement has been criticised, it appears to be to a large extent true. The prices of the stocks now in the hands of holders, not, perhaps, as compared with the prices at which they bought them, but as compared with the prices at which they might have been sold in the spring, indicate a loss to the extent we have named. Liverpool has suffered severely, but the pressure of the decline in the price of cotton has not been confined to Liverpool. Nor has cotton been the only commodity that has dropped. Indigo, jute, and tea have also fallen in price, and "Gledstanes" have been visited with the consequences. Every one in the same way of business must have had a bad year; but we hope that others have maintained such reserves from good years that they may stand the trials of bad years without flinching. This is plainly the moral to be impressed on every merchant treading the same paths as Gledstanes and Co. East Indian trade is especially liable to vicissitudes. It deals in the produce of crops which are now abundant and now scarce. A dry season may put all calculations awry. We see this fact brought out most forcibly in the Indian Government accounts, where the amount of the opium crop and its variations in price baffle the estimates of all the Ministers of Finance. To do business successfully with the East a firm should have a large capital, and should estimate its gains on large averages of profits and losses.—Times.

Miscellaneous.

INDIAN TROOP-SHIPS.—A revised programme of the movements of her Majesty's Indian troop-ships during the forthcoming season has been issued, in consequence of the following changes having been made in the arrangements sanctioned when the original programme was printed in June last:—The Jumna, instead of leaving Portsmouth on September 23 will do so on the 14th, and will take back two of the regiments of infantry engaged in the Autumn Manœuvres, one for Kingston and one for Queenstown; the 43rd Regiment and drafts for India will embark in the Jumna, the 43rd for Cannanore and the drafts for Bombay, arriving there on about November 4. The Euphrates will take the 105th Regiment from Bombay to Aden in December, and bring home the 3rd battalion 60th Rifles. The Crocodile, on the last voyage of the season, will not come home via the Cape, as was originally intended, but will leave Bombay on March 29, calling at Beypoor, and come via the Canal to Portsmouth, arriving there about May 3.

2. Six elephants have been lent by the Government of India for the use of the supervising medical agency. A sufficient supply of quinine has been indented for, and bark from the cinchona plantations at Rungbee has been sent to be tried as a decoction. The medical department will be again instructed to strain every resource to supply good men in case of further outbreaks; and in the meantime the services of the young supernumerary sub-assistant surgeons are being utilised.

3. His Honour observes that, as regards the causes of the disease and its ultimate prevention, there is still a mystery; but while several reports on the drainage of various parts of the district are under consideration, a comprehensive survey of the country, with a view to map out the whole system of drainage, has been undertaken by the officers of the irrigation department, who are now levelling it, with a view to placing beyond doubt the exact physical facts.

4. In the event of a fresh outbreak, the question of funds must demand very serious attention, as the expenses are already very heavy, and the Government of India has not as yet given any grant in aid for this purpose. The Lieut. governor, however, does not doubt that the public will be liberal, and that from some source money will be forthcoming to meet such great and indubitable suffering.

5. The acknowledgments of Government are again specially and most fully due to Mr. C. T. Metcalfe, the magistrate of Burdwan, for his great and self-denying services during the epidemic. The Lieut. governor cannot too often express his appreciation of Mr. Metcalfe's energy and devotion while himself suffering severely from the attacks of fever.

6. To Dr. Jackson, the sanitary commissioner, Dr. Elliot, the late civil surgeon of Burdwan, and to Sub asst. surg. Deobandho Dutt, the acknowledgments of Government are also due for their exertions to provide for the relief of the sufferers; as well as to all the other officers who have done their duty under such trying circumstances.

Order.—Ordered, that a copy of the report with this resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette, and that a copy be forwarded to the Commissioner of the Burdwan division, and to the Inspector general of hospitals, Indian Medical Department, for information.

THE NEW RETIREMENT SCHEME—"FINAL DECISION" OF GOVERNMENT.

The Government of India having been in communication with the Right Hon. the Secretary of State in regard to the measures to be adopted towards reducing the number of unemployed officers of the armies of the three Presidencies, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to publish, for general information, the following orders containing the final decision of her Majesty's Government.

2. Her Majesty's Government have decided not to offer any additional inducements for the retirement of unemployed officers, and that all officers of unimpeachable character and sound health whose rank renders it difficult, and, indeed, almost impossible, to find suitable staff employment for them in the present state of the service, shall nevertheless continue in the service, and at the disposal of Government, under the existing regulations, so long as they retain their present fitness for active employment, and are prepared to discharge whatever duty the Government may think proper to call upon them to perform. Such of these officers as have attained, or may attain, the substantive rank of lieutenant-col., should they still continue unemployed, will have the option, as a temporary arrangement, of residing out of India upon British pay until their services are required, with the understanding that the time passed under these circumstances will count towards retiring pension as well as to the colonel's allowance, but they must be prepared to return to India for any active duty to which they may be called.

3. Unemployed officers who are ineligible for public employment, by reason either of clear misconduct or proved physical or mental inefficiency, or who have been removed from their appointment for inefficiency, or who have by distinct or undeniable misconduct rendered themselves ineligible for regimental employment, will be called upon to send in their application to retire upon such pension as they may be entitled to under regulations, and, if they should fail to do so within three months from the date of their being so called upon, they will be removed to the pension list. Her Majesty's Government do not object to special consideration being shown in the grant of the next higher rate of pension to those officers who have, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council, deserved well of the State by reason of the length and character of their previous services.

4. The Gov. gen. in Council is also authorised to grant to such officers as are not yet entitled to full-pay pensions either the half-pay pension of their rank or such special annuities, short of the pension of a captain, as may be appropriate in each case.

5. Early communication will be addressed to all unemployed officers with a view to carrying the above orders into effect.

6. Moreover, in order to remove one of the causes through which officers come on the unemployed list, her Majesty's Government have directed the following change to be made in the present Furlough Regulations so far as they apply to Staff Corps officers:—

"All leave of absence granted by competent authority will henceforward involve retention of appointment. No officer will be allowed, on the plea of private affairs, to extend his leave, upon whatever grounds such leave may have been originally granted, beyond two years, except upon satisfactory evidence of very urgent necessity.

"The rule contained in the second clause* of paragraph 13 of the Furlough Rules of 1868 will be in all cases strictly observed."

* "In the event of an officer not being able to return to his duty after an absence of three years, it will rest with the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India in Council to order him to appear before a medical board with a view to placing him on the retired list if entitled to pension, or on the half-pay list. Should the circumstances of the case warrant a further extension of leave, it can only be granted without pay."

AN UNJUST STEWARD.—Stephen Groves, engineers' steward of the Malabar, Indian troop ship, was tried by court-martial at Portsmouth on Wednesday, on a charge of desertion and two charges of felony, the money and property stolen belonging to the engineer's mess. He pleaded guilty to the charge of desertion and one of felony, and was acquitted of the other. The Court sentenced him to two years' hard labour, and then to be dismissed, with disgrace, from the service.

THE FAILURE OF GLEDSTANES AND Co.—At the Bankruptcy Court, on August 28, an application was made to Mr. Registrar Hazlitt for the appointment of a receiver to the estate of Messrs. Gledstanes and Co., merchants, of Austin-friars. The liabilities are estimated to amount to between £1,500,000 and £2,000,000; it is expected that the assets will be large. The failure is attributed to losses on large consignments of goods, both for home and for China and the East Indies, at which places the firm had very large business transactions. His Honour appointed Mr. Harvey, public accountant, of Old Jewry, receiver. No injunction was asked for. Messrs. Travers, Smith, and De Gex are solicitors to the proceedings.

THE BURMESE AMBASSADORS.—The Burmese ambassadors have spent some days in Manchester, visiting the manufactories and warehouses. The Mayor of Manchester dined with them on Aug. 28 at the Queen's Hotel, and yesterday they received an address of welcome in the Town Hall, from the Corporation and the Chamber of Commerce. In reply to the latter address, read by Mr. T. Browning, his Excellency Mengyee Maha Laythoo Kenwoon Mengyee read the following statements with reference to improved commercial intercourse with China:—"His Majesty my Royal master is most anxious to open free intercourse with, and hopes ere long to see his country the high road to, these important territories. In order to encourage and give every facility to this route, his Majesty has commanded that in future the transit duty on all merchandise declared for Western China shall be subject to a duty of one per cent. only. With such a desire to open up communication, it must be patent to you that his Majesty will gladly support any approved plan for carrying out this object. His Majesty has also considered that the time has arrived for more direct intercourse with your Government and the great commercial bodies of England. With this view his Majesty proposes, with the sanction of your Government, to appoint consular agents, as tending to promote a better understanding and give greater facilities to development of commerce."

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

The Callisto, from Colombo, which put in at St. Helena, July 16, and proceeded 18th, for London, had lost sails, &c.

The master (Krohn) of the Alcon, from Akyab, which put in at St. Helena, July 24, and proceeded 26th, for Falmouth, had died at sea on July 16.

The Birmingham, Durham, from Calcutta to Dundee, which put in at St. Helena, July 13, making water, was surveyed on the 15th; the surveyors recommended that the cargo should be shifted from fore to aft, in order that the leak, which is supposed to be in the bow ports, may be brought above water and caulked. Other surveys, since held, report the vessel making two inches water in about thirty minutes, and as having lost a great many sheets of copper; most of the cargo in good order. It is also recommended that the vessel be partly discharged, in order to find the leak, and that another survey be held.

The Ruby, arrived from Rangoon, reports that when off Point Hood, Caffraria, May 26, she experienced a very heavy whirlwind storm, commencing at S.E., and shifting suddenly to all points, which lasted for eighteen hours.

The Arracan (s.), from the Clyde to Rangoon, grounded in Cardetke Bay while on her way down the river. She was got off at high water next tide, and has since proceeded.

The British steamer James Stephenson, from Calcutta to London, took fire off Lisbon, Aug. 29. All the passengers were saved, and put on board the Spanish schooner El Babia, in Cascaes Bay. The steamer has been run aground near Belem, and is still burning. The crew are endeavouring to extinguish the flames and save the cargo.

THE ARCHBISHOP AND THE "HEATHEN."

The Times holds that the Bishop of Carlisle is perfectly justified in saying that all who know the Archbishop will be sensible that nothing but an inadvertence, which we have already excused, could have led him into the use of expressions which might seem discourteous to gentlemen who are at present our guests, and who have at all times a special claim on our consideration. But his reference to these students and to the Embassies now visiting us was peculiarly unfortunate. It would have been far nearer the truth to claim the presence of such persons among us as evidence that our civilisation, if not our faith, is at least potent enough to attract to our shores intelligent representatives of the ancient Creeds. These students and Ambassadors, instead of being held up as a spectacle of Heathenism, should rather be regarded with admiration, as examples of men who are able to rise above the prejudices and traditions of their countries, and to consult the wisdom of the West. We need not now dispute with our correspondents whether the claims they advance in favour of the philosophy, religion, and civilisation of the East can be maintained. It is enough that they pay us the homage of deeming our own civilisation worthy of study, and that they thus indicate a readiness to learn from us. It would certainly be more becoming, alike to the courtesy and to the dignity of the Chief Minister of our religion, to welcome such men to our Law Courts and Schools, instead of holding them up as examples of a dreaded superstition. It may well be doubted, indeed, whether, after all, it is these gentlemen who have most reason to complain of the Archbishop's speech. Dr. Goodwin justly says that he thought the Archbishop "paid a great compliment to Hindoo philosophy when he expressed a fear lest we should be converted from our faith by those whom we were anxious to convert." Is it really the case that the Christianity of Englishmen is endangered by the presence among them of a score or two of Hindoo gentlemen? A more melancholy confession of Christian feebleness could hardly be made. During the last century we have sent to India thousands of our best and ablest men; we have subscribed vast sums of money to the support of missionaries, and other Churches have been at least as active as our own in the attempt to convert the people of India to Christianity. Yet at the end of that time, and after all these efforts, we have reason, according to the Archbishop of Canterbury, to fear lest, instead of our army of missionaries converting the Hindoos, a handful of Hindoos should take our universities and our law-ers by storm. We only wonder our correspondents have not made a greater point of this involuntary concession to their influence. They dwell with a severity we cannot deprecate on the blots which disfigure our boasted religion and civilisation; but that an Archbishop should really express an apprehension that "the literature and philosophy" of England is at the present day in danger of yielding to heathen influence would be a still more melancholy evidence of relative weakness. It will not be doubted that the Archbishop said more than he meant, but the incident will not be without its use if it serves to draw attention to the carelessness with which the religion and the civilisation of the great countries of the East are too often regarded by the promoters of missions. All people who are not Christians are lumped together as "Heathens," and are supposed to be all alike in a state of ignorance, barbarity, and vice.

The Daily Telegraph thinks that the Archbishop of Canterbury has raised a wider question than that which relates to the relative position of Brahmanism, Buddhism, or Mahomedanism on the one hand, and of Christianity on the other. His turbaned foes have so widened the controversy that it now covers the whole field of Oriental literature. They ask us to confess what debt Western Civilisation already owes to Eastern intellect, and tell us of what we may still hope to gain from the same source of fertile thought. Now, it would be difficult to overrate the inheritance which the quick brain of the East bequeathed to the West. When the Empire of Rome was shattered in pieces by the combined blows of the Church and of the barbarians; when the culture of Cicero and Horace lingered only as an impious tradition in cloisters which despised the literary gew-gaws of Pagan days; when the fertile speculations of Aristotle and the mathematics of Archimedes lay hid, as if for ever, under tomes of Scriptural commentary and pious meditation; when the very name of secular learning implied an accursed thing, and art had fled back into the night of Paganism; then Civilisation, we must all avow, seemed as dead as the old gods. The world belonged to the Goths and the monks. Man had well-nigh ceased to be a thinking animal, but suddenly again a star appeared in the East. This time it was the star of science; for although the light of wisdom had been trampled out in the war of religious factions which convulsed the West, it found a home in the quieter East, by the side of those lonely deserts whence had sprung the Nazarene idea of religion, and that spiritual faith which has given the West a new life. Arabian hands had piously kindled the lamp which the pre-occupied faith of the West would have left to die, rather than have foregone one hour of combat against the images which had been set up in the churches of the East to satisfy the Ritualistic cravings of Oriental eyes, or against the heresy which Arius had tried to import into the doctrine of the Trinity. The records of the Aristotelian philosophy were treasured by Arabian hands; the symbols of the mathematician received from the same students a new flexibility; and, at the very moment when the culture of Europe seemed to be at the point of death, this stored-up learning stole Westward with the conquering Moslem. The dying flame of science was rekindled at the Islamite lamp; and the light waxed stronger throughout the succeeding ages, until at last scholars went back to the inspiration of their common teacher, Greece, and the day of modern science dawned. Such is one instalment of our debt to the East; but can the East do us such another service? Certainly not of the same kind: for Eastern Science perished in the act of giving birth to Western. No positive scientific results can now be obtained from Oriental research, for it never learned to wield that inductive method which is the only security against speculative dreaming. But we can still draw from the East a gain of another kind. It has produced an original and profound system of philosophy, morals, religion, literature, and society. There we may often see, indeed, our own ideas and practice turned upside down. There we find a people living for a thousand years and flourishing in defiance of what we hold to be fundamental verities. But we cannot afford to throw aside the pregnant lessons which lie on the surface of such a civilisation, and of which the Hindoo foes of Dr. Tait are the uncommissioned interpreters.

THE EUPHRATES VALLEY RAILWAY.

The Money Market Review holds that practically the decision rests between Mr. Andrew and Sir H. Rawlinson. It is a subject, however, that suggests no idea of rivalry or antagonism, but that must warmly interest the commercial as well as the political mind of this country. All the other lines are more or less impracticable, some of them physically, and the rest commercially or financially. The question is thus narrowed to a very simple issue. With regard to the continuation of the Euphrates Valley route to Constantinople at one end and Kurrachee on the other, nothing need be said. Such a continuation is sure sooner or later to be accomplished. As to the other two, neither would furnish, until completed throughout, any real advantage to this country. Each is longer than the Euphrates Valley route, encumbered by great engineering difficulties, and would pass through unsettled and possibly hostile countries, whereas what is needed is that the great highway to India should traverse the territories of as few Powers as possible, and pass through countries comparatively well populated. The Euphrates Valley route, even if extended to Constantinople, would pass through the territory of only one Power, Turkey, whose population is not only more numerous, but more energetic than that of Persia. Now, the Euphrates Valley line would be only 850 miles in length, if terminated at Bussorah, the head of the Persian Gulf, or 920 miles if it were extended to Kowait, which would be the true Eastern terminus; and it would be constructed for little more than eight millions sterling. The cost of either of the other two lines would be infinitely greater, sufficient, indeed, to prevent capitalists from embarking in either with any reasonable prospect of holding a remunerative investment, even if it could be politically safe. The issue of the controversy being thus narrowed, it can scarcely be doubted that the project put forth by Mr. Andrew will receive the concurrence of the people of England and of India too. The question directly involves our supremacy and our political prestige throughout the world. For, if we proved unable to keep or defend our Indian dominions, we should inevitably sink below the rank of a third rate Power, and even that moderate status we should find it not particularly easy to maintain. It would be true statesmanship to consider such contingencies in time—not to create for ourselves a fool's paradise, where all is safe and exempt from the ordinary perils that beset nations as well as individuals; and to be alive to the fact of secret yet persistent aggressiveness on the part of Russia.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE
APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE
TO THE
COMPANY.

BY
LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,
Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshuhur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Reverberator.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. WOOD stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 12, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—
Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—“Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed.”

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—“Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place.”

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—“So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases.”

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words “Dr. J. Collis Browne” on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, August 16; Agra and Madras, August 14; Calcutta, August 13.

THE news of the week is not very stirring. On the morning of the 6th August Lord Northbrook started for Chini, accomplishing his journey in four days. He is said to be delighted with the place, its fruit and wild flowers, and its almost unvarying sunshine. In spite of so many stories going about to the contrary, we are assured by the Pioneer that his Lordship will certainly return to Simla next year. In that case we may be equally certain that he will renew his acquaintance with Chini.

THE ominous spread of cholera in Bengal and Upper India furnishes several paragraphs to the Indian papers. From Allahabad, Ambala, Kassowlie, Simla, Dehra, Lahore, and Meeranmeer we have tidings which serve to account for the yet more alarming statements telegraphed home last week. In Lahore and its suburb Anarkalli, the deaths up to the 4th August were thirty-nine out of seventy-six seizures. The scourge had then extended to the surrounding villages. At Meeranmeer the disease first broke out in the 37th Foot, but it was hoped that by sending the regiment out in three divisions some miles into the country, the spread of the disease would be checked. From Kassowlie and Dagshai the cholera had made its way up to Simla. It has broken out again in Ambala and Allahabad. Some people have been surprised to hear of such a disease invading the Hills; but there is nothing new in the event itself. As far back as 1857 the cholera raged for some time at Sabathu and in the Simla Bazaar.

FROM the papers we learn that the death of Prince Gholam Mohammad, already announced by telegraph, took place in Calcutta at midnight of the 11th August, and his funeral on the following day. He was seventy-eight years old when he died, and his pension of £3,738 a year lapses to the Government. According to the Englishman, his death was hastened by grief for the untimely end of Lord Mayo, whom he regarded as his greatest benefactor. Upon the sleeplessness caused by that sad event dengue supervened, and much weakened the Prince's constitution. Then the season of the year was depressing, and told its tale. At last an old malady, which had been in existence for upwards of fifteen years, declared its supremacy, and slowly but steadily carried off the oldest surviving Prince of the House of Tippoo.

MR. INGLIS has been reappointed to the Viceroy's Legislative Council for another two years. Such an occurrence, in the opinion of the Friend of India, is "one more proof that the working of the income-tax is to be rigorously and unsparingly investigated."

ALL the Andaman and Nicobar Islands have been formed into a Chief Commissionership, and placed under the charge of Major-General D. Stewart as Chief Commissioner.

THE Envoy from Khiva arrived at Rawal Pindi on the 10th August, where he was likely to stay some days before proceeding to Simlah. Nothing more was known regarding the Russian advance towards Khiva; but tidings had reached Kabul of a collision between the Russians and the ruler of Yarkand. It is even asserted that the former had seized upon two towns belonging to the Atalik Ghazi. The envoy from that Prince to Calcutta reached Leh, in Ladakh, on his homeward journey on the 24th July, in good health and spirits; much pleased, also, we are told, with the arrangements made for his journey back.

THE newly-appointed Members of the Bombay Legislative Council are Messrs. J. K. Bythell, and Narayen Wassodewjee, and the Chief of Miraj.

IF the Friend of India is rightly informed, the question of equalising the salt duties will shortly come up for discussion before the Indian Government. We hope the Government will have the courage to equalise the duties by levelling downwards to Madras, not by levelling up to Bengal.

WE are glad to hear that the amount subscribed at Calcutta for Mrs. Elson, wife of the heroic Pilot Elson, who perished in the late cyclone after saving many of the crew of the Rothersey, already amounts to about Rs. 6,000.

THE apparent origin of the Court Martial on Lieutenant Gibson at Allahabad is thus stated in the Delhi Gazette. The Rewah Rajah had a suit pending before the officer in question, and the Rajah's Agent offered the English Political a bribe of Rs. 5,000 to decide the case in his master's favour. Lieutenant Gibson thought that the best way of proving the attempt to bribe him was to make a show of accepting the offer. A meeting with the Agent was then arranged, the conversation at which was overheard by a European member of the Police Force, concealed for that very purpose by Lieutenant Gibson. At another interview a medical gentleman was present. Lieutenant Gibson then reported the whole affair to his superiors. The judgment delivered by him against the Rajah would not of itself have decided the question of guilt or innocence in the days of Lord Bacon, or in the case of a native Indian officer who would probably take bribes from both parties. But in this case it would seem to corroborate the story told by the Lieutenant and his European witness; and it would help to account for the charges subsequently brought against him by the disappointed suitor.

THE Indian Daily News tells a good story, for the truth of which it does not vouch, concerning the tricks played by churchgoers in Calcutta, when the purse is sent round for alms. After the collection had been made in a certain church, the clergyman announced the result in his usual way, mentioning the sum total of rupees, annas, and pies, but adding with grave emphasis, "and thirteen soda-water tops." As a matter of fact, remarks the journalist, "these bits of tin are, we are assured, frequently to be found in the collection-bag of this church." If we are not misinformed, buttons are sometimes used in this country for the same purpose.

FROM the Indian papers we learn that copper has been discovered in a part of the Kurnool district in Madras. Samples of the ore with a piece of wire made from it have already been forwarded to Government for inspection. A like discovery has been made near Yedlabad in Indore. It is not yet certain however whether the ore found in the latter place may not have been washed down from the hills westward of Yedlabad. The Government has also been turning its attention to the iron ores in the neighbourhood of Kummum, between Cuddapah and the Kistna river. Hitherto the excellence and richness of the iron in that district had not been generally known; and now it seems that fuel for working the iron also abounds there in the shape of good coal.

THE comments of the Madras Government on the conduct of its officials during the cyclone of last May agree in the main with the finding of the Committee of Inquiry on the same subject. Mr. Pogson, the Government Astronomer, is censured for his remissness in taking no steps to avert the disasters consequent on a storm which he himself foresaw. In spite of "plain indications of imminent danger," he "never thought fit to make any communication to the marine authorities." With regard to his unwillingness to suggest anything to a department which had ceased for some time to ask for his advice, he is quietly reminded that "an occasion on which a most serious loss of life was imminent, was not one for the indulgence of such susceptibilities." His punishment however for the negligence which led to such "disastrous consequences" is wonderfully light. He is merely bidden in future to attend more strictly to that part of his duties which requires him to "furnish notices of approaching stormy weather," and to communicate personally at need with the head of the Marine Department. As for that department, no step was taken by it to warn the shipping in the roads or to change their berths before the storm. No attempt was made to enforce the directions of the "very complete circular" issued for the guidance of commanders in the monsoon season. A great deal of the subsequent loss might have been prevented if the Master Attendant and his Deputy had done their duty. Mr. Dalrymple's plea that he had been relieved of all executive duties by the remodelling of his department in 1868 is summarily overruled, and Captain Crowther is blamed for not making proper use of his aneroid barometer, and for neglecting to fire the fort guns on the night of May 1. Neither he nor his superior, Mr. Dalrymple, arrived on the beach until long after midnight. The latter, indeed, never showed himself at all, otherwise "much of the confusion, inefficiency, misdirected energy, and consequent loss of life which occurred might have been avoided." The upsetting of his carriage half-way to the beach was no excuse, for, instead of walking back to his house, he might as well "have halted at the neighbouring hotel, and have gone on to the beach later in the day." He too has thus "rendered himself amenable to censure for his neglect," and is censured accordingly. One would have thought that his conduct deserved something more severe than censure; but perhaps his old age, at which the Committee are reproached with sneering, was kindly taken into consideration, in company with his past services.

WITH regard to Major Bowen, the Police Commissioner, the Madras Government thinks less favourably than did the Committee of Inquiry. It would seem indeed as if the heaviest censure had been reserved for the officer who had tried hardest to do his duty. None of the proper leaders being in their proper places, he issued orders on his own account and directed the efforts made from shore to save ships and human lives. But he is "much to blame," it seems, "for having assumed the functions of the Marine Department," on the plea that he could recognise none of the Marine officers by their dress, and fancied that none of them were doing their duty. There was no excuse for such ignorance. He had only to ask some of the bystanders to learn that Mr. Bartlett was on the spot. Instead of preventing obstruction and confusion, he was "occupied in paralysing the energy of the officers of the Marine Department by usurping their functions." In short "he neglected his own duty, prevented others from doing theirs, and did it for them unskillfully, not without very deplorable results." Poor Major Bowen, the object of the Committee's praise, is therefore censured for "this serious misapprehension of his duty," rather more severely than the gentlemen for whose gross neglect of duty he was trying to atone. To err from excess of zeal is no doubt reprehensible, but the worst that Major Bowen did, if he erred at all, was nothing compared with the disastrous neglect of duty on the part of Messrs. Pogson and Dalrymple.

MR. KING's Report on the Cinchona plantations in British Sikkim is prefaced by a full description of the Rungbee Valley, where the cultivation of Cinchona is carried on under his control. It is a valley sixteen miles long by four wide, running almost due east and west, and shut in on the west by a mountain wall more than 6,000 feet high. From these hills the Rungjo flows down through the valley, towards the Teesta, which it ultimately joins. On the south the valley is walled in for half its length by mountains about 8,000 feet high, whose upper slopes are covered with dense jungle. Its south-eastern end is guarded by low spurs from the same mountain range, which there falls away from the valley in a south-easterly direction. The ridge along its northern side is low and nearly bare of wood. At the bottom of the valley, along its southern side, stretch the Government plantations, sloping upwards to about 3,500 feet above the sea. Sheltered from every wind, the plantations enjoy a sub-tropical climate, and a moderate amount of rainfall—120 inches—as compared with the 200 and more inches that fall on the mountains overlooking them. Towards the west the ground tends to form swamps, a condition fatal to Cinchona; but more eastward where the new plantations are springing up, the climate is very much drier and the ground readily drains itself. The Succirubra or red-bark Cinchona, of which the plantations chiefly consist, appears to be doing very well indeed. Many of the older trees are "extremely healthy and vigorous," filling up with their leafy heads the gaps left by thinning. The Cinchona Officinalis, or crown bark of commerce, has thriven so badly that its place is being gradually filled with the red bark. Perhaps, however, thinks Mr. King, it may grow better in the drier spots. Luckily the valuable Calisaya, the yellow bark of commerce, bids fair to thrive in Sikkim. This species is not easy to propagate artificially, but a few trees have at length begun to yield seed, which is carefully preserved for sowing. About fifty acres of this bark have already been planted out, and next year the area will be greatly enlarged. In the Nilgiris the converse results have been witnessed. There the Calisaya will not thrive, whereas Officinalis has done very well. Of the grey bark there are still in Sikkim 29,000 old trees, but this species being poor in quinine, however rich in alkaloids, its cultivation has practically ceased for some years past.

Two distinct forms of disease are found in Sikkim plantations; the one affecting the whole plant and usually fatal, the other local and seldom fatal. The former affects trees planted in damp places or in places which have since become damp. It is a kind of canker which begins at the roots and spreads over the whole tree until it has killed it. The only way to prevent its attacks is to plant no more trees in places damp or liable to become so. The other form of disease shows itself in patches on the stem and branches, which abound most during the rains, and may be seen in all parts of the plantations. It appears to be dangerous only when it breaks out in large patches on small trees, and trees which suffer badly from it will throw out healthy shoots after they have been cut down.

THE seed and nursery beds at Rungbee now hold 600,000 young plants of C. Succirubra and 147,000 of C. Calisaya. Every sickly plant has been cut down, and the healthy ones have been pruned and thinned. From the prunings and thinnings about 39,000 lbs. of dry bark have been collected, the pick of which has gone to England; the remainder being stored up for other purposes. The problem of securing for the native millions "an abundant and cheap supply of the only specific for the most deadly of all Indian diseases" has not yet been fully solved, and it remains to see whether cinchona grown in India will reach maturity. The best way of encouraging the growth of the tree has still to be fairly tested, and several problems connected with the manufacture and sale of the bark remain unsettled. But it is clear that the trees can be grown successfully up to the end of their tenth year, and that their bark is quite as rich in alkaloids as any obtained from South America. Many of the red-bark trees at the age of seven and a-half years have already attained an average height of twenty and a-half feet. Others only four and a-half years old, but planted on a lower level, show an average height of eighteen and a-half feet. We may add that Mr. Campbell, who went over the Rungbee valley last autumn with Dr. King, avows his pleased surprise at the thriving state of the plantations. He saw "hundreds of acres with trees averaging from twelve to twenty-five feet high," looking as healthy and well grown as ordinary trees in the best English or Scotch plantations.

A CALCUTTA telegram of September 5 states that the Benares and Patna opium sales to that date had averaged £143 per chest. The budget estimate was £120 to £140 per chest. This would have given the Government a surplus of £900,000. The indigo season has also proved excellent, the outturn being estimated at not less than 125,000 maunds. In Lower Bengal the crop is 50 per cent. higher than last year. No purchases have been made in advance of arrival.

FROM the same source we learn that the Khan of Khelat obstinately refuses to abide by his late agreements with his Sirdars. The Indian Government has therefore resolved to withdraw its Political Agent, and withhold the payment of its annual subsidy.

THE Viceroy, according to recent telegrams, will start for Umballa about the 14th of next month. He expects to reach Bombay by the middle of November.

OUR correspondent "Watchman," puts some pertinently amusing queries regarding the compulsory retirement of Indian officers under the new scheme sanctioned by the India Office. It is highly improper of course to doubt the perfect justice and absolute freedom from personal bias, which invariably mark the course of official procedure in India as well as England. It is the duty of all well-regulated minds to look upon the servants of the State as beings happily placed above the temptations which harass ordinary mortals. Still, human nature being prone to suspicion and unbelief, there are sure to be a great many sceptics in the Indian Army and among their friends, whose feelings our correspondent may be supposed to reflect. It is rather unfortunate, to say the least, that the new order for getting rid of incompetent or erring officers should seem to have for its prime motive the need of cutting down the Indian expenditure at all hazards; and people will naturally ask questions of the kind suggested by our correspondent. Moreover, if the Indian Army contains so many officers really unfit for further service, how is it that their unfitness was not discovered some time ago, before the question of cutting down expenditure became so pressing as it now is?

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.—The following letter is published for general information:—Letter to the Director of Public Instruction—No. 859c, dated Aug. 5.—I am directed to forward for your information, and for notification to all concerned, the accompanying explanation of the rules relating to the civil service classes and the examination of candidates for civil appointments. 2. A similar communication has been addressed to the principal of the Hooghly College direct. Explanation: Students may be admitted to the civil service classes and examinations whether they are or are not eligible for the higher civil appointments. They may qualify by degrees for service either before or after the special examination—e.g., A. B. has passed the First Arts examination, but has not served Government. He attends the civil service classes, and passes the examinations in full. He is not at once eligible for an appointment on a salary exceeding Rs. 100 per mensem, but he is eligible for an appointment of Rs. 50 per mensem, and, after serving a year in that, he is eligible for any appointment.

INDIAN SURVEYS IN 1870-71.—II.

SIX Topographical Surveys were at work in 1870-71. They completed the mapping of 14,592 square miles. Up to 1871 the total area surveyed was 665,909 square miles, or three times the area of France. To this must be added the topographical work of the Trigonometrical Survey, and the work done in Madras and Bombay. One party under Lieutenants Strahan and Holdich surveyed 2,653 square miles of difficult country chiefly to the west of the Betwah river. Around Deogurh the country is full of interesting archæological remains, including many ruined temples remarkable for rich sculpture. At Iran, on the banks of the Bina which flows into the Betwah is a famous pillar, inscribed with one of King Asoka's numerous edicts, and supposed to represent the exact centre of the old empire of Hindustan. The hill country in Alwar is broken up into parallel ridges, with precipices 500 or 600 feet high, beneath which streams flow through rich jungle intermixed with palms. Many of the streams rise on one side of a ridge, and passing round the end of it flow back along the other side within a mile of their former course.

Colonel Saxton's party surveyed the Saora Hills hitherto unexplored, together with part of Jaipur and Panchipetta in the Vizagapatam Agency, an area containing 1,653 square miles of difficult and unknown country. Colonel Saxton also completed the triangulation of the Nilgiri Hills. In the north-eastern part of Bilaspur and Mandla, and in Sohagpur, Major Depree's party completed 2,667 square miles of survey. Sohagpur contains the famous plateau of Ummerkuntunk, whence issue the sources of the Narbada and the Són. Some interesting notes on this part of India and on the Gond and Baiga tribes who inhabit it were furnished by Mr. McGill. Captain Riddell's party were at work in Malwah and Bhopal. In Rajputana 3,551 square miles of "very intricate ground, clothed for the most part with heavy forest, and intersected with numerous avines," were explored by Captain Strahan, who also surveyed twenty square miles of Mount Abu. The progress of the Khasia and Garo survey was hindered by the death of Captain Melville a few weeks after his return to India. Captain Badgley, who afterwards took charge of the survey, was presently called away with Lieutenant Woodthorpe, and Messrs. Ogle and Robert, to accompany the Loshai Expedition. The result of their labours in this new field will no doubt form a valuable contribution to the geography of India's eastern frontier.

Of the new quarter plates of the Indian Atlas, eleven were engraved and published last year, making thirteen in all which have been engraved in India, besides twenty-one in various stages of progress. The native engravers and apprentices have made fair progress in an art which demands careful training. By the photo-zincographic process, 1,035 sheets have been turned out under Captain Waterhouse; and 526 lithographs of various kinds have been prepared under Captain Murray. New general maps of Oudh and Sind (sixteen miles to the inch) are nearly ready for engraving. A map of like proportions for the North-West Provinces has been lithographed, and so has one of the Eastern Frontier on a scale of three miles to the inch. A map of Orissa on a scale of twelve miles to the inch has been published for the Statistical Survey, and may now be seen in Dr. Hunter's "Orissa." In August, 1871, a committee was appointed by Lord Mayo to ponder a plan for the better prosecution of the Indian Surveys, and their attention was specially directed to the need of obtaining good maps in the shortest possible time. It was proposed to sketch out a regular plan of operations for not less than five years. It is reckoned that the 462,599 square miles still to survey may be got through in the next twenty years, and some addition is recommended to the engraving staff.

Of the Revenue Surveys, the Madras Survey is, on the whole, the most accurate, and its results are the best adapted to general use. Next in excellence comes the Bombay Survey, which is "perhaps the best for fiscal purposes." In the Punjab, alongside a professional survey of village boundaries and topographical features, a less accurate native system has been at work for field measurements. For the new survey required in the North-West Provinces, Colonel Thuillier has tried to secure the adoption of an accurate system, to the exclusion of rough native work. In the new cadastral survey of Muttra and Moradabad, on a scale of sixteen miles to the inch, the old system of field or khusrak measurements by professional surveyors has already been reintroduced.

In 1870-71 fifteen parties were at work in Bengal, and four in the Punjab. The Derajat party, under Colonel Johnstone, got through 1,560 square miles of inland and 2,330 of boundary survey in the Dera Ghazi Khan district. The Delhi Division party, which began work late, surveyed 450 square miles in Kurnál and 350 of interior details. Since 1863, the cadastral surveys in the Punjab have been conducted on a better system; but there seems to be no good reason why the field surveys should not be entrusted to professional officers alone, as they are in Madras, where no error greater than 1½ per cent. is tolerated.

In Madras the Revenue Survey has completed 41,043 square miles, leaving 77,601 square miles still to survey. In the Godavery, Kistna, Nellore, Trichinopoly, and Salem districts the work is finished; in Karnúl and Tinnevely it is approaching completion, and in several other districts it is making good progress. The survey of the hill settlements in the Nilgiris proceeds apace, and 41 square miles on the Sheravoy Hills have been surveyed and mapped. The Bombay Revenue Survey, however efficient for revenue purposes, appears to be useless for general purposes of mapping and geography. Nothing in its own way can be more thorough than the system introduced by Sir George Wingate in 1836, which takes careful note of the smallest details connected with every field, such as the colour, depth, and character of the soil, the nature of the water-supply, and so forth. But the usefulness of the system would be greatly increased, if the Survey were conducted on rigorously exact principles, so that the revenue village maps might be turned to account for geographical ends.

The Geological Survey has done some good work during the past year. The Mohpani coal fields and the Pachmari Hills were examined by Mr. Medlicott. Mr. Willson has been working among the trappean dykes and quartz reefs of Jhansi and Tehri. Mr. Mallet is examining the Kota coal-field extending from Mirzapore into Rewah and Chota Nagpúr. Mr. Hackett pursued his labours in the Jabalpúr district, where valuable iron ores have been found. Mr. Ball explored the very wild and roadless country south of Chota Nagpúr. Mr. W. T. Blandford mapped the coal-bearing rocks of the Godavery. From the borings made in them it seems that the coal they contain is poor and scanty. But a thick bed of coal has been found near Warangul, and coal may perhaps be found in the sandstone on the eastern side of the Nizam's dominions and in the direction of Ellór. Mr. Hughes examined the Warda coal-fields, where coal fifty feet thick has been discovered. It appears however that the coal will probably be only in small discontinuous basins. In examining the trap that overlies the coal-beds to the westward of the Warda valley, Mr. Fedden was laid up with the fever that hangs about those wild and unhealthy regions.

After Mr. Blandford had given advice at Bombay regarding the proposal to bring water thither through a tunnel in the solid rock, a proposal, we may add, already carried out, he was deputed to accompany Sir Frederick Goldsmid to Seistan, whence he will doubtless bring home much valuable information. Mr. King began his survey of the Toongabadra River, as far as Gulbarga, with a view to examine the rocks lying between the great beds of gneiss and other metamorphic rocks below and the vast thickness of the trap crust above. In examining the limestone series known as "the Bhima group," where it extends south-westward in the upper part of the Krishna Valley, Mr. Bruce Foote discovered the fossilised remains of a rhinoceros in the black cotton soil. Mr. Theobald's researches in the Arakan range of the Yoma tend to show the identity of the altered rocks near the centre of the range with the unaltered nummulitic rocks on their flanks. After working through the western part of the Salt Range in 1871, Mr. Wynne is now pursuing his researches northward of the range, as far as Attok. The fossils in this range were examined by Dr. Waagen, while Dr. Stoliczka, the palæontologist of the Survey, went to Kutch for a like purpose. The Records of the Survey for 1871 contain some very interesting papers, by several of the above-named gentlemen, to which must be added Dr. Oldham's sketch of the geology of the Central Provinces, and Mr. Wilkinson's paper on the geology of South Konkan.

With regard to the Archæological Survey, general Cunningham's first Report has not yet been received in England. Some glimpses, however, of work done are offered by Mr. Markham. In Bengal, Mr. Peppé, of the Opium Department, has completed his photographs of the Patna Division, which include the Great Temple at Budh Gaya, the sculptured caves in the Barabar Hills, the Son Bandar caves at Rajgarh, the pillars at Bakra and Lauriya, and the remains of the great Buddhist monastery of Nalanda. In Madras, Captain Lyon has been engaged upon a large set of photographs, and Dr. Hunter has been very successful in employing the pupils in his school of design to photograph temples and take casts of their sculpture. Major Goodwin Austen has followed up the papers by Dr. Hooker and Colonel Yule with a further account of the stone monuments of the Khasi hill tribes. It appears that the people continue to build these monuments at the present day. In Bombay, an excellent serial, called The Indian Antiquary, has been set on foot by Mr. Burgess. Among the papers in the early numbers is an article by Mr. Broadley, Assistant Magistrate at Patna, on the places in Magadha visited by Fa Hian in the fifth century. Professor Ramkrishna Gopal Bandorkar has contributed a paper showing the light thrown on the ancient geography of India by the writings of Panini and his commentators.

THE "ZUBBURDASTEE" RETIREMENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The publication of a final decision by Government as to retiring pensions has originated some fears and anxieties as to the working of such rules in different cases, and perhaps the best way to smooth away difficulties will be to make known in your paper—if you will permit it—the queries that will shortly be addressed to the India Office.

The undermentioned officers are unemployed; they may be called upon to take a pension, either the pension of their service, or the next higher pension, according to the judgment passed by some unknown authority on their past lives, and they wish to know how they stand:—

Case 1 is that of Captain Slasher, who bowled out the Quartermaster-General, Colonel Cockatoo, in the first, and caught him out in the second innings. This occurred in the match of Staff v. World, played last year at Annandale. Slasher, having overstayed his leave and lost his appointment, in what class will he be placed as to his misconduct being clear or distinct and undeniable, I mean towards the Quartermaster-General?

Case 2. Captain Chicore is unemployed, does not like regimental duty, is frequently on leave in the Hills. Chicore, however, sends in game steadily, when it is in season, to the table of the Artificial Commissioner. Now, will he be obliged to retire?

Case 3. Spot has no chance, he thinks, because ever since he came to the Club at Calcutta his superior play at billiards has quite upset the game of the Adjutant-General, Brag, and Brag could easily beat the other fellows, giving them ten, before Spot came there.

Case 4. When the former Commander-in-Chief lost his chil-lumchee, or brass basin, at Chorpoore, Lieut. Puckerow, the Cantonment Magistrate, recovered and restored it to his Excellency within four days, and for this service he holds a letter of thanks from the Military Secretary. But Puckerow could not pass the examination; so he lost the appointment, and comes under the head of mental inefficiency. But do you think the brass basin will save him?

Case 5. Then there is Brown, Madder Brown as he is called, who every year exhibits a painting in the Simla Academy which gains a prize before the pictures done by the hand of Sir Richard Tickle, Professor of Finance. Brown is out of employ, and is an idle fellow perhaps, yet his name ought to have been honourably mentioned at Chillianwalla, so the regiment always said. But remember that the regiment no longer exists, and Brown may not be judged so kindly now, for he is out of employ, and has been, ever since the Levy he fought with in Oude was disbanded.

Case 6. Nightlark thinks himself quite safe, though he left his regiment rather than report some mess conversation to the Colonel, and is unemployed, because Nightlark is good looking and sings, and his voice suits the soprano of Miss Screamer, daughter of the Sanitary Commissioner General, at whose house he is a frequent visitor.

I really cannot give you more cases to-day, but I may as well mention those of Stiff, who rented a house at Mussoorie, and would not give it up for another that leaked in rainy weather, merely to oblige the Bishop of Calcutta; of Tumtum, whose horse ran first in the Sonepore Derby, beating "Chukkur," the property of Mr. Diggles, that being the racing name of the Home Secretary; of that seemingly heavy fellow Plumber, who writes slashing articles in the Pioneer under the name of "Dogberry."

Consider how the conduct of any one of these gentlemen may be distorted into clear misconduct, and that by a tribunal which works in the dark and allows no open trial of the accused, but rather adds to the punishment of those who have been already sufficiently punished by a deprivation of staff pay and appointments.

Please advise these poor fellows, for the sake of your old friend, WATCHMAN.

OUR POSITION IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Much uneasiness has been felt of late by those who have friends and relatives in India, in consequence of the startling news of assassinations and outbreaks which has reached us from that country during the last twelvemonth. The Under Secretary for India intimated, it is true, in his speech in the House of Commons on the 6th of last month, that the Indian exchequer was in a flourishing condition, and that the people of India were perfectly contented; but not only were such assurances inconsistent with the news we had been receiving, but they were contradicted on the same day by the member for Brighton, whose statements, supported by references to the highest authorities, went to show that the finances of India had been most recklessly squandered, and were in an almost hopeless condition, and that the increased and oppressive taxation, which had to be resorted to of late, to make both ends meet, had created a strong feeling of discontent, which amounted to a political danger of very serious magnitude.

The debate of the 6th August therefore has tended to increase the uneasiness which had previously existed, and which can be allayed only by some more precise information on the actual state of things than the public possess at present. I am led in consequence to address you, in the hope thereby of inducing those who possess such information to bring it forward and assist in the formation of some definite and correct opinion on the subject. Late years have drawn India so much nearer to us, by intermixing the interests of the two countries, that the number of persons in England, whose welfare and happiness depend on the safety of our Indian Empire, is at present by no means inconsiderable. Thousands of Englishmen go out every year to seek their fortunes in India; thousands of families at home subsist on the earnings of relatives who are toiling in the East. Nearly two hundred millions of English capital are now invested in Indian Government Securities and railways, and many millions more are embarked in tea plantations, jute and cotton mills and other industrial undertakings. No serious calamity, under these circumstances, could befall our Indian possessions, such, for example, as the mutinies of 1857, without plunging millions of individuals at home into affliction or penury. It behoves us therefore to seek for correct information on the condition of things in India, and be warned of any danger that may exist there; and I trust that, in consideration of the importance of the subject to the greater number of your readers, you will allow this letter to appear in your valuable paper.—I enclose my card, and am, Sir, your obedient servant, DELTA.

THE RELIGIOUS QUESTION.

The Sumsher Bahadoor regrets that the policy of non-interference in the religious feelings of the natives of India, so strongly urged in the Queen's proclamation of 1857, is not so rigidly observed in the mofussil as it ought to be. If anything will rouse the dormant feeling of opposition of the peaceful Hindoos, it is the encroachment of Government into the sacred questions of religions. The rules and regulations framed by the old officers of Government for the observance of this essentially necessary principle show that they were aware of its true significance. That nobody was allowed to fish in the Saburmuddy river, where Hindoos generally performed their ablutions, is a matter insignificant in itself, but proves strongly the fact that the good old officers of yore respected the feelings of the natives of whatever nature they may be. Ancient monuments and graves were allowed to lie in peaceful quietness where they were, but now digging and clearing is the order of the day. At present old monuments, tombs, places of worship, shrines, &c., are pulled down without the least compunction or hesitation, and that too not with the consent or at least connivance of the proprietors or guardians, but in direct opposition to their urged representations. We can never believe that these acts of injustice are done by the express order of the rulers. On the contrary, we are certain that they are the direct results of the off-handedness and arbitrariness of under officers.

INDIAN TAXATION.

The Englishman, so far from thinking that the total revenue at present raised by the British Government in India is heavier than the country ought to bear, believes that the increase of wealth of late years has been proportionately immensely greater than the increase of taxation. It believes that to govern the country efficiently we ought both to raise and to spend more, and that the country could well afford to pay more. But a moderate revenue raised in a manner opposed to the habits of the people may be infinitely more oppressive than a much larger revenue raised in accordance with those habits. We have chosen to forego a large portion of our legitimate revenue—revenue which the people would have looked upon as our right, and the abandonment of which has conferred but a questionable benefit on a single and limited class; and we now seek to reconquer ourselves, not by means of other taxes which might be unobtrusively, almost insensibly levied, but by sending out an army of assessors and tax-gatherers to pry into every man's business, and to mulct the people in the most obnoxious way. We have no hesitation in saying that ten millions a year raised by means of direct taxation would be a much heavier burthen to the people of India than the whole of the present fifty millions of taxation. Yet Government officials, when called upon to state their views of the results of our system, actually estimate the two kinds of taxation according to the same standard, and endeavour to throw dust in the eyes of the public by comparing quantities, not in themselves comparable, without any reference to the qualities of the items that compose them.

SPELLING OF INDIAN NAMES.

The Englishman observes that the Government of India has, in fact, been imperatively compelled to arrive at uniformity, on one basis or another. After long protracted investigation, it has selected the method which is declared by all scientific bodies to be the soundest in itself; the method which the great standard histories and Keith Johnston's Map of India have adopted; but, above all, the method towards which educated public opinion has long been tending, and which educated natives now most readily accept. Putting aside all the weight of scholars in favour of the system, the Government of India may fairly claim to know which system is best adapted for its internal administration, and which will be practically most acceptable to the people. It should be remembered, however, that which ever scheme might have been adopted, the inherent inadequacy of our English alphabet to express the more copious Indian alphabets would render that scheme clumsy, and liable, under clever one-sided handling, to a certain degree of ridicule. All that can be done is to make the best we can of our insufficient means of representing Indian sounds, and this is precisely what the Government of India appears to us to have done. It has adopted the scientific system as its basis, the system which is now rapidly becoming the popular one in all standard Indian works; and it has modified that system to suit the English eye, by arranging that no familiar Indian name shall be changed so as to lose its identity, and that all words which have attained a popular or historical fixity shall be but very slightly altered, or remain altogether untouched. It is easy to raise a hundred objections to the plan, but impossible to propose a better one. By degrees the most persistent of its opponents have admitted this. Mr. Edward Thomas, the greatest authority who has been cited against it, recently came forward to declare that it seemed to him the best practical solution of the difficulty—indeed, the only one that could have succeeded. It is beside the question to make jests about the uncouth look which familiar words, such as the proper names in the Bible, would assume under this system. Such names have acquired a popular fixity to the English eye, and the system expressly provides that they should remain untouched. Equally needless is it to inquire how words like cool would look if spelt with a u, as cūl. It might as well be asked how, if familiar words were changed to the so-called popular method, Fulham would look as Foolhum, or rural as roorul. Such witticisms are beside the question, for the Government of India proposes to alter no words of absolutely fixed spelling. They only tend to import an undesirable tone into the discussion.

THE NEW RETIREMENT ORDER.

The Englishman remarks that the first part of the order is due to military financial embarrassment, and expresses a desire to save money. In such an order there is no reason why the motives should not be always in view. But what about the second part? What business have such motives to make an appearance there? Compulsory retirements are surely not made on the same grounds as extended privileges. We had supposed the former to be made on grounds of pure discipline, and that they were not governed by pecuniary reasons. Yet here we have these reasons mixed up with them, giving colour to the view that a man's capacity is to be measured inversely by the amount of his present pay or prospective pension, and that the gauge of a man's imbecility is his cost to the State. To us it seems to be absolutely shocking that any Government should give rise to such speculations; yet this order unavoidably does give rise to them. A measure which should be enforced only upon grounds of military efficiency, and which should then be applied most carefully, and to each case as it arises, is now involved in the military economies, in a manner which is either indecent or singularly unfortunate. And the result is that the acts of Government, which should be above suspicion, are tainted with doubts of the most sordid character. There is obviously a desire to save the pay of as many unemployed officers as possible. But is it possible that the number of imbeciles and incapables is so large as to make the saving of their salaries in the gross an important financial fact? If so, Government has neglected its duties in a manner incredibly shameful and scandalous. It cannot be believed, however, that this is the case. It is impossible that the distinguished men who have held, and continue to hold, the posts of Commander-in-Chief and Military Member of Council can have been so criminally careless. If they had, there is no question on whom compulsory retirement ought first to be enforced. That view, however, is untenable, and the inference is that imbeciles and incapables cannot have been overlooked in any large numbers, and that the amount of their pay is absolutely insignificant. What conclusion remains? There seems only one possible, and that one is painful to express—namely, that Government has deliberately determined to extend the scope of powers which should be exclusively confined to the furtherance of one object—the discipline of the army—for the purpose of reducing the cost of that army. If the fact that officers have to be paid is a presumption of unfitness, morally, mentally, or physically, few can be considered safe. Nor is the first part of the order free from doubt. It looks like a trap for the unwary. There is no security that an officer who has gone to the expense of removing to England, and setting up house, may not at once be ordered to India; and no mention is made of compensation in any form, not even that passages will be paid. He may be ordered out for some paltry duty, to undertake which may be pecuniary ruin. If he refuses, he must resign. The expression used is not "active service," the meaning of which is well known to all, but "active duty," which may apparently mean any form of employment. If the former is meant it is to be regretted that it is not said. In an order which, to individuals, may be of the most momentous kind, ambiguous expressions are cruel, and are likely, moreover, to defeat the very intention of the order itself. Without knowing the precise conditions of life which he is asked to choose, any officer would be unwise to make a selection. We have heard it openly stated that Government, having embarrassed itself by the present constitution of the Indian army, is determined to harass men till they resign in sheer despair. That such a statement should be possible shows the sort of confidence that the employed have in their employers. The present order is not calculated to allay such distrust, but to create a breach which only very reassuring explanations can repair; and unless it is seen quickly that the apprehensions now raised are groundless, it is impossible to say what time must elapse before confidence is restored.

SIR BARNES PEACOCK.—We hear that, on his appointment as a member of the Judicial Committee of her Majesty's Privy Council, a congratulatory address was forwarded to the (now) Right Hon. Sir Barnes Peacock, Kt., late Chief Justice of Bengal, by the Pleaders of the Appellate Side of the High Court. In a separate communication Sir Barnes has been requested to sit for his portrait to Mr. Grant, the well-known artist, the painting to be placed in the High Court in Calcutta. The cost of the portrait—viz., Rs. 3,500—is to be met by a subscription amongst the pleaders, of which the sum of Rs. 2,000 has already been subscribed.—Indian Public Opinion.

THE FEVER IN THE HOOGHLY DISTRICT.—From Mr. Bellew's report on the fever in the Hooghly district, published in the supplement to the last Calcutta Gazette, we find that the number of persons who received medical advice at eleven dispensaries, most of which were opened as late as November last, was 92,983, of whom 92,610 were cured, relieved, and discharged, and only 373 are returned as "supposed to have died." This gives one some idea of the extent of the fever, for there must have been a much larger number of sufferers, in all probability, who never attended the dispensaries at all, as the deaths from fever up to the 31st March last are estimated at 11,020. The total amount expended on special dispensaries up to May last was Rs. 2,948, an amount which seems but small in proportion to the quantity of work and risk of contagion imposed on the native doctors and their assistants. In connection with the fever in this district it is remarked that of "the two principal localities in which the disease is said to have held its ground, one is a tract of low country, traversed by sluggish and partially closed rivers, affording very bad water; the other is an open sandy tract, traversed by a fine river of good water running in a sandy bed. These facts," the Lieutenant-Governor says, "seems to suggest that the disease is not in the soil or in the water, but in some way unknown marches from place to place, not sparing localities least open to sanitary objections."—Englishman, Aug. 3.

PIRATES BEWARE.—We understand that a very creditable piece of work has recently been turned out by the Government Steam Factory at Kidderpore, in the shape of a small twinscrew steamer, which has been designed and constructed by the Chief Engineer for special duty at the Andamans. We are told that the engine-room space, which takes off considerably from the cargo carrying capacity of a steamer, has, in this instance, by a simple but ingenious arrangement of the boiler, been reduced to a minimum. By another novel contrivance, the jet of hot water that is rejected by the boilers, and jerked out at short intervals from the sides of all screw steamers, can, in the case of this vessel, be utilised for the purpose of giving a warm reception to any wild men or desperate convicts who might be tempted to visit her unannounced. We are not informed as to the calibre of range of this new piece of ordnance; but as we believe the charge is necessarily scalding hot, and that a continuous shower can be kept up ad libitum, we may safely assume that it will tell most effectually upon any suspicious bare back or bald pate that may have the misfortune to be near enough to become the object of its attraction. Had the Cashmere, that was recently attacked by the Arab pirates, been armed with two or three of these hot water mitrailleuses—one on the break of the poop, for instance—we venture to say that the breaking open of her quarter hatch, &c., would not have been proceeded with as coolly as it appears to have been. Even when the rascals were "shoving off" with their plunder, a liberal and well-directed charge from a gun of this description would at least have made their subsequent identification a very simple matter indeed.—Indian Daily News.

A NEW WAY OF SHOOTING TIGERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "PIONEER."

SIR,—I sent you the accompanying extract from a letter received lately from an acquaintance, in case you may agree with me in thinking it worth insertion. I do not however endorse the writer's idea: nor do I doubt that many of your readers will not consider his mode of fighting the noble animal as altogether sportsmanlike:—

"My dear—— * * You ought to take to the plan I have lately adopted of shooting tigers, or if you continue to follow up wounded tigers on foot, you will be sure to come to grief some day. My plan is this, I use the old Kentucky pea-rifle, 80-bore, which you may remember, and which I had with me in Texas and Colorado. Since then I got it converted into a breech-loader, and it now takes 3½ drams of powder, and a hollow picket nearly three diameters in length, made of thin steel and coated with platinum, to give it weight and enable it to take the rifling. There is a small screw-plug in the base which can be taken out and replaced by a screw-driver. The cases which, on account of the smallness of the bore, are very long, and the pickets I am obliged to get out from Springfield, Massachusetts, as there are none manufactured in England. There is no recoil from the heavy charge, as the barrel has such great weight and length, and the picket is comparatively light for its length. Well, the secret of my bagging to a certainty every tiger that I hit with a single bullet from this pea-rifle is this, that I fill up the hollow in the picket with 9 to 10 grains of strychnine of Scheele's strength. This is, I reckon, an overdose, as I believe one grain of this strength would kill a tiger; but I give him to the extent the picket will hold. With this bullet so prepared, as far as eventually bagging is concerned, it does not matter in the slightest degree in what part of the body you hit the tiger; all that is necessary is that the bullet penetrate the skin somewhere, and if you sit down and smoke your pipe, as I generally do after firing, you will find the animal lying dead in from ten minutes to an hour or so, according, I fancy, as to whether the picket breaks up at a large or a small vein. When found the tiger is frequently as stiff as if he had been shot two or three days previously. It is very curious to watch the effects of the strychnine, which appear to vary a good deal. On one occasion I came on a tiger that I had a few minutes before wounded in the fleshy part of the hind leg; he was standing motionless with his legs spread out like a four-legged stool, and panting like an express steam-engine. I did not mind going up to within a few yards of him, as I had my three-barrel breech-loader in my hand (this is a gun you have not seen, it has two ·12 bore barrels and one ·450 express barrel where the upper rib would have been, and is very little heavier than an ordinary double ·12 bore), but he nevertheless took no notice of me, although he must have seen me. I then went gradually nearer, but he never moved, and at last, not wishing to keep the beast in pain, I went up into a tree just above him, and punched a neat hole in his skull with a solid picket from the Kentucky. On several other occasions I have seen a tiger which I had wounded walking through the jungle apparently all right, but falling into convulsions whenever a twig or branch of a tree which he was passing under touched his back.

"To show you how infallible is this method of killing a tiger, I once fired at a tiger dashing across me at full tear, and made sure I had missed him; but the same evening after I had returned from shooting, a cowherd reported a dead tiger in the jungle where I had been. I instantly repaired to the spot by torchlight, for fear some dheers might eat him, and at once saw it was the tiger I had fired at. After at least half-an-hour's search for the bullet mark, we at last found the picket imbedded in one of the joints of his tail, within about one foot from the tip of it. I learnt this idea from an elephant hunter I met at Ntewe in Southern Central Africa; he told me he has frequently bagged elephants by this means at from 400 to 500 yards; but he used a very heavy rifle, and I fancy his shells would have held twenty or twenty-five grains at least. I had no opportunity of trying it there myself, as I had no means of obtaining strychnine. Of course if you take to my plan you must do as I do with every animal you bag, that is, collect dry wood and burn him the moment his skin is off, albeit to the great disgust of the villagers, many of whom are as fond of tiger's flesh as he sometimes is of theirs.

"SOLID BALL."

THE INDIAN PRESS.

Down to the year 1834 the press of India could not be said to have reached a point of public usefulness—taking the phrase in its widest acceptance. With slight exceptions it seemed to live only for the amusement and partial benefit of the European community. Native affairs—the internal administration of the empire—appeared to form no part of the editorial platform. Not that the conductors of the papers had not acquired a just estimate of the duties of the Fourth Estate, and possessed the means and probably the capacity to execute them; but the press was not set free, and none of the editors had travelled in the interior and established a sympathy with the millions. Lord William Bentinck exhibited a rare toleration of stricture, even though his own financial schemes were the main objects of the papers in the pay of the Army and Civil Service, and he had publicly called upon the planters, the zemindars, and all orders of independent society to communicate with him, freely and confidentially, on subjects which affected the welfare of the State; but he would not remove the regulations which legally bound the press hand and foot. The sword of Damocles was yet suspended over us, although he told me, at a private interview, that he should value the information and respect the commentaries of the Englishman on all questions relating to the administration of the Government, and would never put the laws in force against the press. Our position was anomalous and our sphere extremely limited. We had no correspondents in any part of the country, indeed none of the natives could read English, and the civil officers in the Provinces had too much to do to write on public subjects, and rather dreaded the consequences of being found out.

The ice was broken by the present Sir Charles Trevelyan. He was then a young Civilian and an Under-Secretary to Government. Confident in his powers, burning to give expression to his sentiments, and encouraged by Lord William Bentinck's spirit of toleration, he began a series of letters upon the great subject of taxation and legislation generally. He attacked the transit duties. He selected the Hurkaru, the oldest of the papers, and certainly the one which possessed the largest circulation, as the organ of his thoughts. Indophilus—the pseudonym Trevelyan adopted—was soon in every one's mouth. He encountered opposition from the older Civilians, and received support from those who shared in his experience and had adopted his views. The correspondence became a new, a most important and valuable feature of the journals. Putting aside all feelings of jealousy, the Englishman copied the letters of Indophilus, and soon came in for a large share of the communications. Many of the Civilians took up their pens; especially did the younger men enter into the controversy, for they had found out that criticism, based on knowledge, was a passport to gubernatorial favour. John Colvin, Henry Torrens, H. M. Parker, Harvey, Hamilton Mansell, and others, all recognised the Press as the expression of new ideas.

In other respects 1834 was an eventful year for the Press. The E.I. Charter had been renewed for a term, and the proceedings of the committees of the House of Commons which preceded the grant of a renewal came out in a printed form, and put us in possession of a large amount of knowledge of the affairs of the State in all branches of the administration, of which we had hitherto been lamentably ignorant. Coupled with this were the first movements in the establishment of a Medical College at Calcutta, and the opening of a steam communication with England via the Red Sea. The field had widened, and it was equally the duty and to the interest of the Press to discuss all these subjects with intelligence and independence. Still the editors worked with ropes round their necks. It was said, with as much truth as figure, that the conductor of a paper in Calcutta sat with the fearful Government Resolutions (they were not called "Acts" then) before him, the law of libel on his left hand, a case of pistols on his right hand, and society with all its whims, conditions, prejudices, and alarms behind him. It was a ship amidst breakers with no beam to keep it off the shore, and contrary winds fluttering its sails. It needed all the care and courage of the pilots to steer it safely.

Lord William Bentinck left India less regretted than he deserved. He had done more for the country than any of us knew; but he had terribly offended antiquated prejudice, and, worse than all, he had applied the shears to the incomes of officials, and half ruined the officers of the Army.

Sir Charles Metcalfe, who followed Lord William, at once secured a large amount of popularity (though he was always admired and respected, for he was of the Elphinstone school) by freeing the Press and abolishing the transit duties. A great incubus removed, the Press took a high and confident tone, and for the first time in its history became a real institution, to the great disgust of the East India Directors.—From Mr. Stocquer's Memoirs of a Journalist.—Times of India.

STATION TALK.

PUNJAB, Aug. 1.—The serious outbreak of cholera in the fort at Lahore, as well as something more than the usual number of cases in the filthy city of Lahore, has happened so early in the year that I am afraid they are in for a severe attack. It is remarkable that the men of H.M.'s 37th Regiment only have as yet suffered, the detachment of gunners and native infantry being as yet quite free; the former, however, have moved into camp with the 37th detachment, and at present fifteen privates of the 37th, and forty sepoy of the 24th P.I. guard the fort, which contains the whole reserve funds of the Bank of Bengal, besides endless stores of rum and gunpowder, from which you may judge that we feel tolerably at peace with the world. The cholera which has attacked the 37th Regiment is of the most virulent type, every case having ended fatally, whereas the cholera in the city has allowed about fifty per cent. to escape, and is, I believe, a separate type altogether. The last returns are, for the fort, seven deaths—two after moving into camp, but one of them was taken ill while marching out; and for the city sixty-eight cases, out of which thirty-three were fatal. It will be worth while to inquire rigorously into the origin of this cholera. In April there passed up the 22nd P. I. and a mule battery from the Loshai expedition, and the latter was halted some days outside the fort on account of cholera. The 22nd P. I. also lost several men on the way up. It is also a fact that a private of the 37th who went up to Rawul Pindie for employment on the traction engine died up there of that disease. As yet we have no news of cholera having broken out between Peshawur and Lahore (with the exception mentioned), but it is singular that Umritsur, which is generally liable to any attack of the kind going on, has so far escaped. It is also to be noted that no regiment of the Left—the infected—Column from Loshai halted there. Should it turn out that cholera was brought up from Bengal by the battery and 22nd P. I. it would help to prove the recent theory promulgated, that the Delta of the Ganges and neighbourhood is one of certain cholera centres. Meean Meer, the garrison town of Lahore, has so far entirely escaped, but great precautions are taken to avoid contact with the city and fort, and great credit is due to Dr. Hastings, the Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals, for the great energy he has displayed, and for his self-denial in at once coming down from Dalhousie on the first intimation of cholera breaking out in the vicinity. I am sorry from all I hear to be unable to say as much for the rest of the Meean Meer staff. Indeed, there is much that requires attention in that neighbourhood. Since the removal of the permanent Staff for Fort Lahore, the command has devolved upon the officer for the time being commanding the detachment of British troops, who receives no extra pay or allowances for the performance of a most responsible duty. The consequence is that a subaltern is generally in command, who may or may not be acquainted with the native languages, and it will be readily understood that it is nobody's business to care what goes on in the Fort. The detachments of course are constantly being relieved. The permanent Staff consists of a Sergeant Major and a Staff Assistant Surgeon, an officer who has twice failed to pass his examination for promotion, and may therefore naturally be supposed unfit for a position of any responsibility. Under such circumstances cholera of the most virulent type has broken out in Lahore Fort, and it is to be hoped that, as I have said, a most rigid inquiry may take place, and also that the economy of such wholesale reductions of establishments may be weighed against even the mere pecuniary loss of British soldiers by outbreaks of cholera. Is it economy in the long run? If the Fort is kept up at all, and there is no particular reason that it should be, except as an enormous "godown" of almost endless capacity—proper arrangements should be made for the troops who are placed in it. So much for the cholera for the present, and I shall be glad if there be no more to write about it. And now for the bridges, which, as you are aware, have mostly come to grief, so that our letters come at all times and hours. And here let me mention that neither the Postmaster-General of the Punjab nor the Sanitary Commissioner have thought it necessary to stir an inch from Simla, as though their lives were of any official value, and it was for them the Simla fight took place! Has not Major Bourke been made a Postmaster General, and was not Major Malleson Sanitary Commissioner for all India? But this in passing. The Sutlej Bridge has broken because that friend of the people, Lord Lawrence, would have it at Phillour, so as to be covered, as he said, by the Fort there—which is of as much use as a mound of earth—although the river, at that particular point, is the least suited for the construction of any bridge (but that to be counted in miles), and of course the Consulting Engineer agreed with the great "Lord Sahib"—the "Lion of the Punjab" and what not—and the bridge near Rupur, as planned, by the Railway Engineers, was given up. The bridge, or an alternate bridge at all events, will have eventually to be built there, or higher up still, for no one but the Consulting Engineer believes in the possibility of keeping the present one standing for any length of time, unless there is such further expenditure as would suffice to build another entirely new bridge at a narrower point where the change of course is less variable.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE CHOLERA AT KUSSOWLEE.—After hoping that cholera had disappeared from Kussowlee, we regret to learn that there were three more cases on Monday. One European and two children have been attacked, but none proved fatal.—Mofussilite, Aug. 7.

OPIMUM RATES.—The North China Herald in its news from Newchwang says that the rates for opium are unprecedentedly low, and the supplies large, owing to the competition of the native drug, which is sold at a much cheaper rate.

CHOLERA IN THE HILLS.—The cholera appears to be getting nearer to Simla, as several fatal cases are reported to have occurred amongst the natives at Kakarhati, and one coolie has actually had an attack in Simla itself, though it is said that he contracted the disease on the way up.

GUN CARRIAGE AGENCY.—By the retirement of Colonels Lewis, Bowie, and Voyle, the appointments of agents for gun carriages and gunpowder have become vacant. Colonel LeGeyt Bruce and Major Tierney are mentioned as likely successors to these offices.—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE CHOLERA AT DEYRAH.—We understand that cholera of a bad type is raging at Deyrah with such severity that it has been felt necessary, as a precautionary measure, to put a stop to all bazaar-traffic between that place and Mussoorie. The epidemic is interfering with the training of horses for the meeting.—Englishman.

COMPENSATION TO MR. FORSYTH.—It is said that the Government of India has sanctioned, subject to the confirmation of the Secretary of State, a compensation grant of Rs. 20,000 to Mr. A. D. Forsyth for the loss he sustained in being compelled to take sick leave to Europe by reason of illness affecting one of his eyes contracted during his mission to Yarkand.—Bombay Gazette.

BANK OF BENGAL.—Mr. H. Sandeman, C.S., has ceased to be a director of the Bank of Bengal, and Colonel Hyde, R.E., has been appointed in his stead. We hear that Mr. R. B. Chapman has also been withdrawn from the Direction, and that Mr. Mangles, who has already been officiating for some time as a director, will get Mr. Chapman's permanent seat.—Englishman.

THE INDORE RAILWAY.—The Englishman understands that Holkar's wishes have been met by the contractors of his railway, and that he has become a partner with Messrs. Hood, Winton, and Mills in their contract for the construction of the railway from Khundwa to Indore, notwithstanding all the advice given him by Major-General Daly, C.B., as to such a proceeding.

COMMUNICATION WITH SIMLA.—We hear that no little consternation has been caused at Simla by the report that the road from Kalka to Simla is stopped for passenger traffic on account of cholera. The camp equipage is in readiness at Kussowlee to move the men of the depot. The road into Jutogh will remain open for supplies.—Mofussilite.

PESHAWUR.—On the 1st August a very heavy storm of rain fell at Peshawur. About eighty native houses were utterly demolished, and one woman was drowned. Two villages, Nasurkundee and Kasumkundee, near Thana Taroo, were almost ruined. In Nasurkundee 12,000 rupees' worth of ghee was swept away. Four men also lost their lives in the floods.

CINCHONA.—We (Indian Daily News) hear that the post of Cinchona Analyst and Superintendent of the manufacture of Cinchona Alkaloids at Raungbee has been offered to Dr. B. Simson, Civil Surgeon of Patna, on a salary of Rs. 1,000 per mensem, with free quarters. The incumbent will probably have to reside permanently at Raungbee, and not at Darjeeling.

RHEA-FIBRE.—We understand that a competitive trial of the different machines for cleaning the rhea-fibre, with the view of awarding the munificent premium offered by the Government of India for the best invention, was to have been held at Saharanpur on Tuesday last. Colonel Hyde left Calcutta by Friday's mail-train to take his place among the judges.—Englishman.

THE ARMAMENT OF MOUNTAIN BATTERIES.—A committee, of which Colonel De Bude, R.A., is a member, is sitting at Simla to discuss the equipment and other arrangements of mountain batteries—an important question at any time, and the more so now that it is under consideration to convert all the artillery of the Punjab Frontier Force into mountain batteries.

A NEW COMMITTEE.—Mr. Batten as president, with Colonel Johnston, Captain Pye, Mr. Geoghegan, and Mr. Hollingberry, as members, form the committee appointed to consider the measures to be adopted for curtailing the expenditure attendant on the Viceroy's annual visits to Simla. The result of the committee's deliberations is to be submitted to Lord Northbrook on his return from Chini, when no doubt final orders will thereon be issued.

THE UNCOVENANTED.—The Europeans and Eurasians employed in the ministerial branches of the Uncovenanted Service at Allahabad are, we are informed, about to memorialise the Lieutenant-Governor to grant them a long vacation every year, similar to that enjoyed by their brethren of the judicial branch. Though entitled to privilege leave under the Uncovenanted Service leave rules, it appears that they do not often enjoy it, as the granting it is quite optional with the head of the office.

CHOLERA AT LAHORE.—For the week 29th July to 4th August inclusive, the cholera returns for Lahore and Anarkullee still show an increase. The number of cases was 76, the deaths 39. Cholera has appeared in several of the villages round, but not to anything like a serious extent, the total number for the whole Lahore district inclusive of the city, &c., being for the week 116, and the deaths 54. Among the fatal cholera cases last week were three European children.—Indian Public Opinion, Aug. 6.

A RUMOUR.—We hear that it is under discussion to make the retirement of military men at the age of sixty compulsory, as it already is in the case of civilians. Certainly, it will hardly be contended that war is so insignificant an affair that mental and bodily vigour is superfluous in those who conduct it. On the contrary, the most momentous duty, without any exception, which it is possible for mortal man to be called on to perform is to fight a critical battle; yet we too often leave this to be done by men who, if they were civilians, we should pronounce too old to be capable of declaring at the foot of a routine letter that they "have the honour to be."—Pioneer.

SCIENTIFIC.—Lord Northbrook has accepted the office of Patron to the Asiatic Society of Bengal. Since the formation of the Society in 1784 every Governor-General of India has held this office, with the exception of several years, when the Governors-General were the Presidents of the Society. Even Warren Hastings was for a few meetings President of the Association. The Royal Asiatic Society of London was founded by retired members of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, and founded, in its turn, the branches at Bombay and in Ceylon.

A WATERSPOUT AT ALLAHABAD.—On Saturday afternoon, about half-past five, a remarkable waterspout hung for about a quarter of an hour over Allahabad. It threatened every moment to fall, but a contrary current of air suddenly catching it, it quietly rolled itself up into the clouds and disappeared. The previous day was the great snake-poojah, and as this waterspout looked curiously like a huge snake hanging down from the sky, the natives were filled with superstitious awe, and naturally looked upon it as an answer to prayer. Poojah to the heavenly visitor was very fervent; and the Brahmans will probably have reaped a splendid harvest.—Pioneer.

MR. G. CAMPBELL.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, attended by his staff, and accompanied by Mr. Bernard, Mr. Schalch, Mr. Crawford, &c., proceeded by a special train on the Eastern Bengal Railway yesterday morning at seven o'clock for the purpose of opening the Bagula Bridge, which was partially swept away by the floods last year. The official inspection of the bridge was made on Wednesday last. After opening the bridge, his Honour was to proceed to Goalando, being joined on the way by the magistrates of Kishanganj and Faridpore, and met at Goalando by the Commissioner of Dacca. The party were to breakfast at Kishanganj, and lunch at Goalando, returning by special train in the evening.—Englishman, August 3.

THE BRAHMO LADIES WON'T GO TO CHURCH.—For some time past seats have been reserved for ladies and their male relatives in the Brahma Mandir. It was given out at the time, when the arrangement was first made, that the seats were short of their demand, as many ladies were likely to come. But we have been sadly disappointed. There are only two or three ladies and as many little girls who have availed themselves of the privilege which was so hotly contended for; and it is really painful to find that while every part of the spacious hall and the galleries is over-crowded, the seats for the "emancipated" members of the female congregation are mostly unoccupied. Most people think, perhaps rightly, that the number of truly devout ladies amongst the "emancipated" is small and insignificant. We hope, however, the ground of complaint will be soon removed.—Indian Mirror.

THE WEATHER IN BENGAL.—From the district reports for Bengal for the week ended the 3rd of August it appears that seasonable rain has fallen over some part of the Burdwan Division, though more was still wanted in most parts, and rice was rapidly rising in price. In the Presidency Division the prospects have been improved by rain, but the jute crop in Naddia has suffered severely from caterpillars. In Rajshahi rain has generally fallen, but some injury has been done to the silkworms, the rain having come on just as they were ready to spin. In Kuch Behar more rain was still required. In most parts of the Sacca Division a good deal of rain has fallen, but in some districts more would be acceptable. In Chittagong the reports of the crops are favourable, as in Patna, Bhagalpur, and Assam. In Chota Nagpur more rain was wanted, and from Orissa the reports are more favourable.

CHOLERA AT MEEAN MEER.—We regret, though are not surprised, to hear that cholera has appeared in the 37th Regiment at Meean Meer, and as a precautionary measure the corps has been divided into (three, we believe) detachments, one of which left last evening by special troop train, to proceed some twenty miles towards Mooltan. There have as yet been only a few cases, and they were not of the most virulent type, up to the time of the detachments leaving Meean Meer. The Major-General will not leave the head-quarters of the division for the present, and we regret to hear that several officers who had put off obtaining leave until the last two months have been disappointed, but we hope that with a break of fine weather all danger will disappear, and things go on as usual. The Artillery and native infantry are rather better in health than usual. The married people of the 37th are sent to Shalimar, and the others to Hullokee and Niazbeg.—Indian Public Opinion.

SINDHIA'S CAMP OF EXERCISE.—A correspondent of the Mosul-silite says (Gwalior, 5th August):—"I promised in my last to give you further particulars about the doings at the camp of exercise. I am glad to fulfil my promise as your faithful correspondent. The plain which was selected for the camp was mentioned in my last, but nothing took place there, except that a consultation was held regarding the proposed defence and attack. His Highness the Maharajah, with his column of troops, entered the capital to garrison his palace round the kumpoo, and the enemy's troops, under the command of the Maharajah's General and Dewan, as well as his State Sardars, commenced the attack on the 1st instant. It was an interesting sight to witness the affair, as column after column advanced upon the palace, but the superior tactics of the Maharajah triumphed, and the enemy, though led by the Brigadier, who is experienced in military tactics, was, after a desperate resistance on the part of the garrison, successfully repulsed and driven in confusion, and thus terminated the camp of exercise."

THE CAMP OF EXERCISE.—In our first number, in announcing the formation of the Camp of Exercise at Hussan Abdul, during the ensuing cold weather, we mentioned Generals McMurdo and Tylor as having been spoken of for divisional commands. We have since heard the name of General Macdonell, commanding the Allahabad Division, mentioned also. Without any disparagement to General McMurdo, who has no need of a second opportunity of establishing the well-earned reputation he attained at Delhi—we trust that this will prove to be the case—and as we believe it is the wish of the Commander-in-Chief to extend these opportunities as far as possible to all officers in active employment, we may expect an entirely new cast of characters in the "dramatic personæ," with the exception of course of the "General Staff." We have little doubt that General Macdonell will prove a worthy successor of the gallant General, and that he will carry into practice in the field the tactical ability we are informed he has exhibited in a work on the subject which is now in the press, and which we are assured will be a valuable addition to our military literature.—Civil and Military Gazette.

CHOLERA AT ALLAHABAD.—I beg to inform you that cholera is doing its fearful work in the 2-19th Regiment. Within the last few days we have lost the armourer sergeant, six privates, two women, and four children—three of the latter belonged to the same family (Eagers). One of the women was poor Mrs. Jackson, of whose acting at the Regimental Theatre on Monday last you spoke so well. There are now seventeen cases under treatment in the cholera ward. Seven of them occurred on the evening and during the night of the 10th instant, the sergeant-major and six sergeants included. Until Saturday there was only one assistant surgeon to combat with all these cases—Surgeon Ashton—Assistant Surgeon Dickson being on the sick list. A and C companies have left barracks and gone under canvas on the Cawnpore-road, six miles away. Every one thinks it strange at the number of sergeants being struck down. General Macdonell visited the cholera ward yesterday, and cheered the men up every way he could, informing the sergeant-major that he had received authority to have him examined for a commission. Every block of the buildings has been attacked. All are speaking of the praiseworthy way in which poor Dr. Burford performed his trying duty, day and night, almost without intermission. Just as I am writing the Commissariat Sergeant has been carried to hospital, and a private who was admitted into hospital a few days ago with fever has just been carried off to the cholera ward.—"Y" in Pioneer, Aug. 12.

THE JOUDHPORE REBELLION.—JOUDHPORE, July 30.—The all-engrossing topic here is the rebellion of Maharaj Konwur Zorawur Singh, and the departure of his Highness the Maharajah to quell the ostensible rebellion. His Highness is still at Burloo, a village twenty coss from this city, and it is stated that he will remain there a couple of days longer and then proceed to Asoph, where the tillately ostracised thakoor will fete him, and arrangements will be made to push on the camp to the vicinity of Nagore, where the Maharaj Konwur is with a large force. The eldest prince and brothers, with their horses and men, left this about midnight of the 28th, to join the camp of their father. For the present these are the arrangements. It is currently reported that the Maharajah is firmly bent on having no fight, and that his taking arms, guns, and ammunition is but a blind. The rumour has almost reached the climax of a truth that Zorawur Singh has taken possession of Nagore with the secret consent of his father, and that the old gentleman found no other means of satisfying the claims of his second son than by resorting to this covert means. Had the Maharajah assembled his chiefs at Joudhpore, and communicated to them his wish to provide for Zorawur Singh during his lifetime, by giving him an independent jagheer of good revenue, it is supposed that the heir-apparent would have opposed his wishes, and prevented the Maharajah from carrying out his purpose. When I say there will be no fighting or bloodshed, I write advisedly, as his Highness has taken out four queens with him, and it is rumoured here that he purposes to go with his queens without his forces, and obtain admission into Nagore from his son, where, after a sham hearing and subsequent consultation with his thakoors who have accompanied him, he will confirm Zorawur Singh in the possession of Nagore. Moreover, this is borne out by the fact that the troops and others have only received a month's, and, in many cases, fifteen days' pay, while to them in many instances six months', twelve months', and two years' pay is due, so that it is not likely men would be asked to fight and submit to slaughter who have not provided for their families; at all events this is not an Asiatic idea. Thakore Manjee, the maternal uncle of Zorawur Singh, the prime mover of this rebellion—if you like to so term it—a man of intelligence, very shrewd, and of a determined character, came a couple of days ago to speak to the Political Agent on this subject. The Raj authorities were apprised of his arrival and sought means to arrest him; but he was too sharp for them, and his riding camel took him away beyond their reach. He did not, I understand, have an interview with the Political Agent; but no doubt he must have communicated the object of his visit. What confirms me further in the belief that there will be no war is that the Maharajah did not pay the troops of the eldest Prince for this expedition ; in fact it is publicly stated that the Maharajah told the eldest Prince to obtain the consent of the Political Agent before leaving Joudhpore, and that when the permission of the Political Agent was sought for by the eldest Prince, he was referred to his father. Certainly your editorial, in your issue of the 23rd July, anent this affair, amused me not a little. I had to relate the Bible narrative of Jacob and Esau to a great many, who being natives knew nothing of our Scriptures, and insisted on my giving them the story entire. I wonder what sage could have treated Tukht Singh to this narrative. Perhaps in his recent trip to Aboo some kind Christian consoled him with this story, or perhaps during his leisure moments at Joudhpore, while lamenting the discord in his family, this narrative may have been put before him, and probably he thought he might do something of the same sort, and thus appease all. Be it what it may, I am confident that there will be no war ; besides, I am informed that Thakore Manjee possesses documents written by his Highness which would prevent him incurring the consequences of a war.—Correspondent of the Pioneer.

Madras.

CIVIL.—Mr. L. R. Burrows, of the Madras Civil Service, has obtained a reward of Rs. 2,000 for having passed with distinction in Tamil.

MILITARY.—Colonel Roe having resigned the Adjutant-Generalship of the Madras Army, the duties of that appointment are being temporarily fulfilled by Colonel Longcroft.

A VESSEL LOST.—The brig Mudd Murtuja, of Coconada, has not been heard of since leaving Moulmein. She is a vessel of about 200 tons burthen, commanded by Captain Middleton, of the late brig Teak. She left Moulmein on or about the 6th April last, with a cargo of timber bound to Madras. Her crew consisted of about twenty-five or thirty natives, all of them belonging to Coconada. Captain Middleton's family are residing at Vizagapatam.—Madras Mail, Aug. 3.

LITERARY.—The English Committee, for the reconstruction of the Strasburg Library, lost during the siege of the city, are endeavouring to obtain donations of books published in Southern India for this purpose. A collection of publications in Canarese, Tulu, and Malayalam has already been offered, we learn from the Madras Mail, but no steps have hitherto been taken with regard to Tamil books which would, it is stated, be very acceptable. Mr. A. Burnell, esq., and Mr. G. Stolz, of Mangalore, will be happy to receive donations.

COCHINEAL IN MYSORE.—A successful experiment has at last, it appears, been made by Colonel Boddam to cultivate the cochineal insect in Mysore. The insects were sent out through the Foreign-office from Teneriffe, but not until official pressure had been put upon the local authorities. Since their arrival they have been fed on the cactus cochinillipee, and have now commenced breeding. Colonel Boddam is preparing a plantation of this description of cactus to increase the cultivation of the insect for the Government, which ought to derive a good profit from the speculation. This, we are told, is the first experiment for the introduction of the insect that has succeeded, though attempts have been made for the last hundred years.

INDIAN NEWSPAPERS.—The Madras Athenæum says:—"Government should utilise newspapers to a greater extent than they do at present, as a means of communication between themselves and the public. As we mentioned in a recent article, the people have a right to be fully informed of the doings of their servants, the Government. The relation existing between rulers and ruled is too frequently misunderstood. Strictly speaking, no proceedings of Government are private. They are the property of the public. The exercise of a certain amount of discretion on the part of the Government is, of course, necessary, but we maintain that, as a rule, they cannot communicate too much information to the public if they desire to retain the public confidence."

THE KING OF SIAM'S PRESENTS.—The Madras Standard gives some curious information relative to some presents made by the Queen to his Majesty of Siam, and by his Majesty of Siam to the Emperor of Austria. The former were, as despatched from London, a jewelled scimitar, a collection of atlases and geographical works, a coloured picture of the Royal Family of England, a clock with a revolving globe dial, a supply of stationery stamped with the King's arms, a pair of pistols silver-mounted, and some books, but when received at Bangkok the books, paper and picture were spoilt with sea water, the pistols were gone out of their holsters, and the clock was broken. Finally, the scimitar, there being some confusion in the matter, was returned! Not long afterwards his Majesty sent to Austria a number of Orders of the White Elephant, some set in diamonds, for the ministers of state, in commemoration of the treaty of commerce lately agreed upon. In transit many of the Orders were stolen.

THE BANK OF MADRAS.—The affairs of the Bank of Madras, as set forth at the late annual meeting of the proprietors, are creating a good deal of discussion. The confidence entertained by the public some time ago in the management of the Bank is considerably shaken, and the result of the late meeting has tended to increase that want of confidence rather than, as was hoped by those interested in the management, to restore it. The losses which the Bank has sustained, the unsatisfactory statement of accounts presented at the late meeting, the greatly reduced dividend, and the gradual, but serious and heavy decline in the value of its shares, together with the reticence which the directors persist in observing with regard to all these matters, are good and sufficient grounds for dissatisfaction. The appointment of a committee of investigation, composed of qualified and independent members, to look into the Bank's affairs and report thereon, is the best way of dealing with the matter and the only way which can be satisfactory to the general body of shareholders. We should be glad to see the directors inviting the shareholders to appoint a committee to look into its affairs.—Madras Athenæum.

THIRTY-FOUR YEARS AT SCHOOL.—The Once a Week in the Madras Times Weekly Supplement says:—I have a little anecdote for you. The other evening I was driving with a friend, who took me (he had some flying call to make) to an out-of-the-way corner of Madras which I had never explored before, named Sullivan's Gardens. Heaven help me, but I did not see the vestige of a garden anywhere, but instead of that a grave lantern-jawed company of native young men in turbans, with big books under their arms, and their learning literally oozing out of their skin. As my friend made his call I accosted one of these dusky votaries of Minerva. "What's your name," I asked of a grey-headed personage. "Habakkuk Mephibosheth," he placidly answered. "Oh, indeed," I replied, "and I say, then, who are you?" "Sar," he said, "I am an ishchool boy." I confess I was somewhat flabbergasted, but at length picked up courage to inquire, "I presume you have only just now in advanced life begun to give attention to your education?" "Oh, no, Sar," he replied hurriedly, as if he desired to uproot so discreditable an impression from my mind, "I have been ishchool boy thirty-four years, Master, and the Missionaries, they very good, you honour, and I going up to Matriculation next year, Sar." Here is my anecdote for you, Mr. Editor, and if any of your readers think it a cock and bull story, I would advise them to drop the new Principal of Sullivan's Gardens Seminary a line and ask him whether or no he has a "student under him" who professes to have been at school, under the liberal care of S. P. G. Missionaries, for thirty-four years.

THE VOYAGE OF THE "BERTRAM RIGBY."

The ship Bertram Rigby, Captain N. W. Rutter, one of Bates's liners, reached Bombay harbour on Monday last. She left London on the 9th April, and experienced fine weather until about four A.M. on the morning of Monday, June 24, when the ship was in lat. 40 deg. S., long. 24 deg. E.; the barometer fell rapidly, and appearances indicated the approach of severe weather. The captain gave orders to make all snug, and the men went aloft for the purpose of taking in sail. While the men were on the foresail-yard taking in the foresail, the wind shifted suddenly round to the N.W., and commenced to blow a complete hurricane, without scarcely any previous warning. The captain at once gave orders to brace the yards up, to bring the ship to the wind, and reefed the spanker. At 9.30 A.M. a fearful hurricane was raging, with a tremendous sea. The lower fore and main topsail gave way, the foresail blew to pieces, the upper topsails were blown adrift, reset themselves and blew to pieces, tearing the yards from the mast, and bringing them alongside the ship. The inner jib and main topgallant sail also blew adrift during the hurricane and were lost. Shortly before ten A.M. a tremendous sea swept over the ship from the port side, washed overboard the chief officer, Mr. W. Nagle, and two seamen, knocked most of the crew about the decks, injuring several severely. The second officer escaped being washed overboard in a most miraculous manner. He was standing on the poop when the sea struck the ship, and washed over the skylight, and through the railings on to the starboard side. Luckily, one of the iron stanchions which had supported the railing caught the collar of his coat, and stayed his further progress, although at the time he was fairly overboard, as the force of the sea had caused the vessel to heel over to a dangerous extent. However, when the vessel righted, he managed to get on deck, saved, but severely knocked about. It was impossible to render assistance to the three poor fellows who had been washed overboard, and neither were seen again; one of the crew had his leg broken, and one of the men at the wheel was dashed against the companion ladder, and had his right arm dislocated. The captain had left the deck but a few minutes before the wave broke, to look at the barometer. The sea made a clean sweep of the poop, carrying away three boats, the companion ladders poop rails, harness, casks, &c., and shifting the anchors. The cabin skylight was dashed in, and tons of water rushed down below, filling the cabin and damaging most of the stores. Orders were given to cut away the lower fore topsail and both main topsail yards, to save the ship. At noon of the same day the gale was still raging. It continued with unabated violence until about nine P.M., when the weather moderated and the main topmast staysail was set and reefed, and the fore topmast staysail. The next morning all hands were employed in clearing away the wreck, the weather having considerably moderated. The bulwarks on the port side, although of iron, as the ship is built of iron, just about amidships, are bent in by the force of the sea for some distance, and the iron stanchions supporting them are all more or less forced out of their positions. The sea which struck the vessel is described as being truly terrific, and the only wonder is that more damage was not done. Two of the men who were hurt were sent to hospital yesterday. During the hurricane all behaved admirably, and nothing was spared to ensure the safety of both crew and vessel.—Times of India, August 18.

Miscellaneous.

THE HINDOO COUNCILLOR.—Almost all the native newspapers of this Presidency approve of the nomination of the Hon. Narayan Wassoodew to a seat in the local Legislative Council.

KURRACHEE.—The Governor in Council has been pleased to declare Kurrachee and Aden to be ports from which native passenger ships may depart or proceed on a voyage to ports and places in the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf.

FLOODS IN SURAT.—It is reported in Surat that the shrine of Jagannath, together with the village in which it was situated in that district, have been carried away by a flood, and the orthodox Hindus predict some dreadful disasters in consequence.

THE BOMBAY COUNCIL.—The new members of the Bombay Legislative Council are Mr. J. K. Bythell (of Messrs. Gaddum and Co.), Mr. Narayan Wassudewjee (a prominent member of the Bench of Justices), and the young Chief of Meeruj (one of the Meean Sirdar). The retiring members are Sir David Sassoon, Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, and the Chief of Koorundwarkur.

SIND.—Official accounts from Upper Sind report the visit of "myriads of locusts" in the Shikarpore districts. They were met with on the 27th of last month in the Chung Dhand, and reports from Ghoteki state that numbers of them passed through that taluka, coming from the north and going towards the south. The Magistrate of Sukkur also reports, under date the 27th ult., that "from about four P.M. to dark a flight of locusts were passing over Sukkur," without, however, doing much damage within the limits of the Sukkur municipality.

MESS DEFALCATIONS.—We regret to hear that the Commander-in-Chief, Bombay Army, has decided that the defalcations in the mess accounts of the 3rd Bombay N.L.I. are to be made good by Colonel Scott, commanding the regiment, who neglected to call a mess meeting for three years. The amount to be refunded is Rs. 20,000, besides which Colonel Scott is to lose the command of the corps. The punishment is the more severe as Colonel Scott has a large family, and the late Captain Kennedy, the mess secretary and assistant, was his son-in-law.—Pioneer.

A NEW SOCIETY.—An agricultural society, to be called "The Bombay Presidency Agricultural Society," composed of influential gentlemen, has been lately organised in Bombay. The object of the society is to diffuse agricultural knowledge amongst the people in the Bombay Presidency by establishing a journal and issuing separate tracts on agriculture in Marathi and Gujarathi, and, if convenient, by founding schools for the purpose. The object of the society is a noble one, and is calculated to do immense good to the people.—Bombay Gazette.

MURDER OF A CHILD FOR ITS ORNAMENTS.—On Thursday last at the High Court, Appellate side, before the Hon. Mr. Justice Lloyd and the Hon. Mr. Justice Kemball, the Queen v. Bickya bin Narayan Shett was disposed of. In this case the accused was charged with the murder of one Tookeram, a boy about seven years of age, at Mirjoli, a village in Chiploon Talooka of the Rutnagherry district, on or about the 13th June last, to which charge the prisoner pleaded guilty. It appears that the child was the son of one Narayan Kokati, a Vani by caste. The child was carried away by stealth to the temple of Pandoba, there stripped of its ornaments, of the collective value of Rs. 40, thrown down, and stoned to death. The murderer then took the ornaments and buried them in a well in the town of Chiploon. The police suspecting the prisoner, who was often seen about the house where the child dwelt, charged him with the commission of the crime, and he confessed the whole affair, charging one Gopal Sinda with being an accomplice in the crime. The latter was also arrested, but there being no evidence whatever adduced against him he was discharged. The Judges of the Appellate Court reviewed the records of the proceedings, and confirmed the sentence of death passed upon Bickya bin Narayan Shett by H. Birdwood, Esq., Acting Sessions Judge of Rutnagherry.—Times of India.

C. BACON, Colonel, President.

Cawnpore, July 13.

Confirmed.

NAPIER OF MAGDALA, General, Commander in Chief in India.

Head-quarters, Simla, July 24.

It was the duty of Col. Alexander to have placed Capt. Lindsay in arrest the moment he was convinced that that officer was in a state of intoxication.

Serious omission was made in not calling on Lieut. Burton for his testimony as to the condition of Capt. Lindsay during the time when he was in command of H.E. the Viceroy's escort.

No ground is afforded in the recorded proceedings for the condemnatory remarks, in the prosecutor's reply, on the evidence given by Lieut. Anson and Lieut. Maurice for the defence.

Such observations were quite beyond the proper limits of a reply, and, as far as is shown in the record of the evidence, were unjustifiable.

MADRAS WATER SUPPLY PROJECT.

The Government of India having fully taken into consideration the subject of the water supply to Madras, and with special reference to the assurance given by the local Government to the Madras municipality that a larger sum than Rs. 32,000 will not be demanded from them for their water supply, have come to the conclusion that it would not be advisable to demand anything in excess of that amount. They have consequently requested the Secretary of State to accord sanction to the scheme on the basis of eight lakhs out of the total expenditure being allowed to be finally charged against loan funds, the balance still required to complete the project being met in the first instance from the same source, but to be repaid by annual instalments of one lakh of rupees each, one-half of each instalment being met from the ordinary grants to the local government for agricultural works, and the other by a reduction of the provincial assignments to that extent.

In making the above recommendation, the Government of India remark that they are fully aware they can only submit it as an exceptional arrangement; but, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, they do not see any other course open without crippling the Public Works operations of the Madras Government for some years to come.

JUDGESHIP OF BEERBHOOM. RESOLUTION.

July 23.—The Government of India has sanctioned, subject to the approval of his Grace the Secretary of State for India, the Lieut. gov.'s proposal to appoint to the vacant judgeship of Beerbhoom a judge on a diminished salary, equal to that of a first grade magistrate and collector, and to appropriate the saving of Rs. 7,000 per annum thus effected to raise the pay of the magistrates and collectors of two of the chief districts in Bengal by an extra allowance of Rs. 3,500 a-year each.

2. Mr. E. C. Craster, now officiating judge of Beerbhoom, being a permanent judge, will revert to his substantive appointment at Gya, and the Lieut. governor is pleased to make the following arrangements under the provisional sanction accorded by the Government of India:—

Mr. S. H. C. Tayler, at present officiating judge of Gya, is appointed to be judge of Beerbhoom in the second grade, and to be also additional judge of Bardwan. He will draw pay equal to that of a magistrate and collector of the 1st grade, or Rs. 23,000 per annum.

Mr. Tayler is not, however, to leave Gya until relieved by Mr. Craster, and Mr. A. B. Falcon is appointed to officiate as judge of Beerbhoom, second grade, and additional judge of Bardwan, until the arrival of Mr. Tayler at Beerbhoom.

Messrs. W. LeF. Robinson and A. V. Palmer, the two senior magistrates and collectors employed in the executive branch of the service, who are also magistrates and collectors of large and important districts, will receive the extra allowance of Rs. 3,500 per annum each, saved from the pay of the judgeship of Beerbhoom. This allowance will cease if these officers are employed in the judicial line, and is for the present altogether provisional and liable to be withdrawn, if the Government may deem such a measure for any reason advisable in the interests of the public service.

Mr. E. E. Lewis is promoted to the first grade of magistrates and collectors, in succession to Mr. Tayler.

All these appointments and allowances will take effect from the date on which Mr. Craster reverts to his permanent appointment.

3. It is to be clearly understood that Mr. Tayler's appointment to Beerbhoom, the extra allowance to Messrs. Robinson and Palmer, and the promotion of Mr. E. E. Lewis, are only conditional on the approval of the Secretary of State, and that any increase drawn by the three last-named officers must be refunded if that approval be withheld.

THE PURDHAN COURT AT RAJCOTE.

The following papers, with reference to the establishment of a Court for the purpose of settling disputes between the chiefs of Kattywar and their subordinate Girassias have been placed at the disposal of the press:—

From C. U. Aitchison, Esq., C.S.I., Secretary to the Government of India, to C. Gonne, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bombay, dated Simla, July 2.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated April 3, with which you forwarded papers relating to the establishment of a Court for the purpose of settling disputes between the chiefs of Kattywar and their subordinate Girassias.

2. After careful consideration of the proposals signed and accepted by the first and second class chiefs of Kattywar, H.E. the Viceroy and Governor general in Council is of opinion that they are well calculated to meet the necessities of the case. They appear to H.E. to secure the maximum of protection to the Girassias with the minimum amount of interference on the part of the British Government with the rights and jurisdiction of the chiefs. They are, moreover, especially recommended by the fact that they are unanimously agreed to by the heads of the principal States in Kattywar.

H.E. observes that the scheme advocated by the Bombay Government strikes at the root of all further dissension by providing for a survey of the estates and a settlement of the rights in land of the subordinate Girassias. If this proposal is fairly and equitably carried into effect, it will, H.E. is satisfied, do more to introduce peace and good order in the disturbed territory of Kattywar than any other that could be devised. The Viceroy in Council is of opinion that the settlement would probably be received with more confidence if it were carried out by British officers rather than by the officials of the chiefs, who are directly interested parties. H.E. has, however, no desire to object to the scheme on this ground; but I am to suggest for the consideration of the Governor in Council that, if possible, the superintendent of settlement, who is to be appointed and paid by the durbars, should be a British officer of some standing and experience in survey and settlement work.

4. The Governor general in Council agrees with the Bombay Government that the objection of Colonel Anderson, Political Agent in Kattywar, to the definition of Moolgirassia contained in the rules as not being sufficiently large, is adequately met by the provisions of the proposed rules authorising the Court to take cognisance of cases on the part of Girassias against their chiefs where the rights litigated are similar in nature to those of Moolgirassias. Colonel Anderson's objection to the constitution of the proposed Court appears to H.E. to be also sufficiently met by the arguments advanced in paragraph 10 of your letter under reply.

5. There is, however, one point upon which I am to request that further information may be afforded. The proposed scheme is accepted by the chiefs of the first and second class in Kattywar, but it is not apparent from the papers forwarded whether it is intended to apply to their estates only or to Kattywar generally. There are in all seven classes of chiefs in Kattywar, who have jurisdiction more or less extensive, besides a considerable number who have no jurisdiction at all. H.E. in Council desires to be informed whether it is intended that the jurisdiction of the new Court shall be limited to the first and second classes only, or be extended to the seven classes who have jurisdiction, or, finally, to those also who have no civil power, and in regard to whom the Agency Courts have hitherto exercised jurisdiction. If to the first and second classes only, I am to request that it may be stated in what Court jurisdiction over the remaining five classes is to vest.

6. Subject to explanation upon this point, I am to convey the approval of H.E. the Viceroy in Council of the proposals made by the Bombay Government. H.E. considers that it might perhaps have been better if the nature of the control provided for by Rule 20, which is to take the place of appeal from the decision of the Court, had been more clearly indicated. It is not apparent whether this control is to be exercised only during the trial of a case or also after the decision has been given. But this, H.E. presumes, can be hereafter provided for by the subsidiary rules to be framed under Rule 13.

7. The scheme will, as proposed by the Bombay Government, be tried for a period of three years.—I have, &c.,

C. U. AITCHISON,
 Secretary to the Government of India.

Simla, July 2.

RESOLUTION OF GOVERNMENT.

Copy should be forwarded to the Political Agent, Kattywar, who should be requested to communicate to the chiefs concerned the sanction of the Government of India to the arrangement proposed by them for the settlement of claims of the subordinate Bhayads and Moolgirassias in the Kattywar States.

2. The Political Agent will observe that there are points regarding which the Government of India desires further explanation. He should submit his views on those points, but this should not delay the immediate adoption of measures for practically carrying out the sanctioned arrangement.

3. The first step appears to be to move the chiefs to settle the pay of the superintendent of the durbar surveys alluded to in Rule 1. The chiefs should be informed of the opinion of the Govt. of India that the officer selected "should be a British officer of some standing and experience in survey and settlement work." After the pay has been settled, the Political Agent should communicate with the revenue commissioner and survey commissioner of the Northern Division, and should prepare a list of officers who would be willing to take the appointment, which list, after approval by the Government, should be submitted to the chiefs, in order that their selection may be made.

4. As regards the President of the Rajasthanik Sabha, the procedure is to be reversed. The list of officers who can be considered as candidates for the appointment is to be prepared by the chiefs, in order that the selection may be made by Government. The Political Agent should offer his assistance to the chiefs in the preparation of this list.

5. On the appointment of these two officers, they should form themselves into a committee presided over by the Political Agent, and prepare a scheme with a view to steps being taken to carry out the objects of the arrangement without any loss of time.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £650,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 4th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £416,800; to Bombay, £220,000; and to Madras, £13,200. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 12 per cent., and on Bombay at that price about 86 per cent.; above on all Presidencies in full. The average rate on Calcutta is 1s. 10-78d., on Bombay, 1s. 10-76d., and on Madras, 1s. 10-75d.

Home.

THE BURMESE EMBASSY.—One of the Burmese Ambassadors, Panquet-woon-Douk, has arrived at Hanley on a visit to the Staffordshire potteries, with a view to the introduction of the manufacture into Burmah. He is accompanied by a dragoman and two secretaries, and will remain for two or three weeks.

THE LOSHAI EXPEDITION.—We have looked in vain in the Gazette for announcements of the selection of the organisers and leaders of the late Loshai Expedition for C.B.s or S.I.s. Can it be that the claims of the men who have rendered so material a service to their Queen and country are to be allowed to stand over until it is found expedient to issue another long Bath list? If so, all we can say is, that the treatment accorded to Generals Bouchier, Brownlow, and Norman, is unworthy of a nation which should be the first to shower rewards on those who have led its forces against the enemy. They manage things better in Germany.—Army and Navy Gazette.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The exports of bullion to India during the past fortnight have been extremely small. By the P. and O. Company's steamers the exports have been limited to £1,950 in gold to Ceylon; £1,512 in silver to Penang, and £8,537 in silver to Singapore. By the Messageries Imperiales steamers £270 in gold and £1,400 in silver have been sent to Madras, and £52 in gold to Pondicherry. The exports of silver to Hong Kong by the P. and O. steamer Hindustan, (29th August) amounted to £10,750 in silver, and to Shanghai £6,080 in silver. Price of silver:—Bar, 5s. 5-16d. per oz. standard; Mexican Dollars, old die, 5s. 2½d. per oz.; new die, 5s. per oz.; 5 francs, 4s. 11d. per oz.

MILITARY.—106th (Bombay Light Infantry).—Lieutenant Dawson has been ordered to join the depot, for duty for the usual period of two years, and Lieutenant Kittoe has been ordered to embark for the service companies with the next relief of troops for India.—Captain Girardot, of this regiment, stationed at Newry, has been ordered to hold himself in readiness to proceed to join the service companies of his regiment in Bengal. Captain Westropp has been ordered home to succeed him at the depot.—108th (Madras Infantry).—H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has ordered Lieutenant Apthorpe, of this regiment, to proceed to join the service companies in Bengal, and he will be attached to the draft of the 2nd Battalion, 12th Foot, during the passage.

MESSRS. GLEDSTANES AND CO.—In the Court of Bankruptcy on Wednesday formal application was made by Mr. Lucas, barrister, to extend the interim injunction which was granted a week previously to restrain any further proceedings commenced by the creditors, until the further order of the Court. There was no opposition to the application, the consent of all parties interested having been obtained, and an order for the required extension was accordingly made. The firm of Gledstanes and Co., the well-known East India and China merchants, consisted of Mr. Wallace, Mr. Travers Buxton, and Mr. Walter Evans Gledstanes, and it is estimated that their total liabilities amount to about £2,000,000. Messrs. Travers, Smith and Co. are the acting solicitors for the firm. The receiver appointed at the meeting, when the injunction was made, was Mr. Harding, of the firm of Harding, Whinney, and Gibbons.

LORD NAPIER'S PATRONAGE.—Lord Napier of Magdala and his Indian colleagues have some excellent pieces of patronage in their gift just now. We gave a list a short time ago of the posts the retirements in the Artillery left vacant. To these we require to add the lucrative position of Adjutant-General of the Madras Army, which Colonel Roe has resigned in order that he may return to England with his battalion, the 3rd of the 60th Rifles. In connection with this latter appointment, the name of Colonel Hackett, of the 76th, was, if we remember rightly, put forward when Colonel Roe was selected on the death of Colonel Robertson, close upon three years ago. Should Colonel Hackett still be desirous of Staff employ, he may be offered the first refusal in the present instance. If length of service qualifies a man for such duties, and it should do, there is no officer in India who would better administer the affairs of the department.—Army and Navy Gazette.

ROYAL WARRANT.—The following Royal Warrant relating to pay of lieutenants of the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers, and of sub-lieutenants of Cavalry, Infantry, &c., has been published:—Victoria R. Whereas by Article 1 of our Warrant of the 28th December, 1871, it is provided that lieutenants of our Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers appointed to that rank after the 1st November, 1871, shall receive pay in accordance with the scale set forth in that Article; our will and pleasure now is that from the 1st January, 1872, inclusive, all lieutenants of our Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers shall be entitled to pay in accordance with the scale above referred to, and likewise that sub-lieutenants of our Cavalry and Infantry of the Line and West India Regiments appointed on the 1st November, 1871, shall be entitled to pay in accordance with that scale. Given at our Court at Osborne, this 17th day of February, 1872, in the 35th year of our reign.—By her Majesty's command, EDWARD CARDWELL.

EAST INDIA OFFICE PENSIONS.—A return has been issued of the names of all persons on the permanent establishment of the East India-office recently pensioned, showing their respective offices, ages, salaries, length of service, pensions, &c. The list is as follows:—Mr. James C. Melvill, Assistant Under Secretary of State, aged 50, salary £1,950, 34 years' service, pension, £1,500; Mr. Charles B. Phillimore, assistant secretary, revenue department, aged 54, salary £1,000, 35 years' service, pension, £850; Mr. Macevey Napier, chief clerk, correspondence department, aged 64, salary £800, 42 years' service, pension £700; Mr. Arthur Scott, senior clerk, correspondence department, aged 56, salary £750, 39 years' service, pension £650; Mr. William G. Goodliffe, Accountant-General, aged 48, salary £1,200, 11 years' service (in addition to nearly 14 years' service in the Civil Service of the Crown), pension £900; Mr. Willis H. Lowe, assistant to Accountant-General, aged 69, salary £1,000, 48 years' service, pension £1,000; Mr. George Brown, aged 50, salary £825, 32 years' service, pension £668. 15s.; Mr. Charles Davies, assistant to Accountant-General, aged 44, salary £825, 23 years' service, pension £575; Mr. George A. T. Stapleton, senior clerk, Accountant-General's department, aged 34, salary £580, 14 years' service, pension £375.

FAILURE OF LEGGATT AND CO.—In the Court of Bankruptcy on Thursday the case of Leggatt and Co. was gone into. The debtors, Clement Davidson Leggatt and John Ross Pugh Leggatt, who have petitioned under the liquidation clauses of the Act, were merchants of Austin-friars, also trading at Bombay, under the firm of Leggatt and Co. It is said that their failure is attributable to the stoppage of Messrs. Gledstanes and Co. The liabilities are returned at £140,000, and it is believed that ultimately payment will be made in full, but much will depend upon the result of the liquidation of Messrs. Gledstanes' estate. Upon the application of Messrs. West and King, the solicitors under the petition, the Court made an order appointing Mr. Harding, accountant, Old Jewry, receiver and manager of the estate, and granted an interim injunction until after the meeting of creditors, appointed for the 30th inst., staying further proceedings at the suit of the National Bank of India. An application was made by Mr. Robertson Griffiths on Friday, on behalf of the receiver and manager appointed in this case, and also on behalf of the debtors, for an order staying further proceedings under an attachment levied by the National Bank of India (Limited) upon 13,000 bales of cotton at Bombay. The bank had been restrained with regard to proceedings instituted in this country, but not as to the proceedings which they had also taken at Bombay. His Honour granted an interim order restraining further proceedings in Bombay under the attachment.

NEW GRAND ORGAN FOR BOMBAY TOWN HALL.—Sir Albert Sassoon, Kt., K.C.S.I., a member of the well-known Oriental firm of Sassoon and Co., has presented to the town of Bombay a magnificent organ, costing about £2,000, in honour of his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh's recent visit to that city. It has been built by Messrs. Bishop and Starr, of Marylebone-road, and is to be erected in the Town Hall of Bombay. The "great organ" and "solo great organ" have each a compass from CC to A, fifty-eight notes, and are on the same manual, but the solo organ is on a higher pressure of wind. The "swell organ" and "choir organ" have also a compass from CC to A, fifty-eight notes, and the pedal organ a compass from CCC to F, thirty notes. The interior metal pipes are of spotted-metal, and the exterior are of zinc, as zinc will better sustain the shaking it will receive during its long voyage. The wood pipes are all of mahogany, and the rest of the woodwork is of mahogany, oak, and cedar, and is varnished throughout to protect it from the effects of changes of climate. The rollers are of tubular iron, the squares of gilded brass, and the wirework of a metal made expressly for this organ, instead of the usual tinned iron wire, which speedily rusts in India. All the leatherwork is poisoned to protect it from the ravages of white ants. Although the machinery is not yet in perfect working order, select audiences were admitted to Messrs. Bishop and Starr's works on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 31, to hear a number of selections played by Master Percy Mull, and again in the evening by the brothers Le Jeune. Master Percy Mull is a young gentleman of twelve years of age, of the highest musical promise, the son of Mr. Mull, proprietor of the Times of India, the leading daily journal published in Bombay, who himself was instrumental, some years ago, in bringing the Le Jeunes into notice. When Mr. Mull discovered the precious musical gift with which his own boy had been endowed, he provided for its careful cultivation, and the result has been that the young gentleman performed some of Bach's difficult music with the most perfect ease and accuracy.

PROLIFIC VIPERS.—Dr. Shortt writes to us as follows:—"Allow me to record a most interesting occurrence that took place in my house on the night of the 30th ult. A Russell's Viper (Daboia Elegans) that I have had for some seven weeks, being the same that I exhibited at the recent lectures at the Medical College on the 24th June last and following days, measuring three and a half feet in length, has produced thirty-nine young. Each little one measures eight and a half inches in length, and one of these when about six hours old, in an experiment, killed a young partridge weighing nine and a half tollans in ten seconds. This proves how very prolific these deadly snakes are, and when the young are put together, they will exceed the mother nearly eight times in length. I am glad to add that Mama and Babies are doing nicely." We beg our correspondent to make short work of the elegant young reptiles, by tapping them on the head with a light rattan.—Madras Mail.

PRINCIPAL—MR. ROBERT CRASKE.

PROSPECTUS.

Mr. CRASKE desires to receive Boys at an early age—as soon as they can read well—in order that he may have charge of their Education from the very commencement of their studies.

Great care is taken that the elementary subjects are first thoroughly mastered, and that each Boy writes a good legible hand.

The next two or three years are devoted to Classical and Mathematical work; and Mr. CRASKE is confident that the best of his Boys will be found able, at the age of Thirteen, to compete successfully for the various Scholarships now open to competition at Eton, Harrow, Winchester, and other great Public Schools.

The Classical and English Department is under the direction of the Rev. W. A. OSBOYNE, B.A., Graduate in Classical Honours of Brasenose College, Oxford.

Mr. CRASKE himself takes charge of Arithmetic, Euclid, Algebra, and the higher Mathematics. Each Boy, in these subjects, is under his own personal instruction.

The French and German Languages are taught by competent Masters.

For each Boarder ... 60 Guineas.
Those who remain after Thirteen Years of Age ... 80 Guineas.
Day Boys and Weekly Boarders by Special Agreement.

These Terms include Drawing and Drilling. The charge for Laundress is also included. The only extra subject is German, the charge for which is Two Guineas per Quarter.

Mr. CRASKE considers it an essential part of a Boy's Education that he should be taught to Swim. He has, therefore, constructed a Bath twenty-five feet in length, with warming apparatus, to carry out this object effectually.

There are three Vacations in the year—a fortnight at Easter, seven weeks at Midsummer, and five weeks at Christmas.

The Right Rev. Lord ARTHUR HERVEY, Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells.

WILLIAM EDWARDS, Esq., H.M. Bengal Civil Service, late Puisne Judge of H.M. High Court of Agra; Craigton, Inverness.

Sir JOHN WALSHAM, Bart., Knoll Court, Herefordshire.
WM. BODHAM DOWNE, Esq., Lord Chamberlain's Office.
The Rev. JOHN RICHARDSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, Bury St. Edmund's.

All of whom have had Sons under Mr. Craske's care.

* French may be substituted for Greek at the option of the Parent.

A CLERGYMAN and his WIFE, residing in Gloucestershire, are desirous of TAKING the ENTIRE CHARGE of some CHILDREN whose Parents are returning to India. The most unexceptionable references can be given and will be required.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.

From high temperatures many evils result more formidable than mere loss of appetite, apathy, and restlessness. By headache, giddiness, and parched skin, nature gives warning that a feverish attack has begun, which neglect will intensify if the sufferer fails to resort early to these cleansing and regulating Pills, or some such corrective medicine. Holloway's Pills meet all disarrangements of the circulation and nervous centres with efficiency and safety, and through these potent auxiliaries they are competent to check the advancing malady and to conquer the threatened peril. In disordered digestion, torpidity of the liver, bilious pains, irritable bowels, diarrhoea or dysenteric symptoms, Holloway's Ointment should be well rubbed twice a day upon the abdomen.

MICROSCOPICAL investigation has proved that the decaying substances which accumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powders, pastes, and washes in general use have no effect upon these.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, August 23; Agra and Madras, August 21; Calcutta, August 20.

ALL difficulties regarding the fitness of Hassan Abdul for camping purposes appear at last to have been smoothed away. It has been officially certified that both water and forage may be obtained from the neighbourhood in fair abundance; and final orders have been issued to all the departments to make ready for the grand muster which is to come off early in January. The Punjab troops destined for the Camp of Exercise are the Guides, the 1st Cavalry, 5th Ghoorkas, 1st Punjab Infantry, 3rd and 4th Sikh Infantry, and two Mountain Batteries. Officers desirous of staff employment with the force have been invited to send in their applications without delay. We hear that no ladies are to be allowed in the Camp.

LORD NORTHBROOK was due again at Simla on Saturday, August 17. Meanwhile his Council under the lead of Sir John Strachey met at Simla on the 15th to consider or advance a few Bills. The President got leave to bring in a Bill for consolidating and amending the law on irrigation, navigation, and drainage in Northern India. Compulsory water-rates on land not yet irrigated having been disallowed by the Home Government, the clauses to that effect in the Punjab Act are to be repealed, and the Act itself will under the new Bill be extended to the North-West Provinces. Mr. Hobhouse also introduced a Bill to amend Act X. of 1859, the famous Rent Act for Bengal. Another Bill for which he acts as sponsor, proposes to amend Mr. Stephen's Indian Evidence Act, passed only a few months ago. The Bill to postpone the new Code of Criminal Procedure was passed, and after some further business the Council adjourned till the 29th August.

LORD NORTHBROOK's offer of a thousand-rupee prize for the best essay on the nature and causes of the Bardwán fever has at length been formally notified in the Gazette. Any Sub-Assistant Surgeon or any one who has passed through the Calcutta Medical College may compete for the prize, sending his essay to the Principal of the Medical College before the 1st August, 1873. Due warning is given to intending competitors with regard the mode of treating their subject. Facts and close reasoning from facts are especially demanded; and mere speculation or rash theory is strictly forbidden. The essayist must offer original observations on the pathology of the disease, on the range of temperature observable at different stages, and on successful modes of treatment. He must also dwell with care on those habits of the people which tend to develop or arrest the fever, and on any peculiar feature in the villages most liable to the disease or most exempt from its influence. These conditions will practically exclude all but those who have done actual duty in the fever-stricken districts.

THE story of a collision between the Russians and the Atalik Ghazi, to which we referred last week, is now contradicted "on the best authority," by the Bombay Gazette. According to our contemporary, "there seems reason to believe that a friendly mission has been sent by the Russian Government to the Atalik Ghazi, who had made friendly overtures to the Russians." Which version of the story is the more correct, we will not pretend to say; but it is far from unlikely that the friendly mission has been transformed by native hearsay into a hostile movement.

ANOTHER statement which has been going the round of the Indian papers seems to have rested on no ground of fact. It is true, indeed, that Maharajah Holkar offered to enter into partnership with a firm of railway contractors; but it is quite a mistake to suppose that Messrs. Hood, Winton, Mills, and Co. have accepted his offer. They appear to have been perversely blind to the advantages of an alliance which would leave his Highness an equal share of the profits on a venture to which he was to contribute nothing at all but his name. Their refusal to satisfy so very reasonable a demand on the part of a prince whose rule is so extremely paternal that his subjects can hardly call anything their own, will lay them open, we fear, to the rebukes of those gentlemen who are all eyes and ears for the sorrows of native princes.

WE observe that the dispute between the Rajah of Jodhpore and his son, Zorawar Singh who went into rebellion, has been settled, without bloodshed, by the Rajah agreeing to allow his son Rs. 1,25,000 per annum for his personal use.

IN his abstract on Indian Surveys, Mr. Clements Markham gives an account of the opposite systems hitherto practised of spelling Indian names. What may be called the popular system began with such curious phonetic freaks as Sir Roger Dowler for Suraj-ud-daula, and Isle of Bats for Allahabad, or, as the Mussulmans call it, Illahabaz. Khán in those days was usually written Cawn, a spelling perpetuated by mistake in "Cawnpore," as if it were the City of the Khan, and not of Kanh, another name for Krishna. The first attempt at a more scientific scheme was made by Mr. Halhed in 1775, who distinguished the Hindustani vowels by long and short marks. His principle was improved upon by Sir William Jones in 1783, whose lead has since been followed by such scholars as Colebrooke, Wilkins, Professor Wilson, and Shakespear. They deemed it useless to render words phonetically into a language which has no consistent rules of orthography, and in which the same vowel sound may be represented by four or five different vowels and diphthongs. In the Jonesian system each separate vowel sound is represented in English by a fixed equivalent, the vowels being sounded as in Italian, with accents to mark the long sounds. The old principle however was strenuously upheld by Dr. Gilchrist, who made English u stand for short a, oo for u, ee for long i, ou for au, and ue for ai. His system, in spite of its frequent absurdities, long held its ground, even among scholars like Mr. J. Prinsep and Sir Henry Elliot, and it has been faithfully followed in the last few years by Mr. Marshman and Colonel Meadows Taylor. Down to 1850 it enjoyed official countenance in the Revenue and Survey Departments of Bengal. The leading missionaries however, led by Sir Charles Trevelyan, had declared as far back as 1836 in favour of the scientific system, and in 1851 Colonel Thuillier proposed for his department a compromise between the two. Since then the controversy between the friends of the two systems has raged with varying fortunes. The Jonesian or scientific system, which Sir C. Trevelyan tried in vain to carry out in the official correspondence of Madras, was applied by Mr. Eastwick to Murray's Handbook for India, and by Keith Johnstone to his Atlas. Colonel Walker adopted it in 1865 for the Trigonometrical Survey, and at last in 1868 the Indian Government appointed Mr. W. W. Hunter to compile a Gazetteer in which the names should be uniformly spelt in general accordance with the practice of Professor Wilson. In 1870 Mr. Hunter's plan for a system of uniform spelling, founded on scientific rules more or less modified in the working, was finally adopted by the Indian Government, and has since been sanctioned by the home authorities. This is the plan which will henceforth be followed in legislation, in the Gazetteers, in the Telegraph and Survey Departments, in the Post-office Guide, in the Railway Time-Tables, the Government Offices, and by several newspapers.

Thus far, therefore, uniform spelling on something like a philosophic system has been secured. Brahmputra, for instance, will no longer be tortured into Bruhmupootru or Berhampooter, and Kurrachee will be improved into Karachi. Umballa will appear as Ambála, Poona as Puna, Subathoo as Sabáthu, Jeypoor as Jaipur, and so on. Some names however, which have been misspelt for ages, will remain unaltered, such as Calcutta, Bombay, Lucknow. Others, a little less familiar, reappear in a kind of harlequinade, one half old, the other half new, as Cawnpur, Dinapur. This half-and-half process seems to us very questionable. Either let the old names stand or give them an entirely new face. Cawnpur has a very ludicrous air about it, and Dinapur might just as well have been turned forthwith into Danapur. Mr. Hunter threatened us with Lacknow; but that proved too hard a mouthful for the Indian Government, and Lucknow is not to be tampered with, although the untutored Englishman might soon have found himself at home in Laknau. Oude, no doubt, is utterly atrocious, but would not Awadh or Audh have been more satisfactory than Oudh?

THE absurdity of rendering the short a of Hindustani by English u comes out with peculiar force in a passage lately quoted by the Friend of India from Ward's work on the Hindoos. In the compass of a few lines we come upon Krishnu, Ungudu, Indrudhoomnu, Jugunnathu, and Vishwakurma; all spelt in strict accordance with Gilchrist's method. We put it to any one whether the chances of an unlearned Englishman's mispronouncing these words would not be very greatly lessened, if every u were turned, as it should be in strict transliteration, into an a. Krishna, Angada, and Vishwakarma would pronounce themselves, whereas Krishnu to English eyes rhymes with Vishnu, or as the Friend would spell it Vishnoo. There may be some reason for writing "Ungada" and "kurma" phonetically, but to expect average readers to pronounce a final u, as in "Krishnu," like short a, betokens either a very sanguine disposition or a most un-English regard for logical consistency.

THE Report of Mr. Metcalfe, Magistrate of Bardwan, on the fever which raged in his district from July 1871 to May of the following year, shows how little has been done to remove the causes of an epidemic which has prevailed for more than ten years past in the districts on either side the Hughli; its fury for the last three years having been mainly spent on Hughli and Bardwan. The Government indeed has spared no effort of late to relieve the sufferers from this scourge. Last year native doctors with medicines were promptly placed at the disposal of the Bardwan Municipality, but the spread of the disease involved the sending of more medical aid, and the establishment of food depots for the relief of those who were too ill or too poor to help themselves. Nine special dispensaries were opened in the Bardwan district. The civil surgeon was reinforced with one English medical officer and twenty-two sub-assistant surgeons and native doctors. When Mr. Metcalfe took charge of the district in September, almost every human being resident in the town was prostrate with the fever. In the public offices nearly every one, high or low, suffered from repeated attacks of the fever, and at one time every official below Mr. Metcalfe himself was placed on the sick list. The district police were utterly prostrated, and "scarecrows of constables were to be seen stalking about unequal to any duty." Those who were fit for work one day would be laid up for the next five or six. The head jailer and his family suffered for weeks. Of the prisoners those who escaped the fever became weak and bloodless, with every appearance of scurvy. One civil surgeon had to leave the district from the effects of the disease, and several servants of the East Indian Railway fled for their lives from the scene of suffering. Households were left without a servant; not a sweeper or scavenger could be found to work for the municipality. A criminal might be seen tending the constable in whose charge he was travelling. A jail-darogah performed his duties in the arms of his warders. Mr. Metcalfe himself, as the Commissioner of Bardwan has taken care to point out, was laid up with repeated attacks of the fever, but persevered in spite of all drawbacks and delays in his efforts to provide for the relief and comfort of the sick and suffering people. The chief medical officers, Drs. Elliot and Jackson, seem also to have displayed no common zeal in their dangerous work, and the former nearly lost his life from fever caught in the discharge of his arduous duties. One native surgeon, Denobundhoo Dutt, is described as having been "worn to a shadow by his exertions and sufferings from repeated attacks of fever." As the fever spread more dispensaries were opened, more native doctors were sent into the district, in which whole villages were down with the fever at one time, and plentiful supplies of clothing and other necessities were served out among the sick. Numbers succumbed to the disease, and very many of the survivors will no doubt feel its effects for years. In spite of the cold weather the fever still raged in December and January, nor had it wholly subsided before May.

WE have reason to believe that field officers below the rank of lieutenant-colonel will be allowed the benefit of the new order, which gives unemployed lieutenant-colonels the right to live at home on English pay until they have served long enough to claim colonel's allowances. Such an arrangement would doubtless gratify not a few of the unemployed majors, who have had just as much reason as their seniors to complain of a state of things intolerable to all concerned. If it was worth while to grant one set of unemployed officers the option of doing nothing on home pay instead of doing nothing in India on Indian allowances, it was evident that a like boon ought to be held out to another set of officers equally condemned to idleness on Indian pay. But even thus the new arrangement falls lamentably short of the actual need. It may save India a few thousands a year for some time to come; but it makes no attempt to grapple manfully with the difficulties that spring from the very conditions of Indian service, as remodelled by Lord Halifax and his successors. There are several hundred unemployed officers in the Indian army, the great bulk of whom will in due time be entitled to draw £1,124 each a-year as full colonels. The cost thus entailed on the Indian Treasury will in a few years amount to nearly a million a-year. True economy would counsel the taking of timely measures to avert so heavy a liability by offering these gentlemen a handsome inducement to give up the service altogether before they have earned the right to draw colonel's allowances. We believe that numbers of them would retire at once on pensions of five or six hundred a year if they only had the chance. In offering them a smaller pension, baited with the hope of colonel's allowances in the future, the Government seems to provoke the very catastrophe which it ought above all things to have prevented. Far better would it have been to give each officer the option, either of holding on for colonel's allowances under a moderate retaining-pension, or of resigning the service altogether on a pension suited to the need.

THE August number of the Journal of the East India Association contains two papers, each of them full of striking or plausible suggestions however intermixed with crotchets and extravagances. Of Dr. Birdwood's paper on the "Competitive System as applied to India," we may have more to say anon. For the present we can only touch upon Mr. R. Elliot's essay on "The True Interests of Manchester in India." In this paper the old "Mysore Planter" rings many changes on his favourite text, the need of irrigation as the one safeguard of life in India, and the true source of productive wealth. Irrigation is his watchword, and he calls on Manchester to set its face against any other mode of developing the resources of India. For want of irrigation nearly three millions of people have died of famine in little more than ten years; and the whole blame of this is thrown upon the Government which has encouraged railways in preference to waterworks. Mr. Elliot's love of paradox leads him to speak of railways as tending to create instead of averting famines; a statement which clashes strangely with recent experience of the good done by Indian railways in times of impending or actual dearth. Within the last three years for instance the railways in Oudh certainly helped to save the North-Western Provinces from the famine that wasted Rajputana. If absolute safety of life be the great test of a civilised government, then must the English Government also be called "cruel and barbarous," for letting about a million of its subjects die in Ireland of famine in one year. There was sad blundering, no doubt, in Orissa; but the Ganges Canal has already saved millions of lives, and the destined railway through Rajputana will prevent a renewal of the extreme misery which prevailed there a few years ago. The Indian Government cannot pay too much attention to works of irrigation; but Mr. Elliot's demand for the indefinite suspension of all new railway works, in order that India may be covered with canals, will fall, if Manchester is wise, on deaf ears. Mr. Elliot winds up his paper with a dreadful vision of the day when India will set up as a nation for itself, and the 200 millions of English capital already invested in that country will either be swallowed up without hope of return, or only be redeemed at an enormous sacrifice, if the English people should be foolish enough to advance another hundred millions on a stake which the failure of the opium revenue may at any moment render utterly worthless. Any such failure however could only be gradual, and is not likely to begin just yet. By the time it has really begun, we shall have seen our way to other sources of revenue, such as canal rents; and meanwhile the best guarantee for the retention of India lies in the fact of so much English capital having been invested in Indian securities.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times draws attention to the mischief inflicted on Indian trade by the system of long credits, which, however necessary in the old days of long sea-voyages in sailing ships, has now become a mere incentive to rash speculation. When a voyage round the Cape took more than a hundred days, a bill at six months' sight left a fair margin of time for payment; but now that a passage through the Canal takes only forty-five days at the utmost, the writer in question sees no reason, nor do we, why all bills of exchange should not be drawn at three months' sight. At present the long credits serve only, we are told, to float imaginary capital, which the first commercial storm will resolve into vacuity.

At last the Imperial Money Order System has been extended to India. From the 1st of October next, it will be possible to send a Post-office Order for certain sums from any office in the United Kingdom to "any place in British India." What the word "place" means here we cannot say; but the general meaning of the notice from which we have quoted is plain enough. Of course too the Indian offices will issue orders payable in this country. No single order will exceed £10, and the rates of charge will be uniform with those levied on orders sent to the Colonies; namely one shilling for £2, two shillings for £5, three for £7, and four for £10.

INDIAN SURVEYS IN 1870-71.—III.

THE question of organising a Meteorological Department for India appears to be still "under consideration." Meanwhile reports kept coming in from the Astronomer at Madras, from the Colaba Observatory, and from sanitary and other officers in the various provinces. Mr. Blanford's Memorandum of April 1871 reviews the different methods of making and registering weather-observations, that have prevailed in India. At the Colaba Observatory, the great centre for all such observations in Western India, volunteers from English regiments are trained to act as Observers in the branch stations of Puna, Belgaum, Disa, and Karachi. At the Madras Observatory observations were first taken in 1796, and have since been carried on with few breaks. An hourly series, begun in 1841, was discontinued as complete in 1861, since when the observations have been taken thrice daily. In 1867 fourteen meteorological stations were sanctioned for Madras, twelve of which began work before last year. The want of an European assistant at Madras was duly remedied in 1871. In the Central Provinces there are nine, in the Punjab fourteen stations, all at work. Of the twenty-four stations in the North-West Provinces at fourteen observations are taken four times a day, and at Rurki every hour. Lucknow has one Observatory which reports to the North-West Provinces. At Calcutta an hourly Meteorological Register has been kept since 1856. Observations are regularly taken five times a day at four first-class and ten second-class stations in Bengal. The results are sent fortnightly to the Reporter, who publishes a monthly abstract in the Government Gazette. A weekly summary of rainfall reports from the civil stations is also furnished to the Gazette by the Board of Revenue. In Burmah there is a register at Port Blair and another at Akyab.

It is feared however that the value of these results is largely diminished for want of uniform data and of careful correction of barometers, with special reference to differences of level above the sea. The heights of the several stations need more careful measuring, and the diverse systems now in use ought to be superseded by an uniform system for the purpose of comparing actual results. Mr. Blanford insists on a special study of the law of monsoons, and their anomalies, with regard to the distribution of rainfall and its variation in different years. Very little is known of the distribution of barometric pressure in India. In Mr. Blanford's opinion the elements of mean temperature, pressure, and direction of wind, with the total rainfall month by month, should be laid down on charts, and the results collected in a central office. The opinions of General Strachey and Mr. Chambers of the Colaba Observatory do not materially differ from those of Mr. Blandford. In an elaborate paper on the proper employment of the wet and dry bulb thermometer Dr. Forbes Watson suggests the steps that might be taken to ascertain the best conditions for obtaining trustworthy results from these instruments.

The arrangements proposed by Colonel Walker for registering tidal observations and connecting the tidal stations by levelling processes have been hindered by the financial difficulties of the Indian Government. Colonel Walker has since suggested that the scope and object of the suspended enquiries should be enlarged, so as to extend our knowledge of the laws of the tides, and to apply to India at very little increase of cost the system adopted by the British Association for the purpose of measuring the mass of the moon, the rigidity of the earth, the probable depth of the sea as gathered from the speed of tide-waves, and the influence of tidal friction in retarding the earth's rotation. Some of his suggestions are now being carried out, and all the necessary means for investigating tidal phenomena will shortly be supplied to six separate stations in India. Hitherto nothing of the kind has been done there except Mr. Parkes's admirable analysis of the Karáchi tides.

In compliance with other of Colonel Walker's suggestions a new set of instructions was issued for the Madras Observatory in 1869; and during the next year "the number of complete observations of fixed stars taken within the meridian circle was 1,662, of the moon fifty-five, and of minor planets thirty-three." Five series of measurements have been made since 1862, for the purpose of correcting the constant of solar parallax, a work for which the Madras Observatory, being so near the equator, is more favourably situated than any other in the world. In October 1871 a new apparatus, invented by Mr. Winter, Telegraph Engineer to the Madras Railway, enabled Mr. Pogson, the Astronomer, to fire both the noon and eight o'clock guns with strict accuracy, so that the shipping in the Madras roads have now two daily signals for determining the error and rate of chronometers.

In 1870 Major Montgomerie continued his exploration of the regions beyond the British-Indian frontier by sending a Pathan Havildar direct from Peshawar to Faizabad, the capital of Badakshan, through country hitherto sealed against explorers. Crossing from Yusafzai through Swat to Chitral, the Pathan made his way by the difficult Nakshan Pass to Zebak, on the Upper Kokeha, a tributary of the Oxus. Thence going down the valley, he reached Faizabad, returning to Chitral by the Dora Pass. By fixing the positions of these two passes the Havildar has determined two more points on the ridge of the Hindu-Kush. He has also made a route survey of 286 miles, and opened out the geography of 13,000 square miles of country hitherto unknown. In the autumn of 1871 Mr. Blandford, in company with Captain Elwes, explored the eastern and northern frontiers of British Sikkim. At the Donkia Pass, 18,500 feet above the sea, they got a good view over Tibet, fixed the position of another pass never before laid down on any map, met with three unmapped lakes, and made a good collection of birds.

Much light will have been thrown on the geography of Persia during the past year by the mission of Sir Frederic Goldsmid. Among his fellow-labourers is Captain St. John, who had already surveyed the Elbourz Mountains, and fixed the latitudes of places between Shiraz and Teheran. Earlier in 1871 Major Beresford Lovett travelled from Shiraz to Kerman and Sam. Traversing the desolate valley of Kotro, famous for its wild asses, and popularly supposed to stretch as far as Sind, he came to the foot of the Tung Chal, a granitic range, which seems to be the backbone of the mountain system of Iran. Across this, at a height of 8,000 feet, he made his way to Kerman. Several errors in the present maps have thus been corrected, to say nothing of the gaps he will have helped to fill up. Much new information regarding Central Asia has also been collected by Captains Chapman and Lockhart, of the Quartermaster-General's Department, in the shape of translations from recent Russian and German works. Of districts in British India, much useful knowledge has been supplied in Mr. Westland's Report on the District of Jessór, and in Dr. Oldham's Memoir on Gházipur.

A complete catalogue of all maps, charts, memoirs, and other documents in the Geographical Department of the India Office is now passing through the press. The bulk of this important work has been executed by Captain Thuillier, of the Trigonometrical Survey. To ensure the completeness of such a collection for the future, as a storehouse of information for all who need it, the Duke of Argyll has ordered copies of every map published in India to be sent home to the Geographical Department. It is needless to enlarge on the propriety of such a measure. Quite as important is the duty of taking all possible care to preserve those precious documents, which register the results of numberless surveys and explorations carried out from time to time at great cost. Many old maps and charts have been destroyed in India by white ants, neglect, and other causes; and no duplicates are to be found in England. His Grace has therefore resolved that duplicates of all maps and records worth preserving, of which the originals are in India, shall be sent home. Even of the old maps belonging to the India Office, very many have been left for years to rot and perish in holes and corners. These, however, will now be looked after, and steady progress is being made in mounting and repairing the older maps, about six hundred of which have already been put into good repair.

BRAHMO LADIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Permit me to explain that the heading, "The Brahmo Ladies Won't Go to Church," prefixed to an extract from the Indian Mirror in your last issue, is based upon a misconception of the contents of the extract in question. The seats which are so scantily filled are those "reserved for ladies and their male relatives" in a special part of the church, "the privilege so hotly contended for" being the liberty to sit outside the purdah. The regular "ladies' gallery," screened by curtains, has been in use ever since the Brahma Mandir was opened, and is crowded now. The religious earnestness which has been manifested by the Brahmicas of Calcutta is one of the most interesting features of recent Brahma life.—I am, Sir, yours, &c., S. D. COLLET.

MURDER OF A CHILD FOR ITS ORNAMENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your Mail of the 9th inst. I read with extreme regret a most painful case, "Murder of a Child for its Ornaments."

The general practice of adorning children which exists amongst the natives of India repeatedly brings to our notice instances of this horrible crime. As often as it occurs the Indian Press and the Judicial Bench alike express their feelings of regret and surprise that the natives continue to endanger the lives of their helpless and innocent children by loading them with ornaments, and thereby tempting barbarous scoundrels to murder them for the sake of plunder. The warnings and advice thus given seem to have had little effect in diminishing instances of this crime. All classes seem to concur when such a murder takes place that something should be done to put an end to this most inhuman custom; the natural feelings of parents are not sufficient for the protection of their offspring by taking away the temptation which induces murderous brutes to commit such acts of barbarity, and it is essential that the Legislature should act in the matter, as it has done in the case of the abolition of Suttee. The horrible details of one of these murders, as given by some of the murderers who have confessed their crime, give some idea of the sufferings the helpless little creatures endure; their mouths are first stopped by putting a coarse cloth down their throats, and after different other tortures they have their ears lacerated and mangled in the hurry and desire of their destroyers to obtain possession of the ornaments which are attached thereto. We have even heard of cases in which these inhuman monsters resorted to the barbarous expedient of tearing off legs and arms that they might the more easily secure the ornaments thereon. Is it not, then, time that the British Government, which has already done so much for India, by deposing tyrannical and corrupt princes, should take up this matter, and should they not by some feasible enactment put an end to all such occurrences in the future? The necessity for the Home and Local Governments taking it up is apparent. The natural instincts of parents have proved insufficient to prevent the destruction of their little ones by removing the causes of temptation which lead to the crime. There is nothing in the Hindoo religious customs opposed to this baneful habit the natives have of transforming their savings into jewellery with which to load their children; and nothing, to my mind, will be effective in preventing this foolish practice, except a stringent Act of the Legislature. Much might be done by the establishment of savings banks, or something of that sort, which, under the auspices of the Government, would induce the natives to invest their savings in that way, instead of in the tawdry jewellery which becomes the source of so much crime. These few remarks I would beg to offer for the consideration of the Government, with the sanguine hope that the matter will not be lost sight of, and that it may receive the attention of public and private individuals.—Your obedient servant, Sept. 16.

THE BATTLE OF THE RAILWAY GUAGES.

The Indian Daily News observes that the battle of the guages to be used on the Indian State Railways is not yet over. Mr. Fowler, supported by Mr. Lee Smith, has again raised the question, and, as we think, fortunately. It would be well if Lord Northbrook went over the grounds which dictated the adoption of the medium guage. As far as the public are in a position to judge, the sole reason for breaking the guage was the reduction on the cost it was presumed to render possible. The new Indian lines were not to exceed a certain sum per mile for construction, and as this result could only be effected by a change of guage, the guage was changed. This cheap conclusion has now been powerfully challenged. The advocates of the new guage were never in a position to assert that the break would never lead to any inconvenience; they only pleaded that the inconvenience would probably be found far less than was anticipated, and that it would be better to suffer inconvenience and secure a railway, than to make a railway at too great a cost. They admitted the fact that the new railways were intended primarily to subserve a distinct military purpose. The commercial value of the lines was not, indeed, overlooked, but was recognised as of secondary value as far as the exigencies of the State were concerned. Trade was to be developed so long as strategy was consulted. If trade and strategy went together, so much the better; and an effort was made to secure their union as much as possible in laying down the new lines, but strategy was never to yield to trade. The strong military usefulness of the lines was a prima facie reason why they should be so united with existing lines as to render it possible to handle with one effort, if necessary, the resources of all railways in connection, whether State or not. This great desideratum was sacrificed to cheapness, simply for cheapness' sake. It may, however, be urged that Indian wars are few and far between, and that long years may elapse before it may be necessary to test the military value of the lines; that their construction is the addition of a new reserve to the resources of the State, rather than a positive increase of its active militant strength. Admitting to the utmost the force of such an argument, we cannot allow that it is altogether valid. For although railways may not be used in actual war, they add greatly to the usefulness of the forces at the disposal of the Government, by making them more mobile, and by largely extending the area within which they can operate within a given time. Then, again, we have to consider how great a check on the rapid movement of troops must inevitably be occasioned by changing from train to train, not only the fighting men, but their necessary stores and impedimenta. The loss in time is a serious consideration, but so is also the additional expense. But when we transfer this consideration to the commercial uses of the line, we are brought face to face with a grave error. If it were intended to compel the new State Railways to confine themselves to the purely local traffic of the districts they traverse, no better means for doing so could have been invented than creating a necessity for costly transshipments; we say costly, for transfers of goods from train to train are always more expensive than any estimate that can be framed. We have great faith in General Strachey's ability, but he is neither a practical engineer, nor a practical soldier. All the practical reasons are in favour of retaining an unbroken guage, and even if—which is doubtful—the new lines did cost a little more at first by keeping to the guage in use, the additional outlay would speedily be recouped by the additional work to be got out of the lines, as parts of one great system, and by the immense saving to the Government and the public, sure to accrue from through traffic. Now that the cheapness of the new guage has been called in question in a way which endangers the theory altogether, we think it is the bounden duty of the Government of India to investigate the whole matter before finally committing the country to a vast disjointed system of railway communications, only to be remodelled hereafter at an expense out of all proportion to the outlay already incurred. So long as the new guage is a matter for doubtful controversy as regards cost, so long should the Government, having regard to the many objections to which it is obnoxious, hesitate before committing a poor country like India to an expenditure of £15,000,000.

THE USES OF THE HILLS.

The Pioneer observes that there are dozens of situations in the Hills, even about Simla itself, perhaps the least convenient of our hill-stations in this respect, where healthy positions for troops might be found—not doubtless in compact and level cantonments with close-studded and costly barracks, but in cheap wooden huts over long lines of road. Let the men, particularly the newly arrived regiments, march up, clear the ground, and hut themselves, as troops in the colonies have done for years, specially in New Zealand; echelon them along the roads in such formation that an alarm from the plains would bring them down in time to show in force and soon enough to be of use, and then let them employ themselves for a certain time in improving our hill communications, taking, say, sections of the great Thibet road or other routes which so greatly need opening out, improving, or widening. A regiment thus placed, with the distance between its sections regulated by the facility of supply, the nature of the ground, and other obvious considerations, might pass a year or so of healthy invigorating work in the Hills, the men meanwhile secured from certain influences of climate and from many temptations, all of which are more destructive to the newly arrived soldier than to men who have had some acquaintance with India. The younger men and boys would have time to gain stamina, and would be prepared by a certain course of labour the better to face the plains to which their tour would sooner or later lead them, and we believe that some such course of preparatory training for a newly arrived regiment, or of recovery for one which had suffered from unhealthy stations, would do much to save a vast amount of life now sacrificed, and recover the constitutions of many who would thus be saved from Netley and the Invalids to the profit of Government and their own. There is of course much to be said on the other side, and it is a question on which we would invite temperate discussion. We are persuaded the thing might be done, and with many advantages,—not the least of which would be the solution of the long-voiced question of a possible European colonisation of some parts of the hill ranges. The first experiments would naturally involve some mistakes and partial failure; but were they fairly commenced, and in a good spirit, we could surely count on the talents and working qualities of our officers and men to achieve considerable ultimate success.

THE INCOME-TAX IN INDIA.

The Englishman observes that in an essentially agricultural country, cultivated on the system of petite culture, and with the national income infinitely split up into petty fragments, such a tax can only be rendered profitable by a degree of fiscal severity and inquisitorial visitation which no prudent Government would sanction. But there is another aspect of the question. "It is not," say the advocates of the income-tax, "the agricultural incomes, but the commercial ones, which we wish to reach. The husbandman pays his land tax, and we are content to accept it pretty much as a discharge in full of all demands. What we desire is, some impost that will reach the coffers of the trading community, who, under our system (they say) pay nothing." Now, without entering into a refutation of the latter statement, although it would be easy to show that the incidence of the land-tax on the husbandman alone is a pure chimera, it may be well to examine for a moment the character of the mercantile incomes thus aimed at. Every one knows that very rich bankers and merchants exist in India. But the number of such men is absolutely inappreciable when compared with the general population. In fact, the more universal the poverty of a people, the more conspicuous is any single instance of great wealth. A recent English manufacturer of Indian history has inferred, from the public position which the two or three rich banking houses held under the Muhammadan Government, that native commerce flourished then to an extent now unknown. But had he studied the actual facts he would have come to exactly the opposite conclusion. For every wealthy trading family in the last century we have a hundred great commercial houses, conducted entirely by native capital under British rule. Their increased numbers alone suffice to render them less conspicuous. But, even multiplied as they are, when contrasted with past times, they are still a mere cipher when compared with the mass of the people, and altogether useless as a source of revenue on a large scale by any process short of spoliation. If an income tax is to be really reproductive, it must fall, not on a few isolated men of conspicuous wealth, but on a widely diffused area of moderate prosperity. It can only act profitably when a great body of fair-sized incomes exist throughout the country. Now, in India, trade is conducted on a system of petite commerce, just as tillage is conducted on a system of petite culture. The perfect system of hundis, or bills of exchange, among the natives, economises capital to such a degree as to practically make over the trade of the country to very small merchants. These men have no large establishments, no heavy stock, no machinery or manufactories. All they need is a small amount of cash to be rapidly turned over in buying up raw produce, which is passed under bills drawn against each petty invoice. The result of the commercial system is an infinite number of small merchants, just as the results of the agricultural is an infinite number of small husbandmen. In neither case is there any large body of good-sized fortunes on which an income-tax can operate. Every district has, indeed, a few so-called rich men engaged in trade. But nothing can more forcibly illustrate the pettiness of mercantile incomes in India than an inquiry into the actual resources of such men. We have pursued the investigation in several districts, and all the evidence tends to show that the richest of the country-traders have not a real working capital of Rs. 10,000. A native is held to possess a power of almost unlimited local transactions, if he has a bona fide disengaged capital of half that amount, or say £500. One of the most experienced indigo-planters in Bengal informs us that he believes these sums are over rather than under the mark. The nominal capital is, indeed, much greater. For every native merchant or banker carries on from year to year a vast balance of outstanding debts, most of them bad ones, and regards it in his imagination as so much capital, for the realisation of which he steadily worries the debtors. Almost every rural merchant, moreover, shuts up the greater part of his fortune in fixed loans on land or mortgages on villages, and as a matter of fact, scarcely any of the "rich men" of a district have a working capital of £1,000 employed in trade, and a very few of them as much as £500. The very first condition for the healthy action of an income-tax, is, therefore, wanting in India. The system of petite commerce and petite culture do not allow the development of any large body of fair-sized incomes, on which alone such a tax can legitimately and profitably operate. Let any one compare the miserable sums set forth in the income-tax returns with the population from which they are wrung, and decide whether this argument is not borne out by the actual results.

LAND-REVENUE FOR LOCAL PURPOSES.

The Times of India observes that Mr. Massey would classify land revenue as imperial; but if the system of local finances is ever to be matured it can never afford to be divested of land revenue as a source of local income. There is really nothing "in the reason of the thing" to prevent its being so considered. On the contrary, considerations of great moment go far to show that it is one of the first branches of revenue that the Imperial Government should surrender in favour of the provincial administrations. So long as this source of revenue is withheld from the Local Governments, so long will the Presidencies, such as Bombay and Madras, remain victims of financial injustice, and so long will the people of those Presidencies be the objects of the levy of obnoxious and unpopular taxes. The exclusion of this source of revenue from the control of the Provincial Governments is tantamount to requiring them to tax the people under them, and raise money for the special benefit of other Provinces with which they have very little to do. The ryots in Bombay and Madras can well say that they are made to pay for works in British Burmah or Oudh. We wish the Government of India would see the injustice of the exclusion of this item from the provincial services. The land revenue of this Presidency is raised in the Presidency by officers employed under the Local Government. It is also raised and settled by them on the expiry of thirty years' leases. This so called revision is nothing but an enhancement of the old rates by 60 to 90 per cent. Now there would be some justification for this increase if the ryots could be assured that the increase was all for the benefit of the people of this Presidency, that it would lessen the burdens which would otherwise be placed upon them to provide for the growing wants of the Presidency. In the absence of this assurance, what is there to show that the enhancement of rates on the termination of thirty years' leases would be for the people's benefit? Would there not be less of callous resistance and more willingness shown to meet Government in its demands, if the ryots are convinced that the object of Government in raising land assessment is to appropriate the increase in meeting the wants of the Presidency and in reducing the imposition of other burdens on the people? It is strange that while Mr. Massey points to the land revenue "as the great mainstay of our finance," and deprecates any "ingenious devices for imposing fresh burdens upon the people of India," he should yet think proper to exclude it from his plan of local finance. This very thought was in the mind of the member of the East India Finance Committee who questioned Mr. Massey what he thought of the people of any presidency that would say—"The revenue which belongs to us is taken from us for other administrations, and we are obliged to borrow." He is of course puzzled to deny that it is a just cause of complaint, and winds up by saying that it would be drawing the line too fine. But as shown above, the complaint on the part of such of the presidencies as contribute largely in the shape of the land tax has logic and reason on its side. The same arguments apply to the salt revenue. As for stamps, we would rather have them under the control of the Imperial Government.

CROPS IN BENGAL.—The crops in most parts of the Bardwan division are still suffering from want of rain, and the tanks and rivers continue low, and in many parts of the 24-Parganahs also rain is wanted. The prospects of the crops in the Rajshahai division have been improved by showers, but the fall has not as yet been sufficient to ensure a good rice harvest. In the Jalpigi district the crops in places are already greatly damaged for want of rain, and cholera has again broken out in the Sadr Bazaar. From Dacca and Chittagong the reports are favourable, but in the Patna division rain is much wanted, as well as in many parts of Bhagalpur. The crops in Orissa are progressing favourably, but in Chota Nagpur, Assam, and the adjacent hills, more rain would be beneficial.

CHURCH SERVICES.—A new adaptation of services has been issued by the Bishop of Calcutta, but as suggestion only, and without interfering "authoritatively with the liberty which has hitherto been used in this country." It is clearly necessary that there should be such adaptation of services to the very different circumstances of India. The following seem to us the two most important passages in the letter:—"Each of the services may be used separately and in any order, and a sermon preached at any service. When the office for Holy Communion is used after Morning Prayer, it may be commenced after the third Collect, the remaining portion of Morning Prayer being omitted. The sermon may be preached after the third Collect if desirable. The Litany should not be used by itself alone instead of Morning or Evening Prayer on Sundays. The first exhortation in the Communion-office may, where there are frequent communions, be omitted at many of the services, but should be used from time to time. With regard to sponsors I recommend a recent ruling at home, which I have in some cases already referred to, that in those cases in which it is found impossible or extremely difficult to procure three godly sponsors, other than the parents, parents may be sponsors for their own children, there being one other godfather or godmother, as the child is male or female."

DESCRIPTION OF CHINI.—Chini itself, where the bungalow stands, is perhaps the least desirable spot in all the valley. It is one open, glarey, patronised by flies, and unpleasantly public,—a vulgar dakh-bungalow sort of a place, rendered all the more manifestly detestable by the contrast, both sublime and beautiful, offered by surrounding scenery. A tent pitched under any of the grand old cedars, scattered up the slopes rising above Chini, were a palace fit for a king. A few miles' walk along the road beyond Chini will expose scores of magnificent encamping spots, superior in every way to Chini, and afford a partial escape from that somewhat cocknified place, and its too curious inhabitants. Years ago the oidium, after damaging the plant in Europe slowly travelled to Madeira, and on, after a great pause, to South Africa, finally reached its long and deadly arms to India and the Himalayas. The vineyards of the Upper Sutledge, once so rich, suffered considerably, and the absence of sulphur to correct the disease has probably given the oidium an easy victory. The seedless grape of Kandawur was one of the luxuries of this mountain Capua, to quote that highly imaginative writer Dr. George Smith. Of two baskets of grapes sent by me from Chini to Simla, by a single coolie, one was received in good order. With relays of men there would be no loss whatever. A few marches to the north of Chini sharp to the left of the road, there is a grand pass from the Sutledge to the Ship Valley, a short cut, so to speak, 18,600 feet high. The Maneer or Mancerung, is a good specimen of the Himalayan pass, its crest in the month of May resembling a hurricane of snow; beyond everything sublime and cold; it might be a chip from the Antarctic regions set on end. The Spiti Valley is inhabited by Tartars—a curiously dressed, jolly, most ugly and very dirty colony. They still remember the Sikh inroad from Ladak, a mad-cap military freak, which is so far instructive as to prove that mountains are not the insurmountable barriers some low-land writers would have us suppose. Some of those Sikhs, I am told on good authority, finally reached Darjeeling. On the strong heights opposite to Dunker, a picturesque and natural fort that is across the river, there are ibex, the temples being full of their horns. These are forced to come down from ground the most inaccessible, to drink, and a stalker of ibex should therefore begin by mastering the position and geography of every water course. The upper peaks bounding the Spiti Valley are built up of a stone, so disintegrated and rotten as to make stalking a dangerous pastime. Ammonites, sacred in the estimation of Hindoos, and other fossils, abound. Is the reverence for the salikram, or snakestone, connected in any remote way with snake worship? Those fossils are prettily turned and polished at Scarborough, and having brought some to India, the consternation of my Brahmin friends may be imagined when they found their god converted into buttons! The Tartars break all fossils, believing that some of them contain gold.—Indian Daily News Correspondent.

PARTICULARS OF THE LOSS OF THE "ROTHESAY."

STATEMENT OF AARON FRASER, SEAMAN, ONE OF THE SURVIVORS.

On the 27th June we cast off the steamtug Challenge near the Outer Ridge Light Station. The weather at that time was exceedingly hazy, and there was a heavy sea running. We stood out in the direction of the lightship to put the pilot on board, but found that she had been blown off the station. The same evening we stood out to sea, the wind blowing fresh from the north-west, with a tremendously heavy sea. On the morning of the 28th we squared yards, and ran back in further search after the pilot brig; took soundings and found ten fathoms of water. Pilot John Elson consulted his chart, and said that if the brig had not been blown away she should be in sight, from the position in which the Rothesay then lay. Not finding the brig, the captain, with the pilot's consent stood out again to sea, with a view of putting the pilot on board the first inward-bound vessel. At four o'clock the wind increased, with every symptom of a cyclone impending. We were then under reefed three topsails, reefed foresail and mainsail, when the pilot advised the captain at once to shorten sail. We shortened sail accordingly, the ship labouring heavily. At nine P.M. of that evening the ship's boats and water tanks were washed away; donkey engine was also smashed. At four A.M. of the 29th the fore and main topsails were blown out of the gaskets, as well as all other sails that were reefed. At eight A.M. captain ordered boatswain to cut away mizen topmast and the foremast. The main being of iron could not be cut. Pumps were sounded, and twenty-six inches of water were found. All hands were called to work at the pumps. At twelve o'clock the wind died away. The pilot gave it as his opinion that the ship was then in the centre of the cyclone. At four P.M. the wind freshened, and at seven P.M. deck house was washed away. The wind during the whole night blew a hurricane. At day-light of the 30th ship was found to be in a sinking state. We were then in seven fathoms of water. At about half-past six the lead was again heaved, and five fathoms only were found. The crew were at this time lashed to various parts of the vessel for safety, tremendous seas breaking over the vessel constantly. The pilot then asked for volunteers to build a raft; the chief mate (who was the captain's son), myself and the boatswain, and a seaman named John Roach, volunteered for this work. Within two hours we had the raft ready for launching to windward. When a heavy sea took the raft from off the broken bulwarks, floated it over the side, at the same time breaking the captain's leg in two places, washing the second officer overboard, and fatally crushing the boatswain's mate. The raft was built on the wreck of the deck-house, so that it might be launched easily to windward. After the raft was launched we lowered the captain tenderly and secured him upon the raft; but as he said he felt that he had not more than an hour or so to live, he requested to be placed again on board, as he wished to go down with the ship. The chief officer (his son), the boatswain, and some others of the crew, also remained on board. The sea at this time was fast rushing into the ship's hatches, and she was almost down to the water's edge. The pilot then ordered all men who desired to get on the raft, when thirteen of the crew did so. The raft was then astern of the ship held by a rope. I jumped off the stern and made for the raft; the pilot followed me, and he was the last man to leave the ship. The pilot then ordered the hawser to be cut, and within an hour afterwards we saw the vessel heel over and go down. We drifted all that day and night, heavy seas breaking over us. We were all up to our chins in water, as having so many men upon it the raft floated low. All this night Pilot Elson, being a very powerful swimmer, swam round the raft in order to see to the lashings, which required constant looking to. At two in the morning one man, a Greek, Peter Lecoli, was washed off the raft by a heavy breaker; the pilot immediately made for him and brought him back; one or two more men, similarly washed off, were also saved by Pilot Elson. The pilot then suggested that we should remove the three booms, which in part held our raft from the top, and of these booms make a smaller raft, to relieve the men on the large one. The men were all suffering from the salt water, the raft being so deep in the water. The pilot, myself, a seaman, named John Butler, and another London seaman (name not known), who shipped in Calcutta, took to the small raft, and after getting on to her we lost sight of the large raft. I forgot to mention that, whilst on the large raft, a native boy, servant of the pilot, was completely helpless, but was carefully looked after by his master, who kept him near him, tended him like a child, and gave him our last supply of drinkable water. The smaller raft on which we were made of the three booms aforesaid, and was in the form of a triangle. During the night I fetched in every piece of wood that floated past us, to improve the buoyancy of our raft. Towards the morning of the 2nd, when the sun began to increase in power, the two men seated at one corner of the triangle became delirious, and allowed the lashings to go adrift. Later on the three spars of the raft got separated, and in swimming about in a heavy surf to get these together again, I and the pilot became very much exhausted. At about four o'clock a heavy sea washed off one of the delirious men, and within an hour after the other man shared the same fate. I then observed to Pilot Elson that we were the only two men left, and must try and fight it out, when he replied, "Oh! Fraser, I can't hold out any longer." I replied, "Pilot, you mustn't give up that way. I will see to the lashings—you remain quiet." I further said, "If you think you cannot hold on, I can lash you on." He then made some exclamation about his poor wife, and said, "I will hold on." I then turned to make fast the lashings, when a heavy sea broke upon us and knocked him off. I made for him in sufficient time to lay hold of him by the hair of the head, but my hand slipped from the raft. I found it impossible to hold him, and was forced to let him go, as I had great difficulty in regaining the raft. I then got the raft a little together, and lashed myself to it. I scarcely knew at the time what I was about, being so exhausted, and felt that I was about to share the fate of my companions. I cannot say how long I remained on the raft after this, for I became senseless. But I eventually (next morning) found myself high and dry on the beach, the part of it near the Balasore-road, and about sixteen miles from Contai. I managed to walk to a small house on the beach about two miles distant, where I learnt that of the eleven men on the big raft eight had come ashore, and three had been washed off. I subsequently reached Contai, where I found these eight men. The magistrato treated us with great kindness, and after a few days we were sent up to Calcutta.—Indian Daily News.

Miscellaneous.

THE INDORE RESIDENT.—Major-General Daly, C.B., proceeds shortly on leave for a short time to Simla, Colonel Watson, C.B., and V.C., taking his duties at Indore.

CHOLERA IN SHAHJAHANPUR.—Cholera has broken out in cantonments at Shahjahanpur. It was brought from the city. A cordon has been drawn round the station to prevent infected persons passing to other districts.

FINANCIAL.—Owing to the illness of Mr. G. Fitzgerald, officiating Deputy Comptroller-General of Accounts in the Financial Department, Government of India, Mr. E. W. Kellner has been temporarily appointed to officiate for him.

EDUCATIONAL.—Mr. J. C. Nesfield, M.A., Assistant Professor, Presidency College, Bengal, has been appointed to officiate as Director of Public Instruction in British Burmah, during the absence on leave for six months of Mr. P. Hordern.

KEMAON TEA.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, writing from Kemaon, says that the Kabul traders have this season purchased green tea to the value of Rs. 25,000 direct from the planters at the plantations, for the Kabul and Turkistan markets.

RHEA FIBRE.—The East Indian Railway Company intend carrying the rhea plant, stalks, and fibre at the second-class rate if tendered in half screwed and iron bound bales. This will be good news (says the Indian Daily News) to the competitors for Lord Mayo's prize at Shahjahanpore.

CAPTAIN LINDSAY.—Captain Lindsay, who was lately tried by Court-martial for drunkenness on escort duty when receiving his Excellency the Viceroy at Cawnpore, and was acquitted, is, we hear, to be again tried for being drunk in quarters, pending his former trial.

LIAKUT ALI.—The appeal of Moulvie Liakut Ali, who has been sentenced by Mr. Pollock, Sessions Judge of Allahabad, to transportation for life, was to be heard on Tuesday, August 20, by a full bench of the High Court, North-Western Provinces. Mr. Jardine, Government Advocate, appears for the Crown, and Mr. Dillon, pleader, appears for the defence.

AN UNFOUNDED IMPRESSION.—An impression appears to exist in some quarters that the Local Government proposes to levy a marriage cess in Bengal. The impression is a mistaken one. We know that there is no such proposal before the Government at present, and we think we may safely say that it is very improbable there ever will be.—Englishman.

SICK LEAVE REFUSED.—Mr. Campbell, says the Indian Church Gazette, in refusing leave on medical certificate to Mr. Herbert Cowell, Secretary of the Bengal Legislative Council, aims at establishing a precedent of an alarming character, which would make the position of the officers of the Government in this country all but intolerable. It remains to be seen whether the Government of India will confirm this ruling of the Lieutenant-Governor.

BREAK OF GAUGE.—The Allahabad journal hears it is rumoured that the latest convert—supposing him, indeed, ever to have held a contrary view—to the inexpediency of breaking gauge on the trunk lines of India is Lord Northbrook himself. There is perhaps some hope, late as it is, that we may not be irretrievably committed to a terrible blunder—a blunder against which such men as the present Commander-in-Chief and Sir Stafford Northcote, backed by almost all the chief engineering authorities in England, have hitherto protested in vain.

WILD BEASTS.—During the first half of the current year 1,404 wild beasts were killed in the Central Provinces, for which rewards were given by Government to the amount of Rs. 12,596. The beasts included 194 tigers and cubs, of which six were man-eaters, 464 panthers, leopards, and cubs, 256 bears and cubs, 254 wolves and cubs, and 236 hyænas and cubs.

CHOLERA AMONG THE TROOPS AT LAHORE.—Her Majesty's 37th have, we regret to learn from the Lahore journal, suffered greatly by the present cholera epidemic. The Sergeant-major and the Paymaster-sergeant are dead, and no cessation of the disease among the troops is yet reported. The artillery at Meean Meer and the 24th Punjab Infantry are also suffering, but the 18th B.C. are untouched. —Pioneer.

KASHMIR SILK.—Silk manufacture is making remarkable progress under the Government of the Maharajah of Kashmir. The silkworms of Sri Nagar are fed on mulberry leaves, and those at Jamun on Kanar. The silk produced at Kashmir has been much liked by men in the trade. The Maharaja has taken steps to procure men well versed in the art of manufacturing silk from Bokhara and Dacca. We hope soon to see Kashmir silk gaining a position in the market. —Lucknow Times.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The district reports from the Central Provinces continue to give favourable accounts of the prospects of the crops, but the health of the people does not appear to be so good. Cholera, which in the previous week was only reported in two districts—Nagpur and Khandwa—has now appeared also in Damoh and Hoshangabad, as well as in the Makrai State. Small-pox has been severe about Chaina, and still continues in parts of the Bilaspur district.

TRoubles of a Lieutenant-Governor.—Is it one of the "signs of the times" so much talked about that a number of Bengal natives have presented a petition to the Viceroy in which they charge Mr. Campbell, the Lieutenant-Governor, with antipathy against high education "as evinced in his attempt to cut down the B.A. classes in some of the provincial colleges, and reduce them to the level of high schools?" Poor Mr. Campbell! Badgered by native as well as European! It is a cruel fate even for a Lieutenant-Governor.

GOOD PROSPECTS IN RAJPOOTANA.—Our Rajpootana correspondent informs us that the rain in the Ajmere and Mhairwarra districts during the past twenty-five days has been almost incessant. The supply has been so abundant that the natives are eagerly looking out for a few sunshiny days to develop their khureef crops. It is anticipated there will be a most abundant harvest this year. Very little more rain is required to complete the storage of water in all the lakes, tanks and wells throughout the two districts. Thermometer at Ajmere 72 deg. at sunrise, 82 deg. at 2 P.M. The barometer still stands steadily at rainy. —Pioneer.

ST. PETER'S COLLEGE, AGRA.—On the recommendation of Sir W. Muir, the Government of India have, our Allahabad contemporary hears, instituted an inquiry into the possible causes of the remarkable outbreak of cholera in St. Peter's College, Agra, and its equally remarkable subsidence. We believe that the severe attack under which Allahabad has been suffering is directly connected with that Agra outbreak, the disease having been introduced into the railway lines here (from whence it spread into the lines of H.M.'s 19th) by some of the pupils of St. Peter's College, who had been sent to their homes on the outburst of the cholera at Agra.

NAWAB OF RAMPUR.—It is reported that the Nawab of Rampur intends to go on a pilgrimage to Mecca. Grand preparations have been made for the journey. Among other things, two embroidered screens worth Rs. 2,00,000 have been prepared—one for the Kaba, and the other for the shrine at Medina. He has also published a notice throughout his State promising to supply conveyance and food at his own expense to those of his subjects who would like to accompany him to the pilgrimage, provided they be sound and healthy in constitution, and that these liberal promises are likely to induce a large number of persons to accompany him.

FLOODS IN THE RAVEE.—On Monday, the 12th inst., a very extraordinary and sudden flood came down the Ravee. On Saturday night and Sunday heavy rain had fallen, and a most peculiarly dark storm cloud had passed towards the north, and this flood probably was the result of it breaking somewhere north of Lahore. The Ravee rose eight feet in an incredibly short time, and ran over all its banks. The boat bridge seemed to be heaved up above the surrounding country, and was a conspicuous object a long way off, whereas as a rule it is depressed below the level of the land round it. The temporary railway bridge for the Punjab Northern State Railway at Shadera, which still presented broken sections here and there across the bed of the river, sustained further injuries, and a large part of the remaining sections was carried down stream on to the bridge of boats. The stout old bridge, notwithstanding the unusual pressure thus brought to bear upon it, bore itself manfully against both flood and wreck, and though necessarily a little damaged from the struggle, is now as safe and as strong as ever. In such an unusual season as this, the success which has attended the care of the Rai Kunhya Lall, the Executive Engineer of Lahore, entrusted with the charge of the bridge, is well deserving of notice. —Indian Public Opinion, Aug. 16.

BENGAL SECRETARIAT.—A scheme for the revision of the establishment of the Bengal Secretariat has been submitted to the Government of India for sanction. By the proposed arrangements the post of the uncovenanted Assistant Secretary to the Government of Bengal is to be abolished, and two Registrars are to be appointed in the Revenue and Judicial Departments, respectively, who will perform the duties of that post. A few more assistants and clerks are also to be appointed, consequent on the increase of work. In the event of the proposed scheme being sanctioned, Mr. Thomas Jones, the Assistant Secretary, known all over India as the "Great Jones," will be provided for elsewhere.

RESINOUS PRODUCTS IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—In pursuance of instructions, a return of the resinous products of the Central Provinces has been sent in to Government. Of the many kinds named, only one, however, is of great importance—sticklac. It is found in immense quantities all over the provinces, but the low price at present paid for it prevents the collections being what they might. In two places only is the production of lac assisted by human agency; but the practicability of an extended scheme has been advocated, and there cannot be the least doubt that if, instead of trusting to chance for the annual propagation of this valuable insect, we were to establish in the wilds of Balaghat and Mundla lac plantations for rearing the cocoons, the supply would be enormously increased. —Pioneer.

THE KUKAS.—The Simla correspondent of the Bombay Gazette says:—Government is nervous about Kukas. They are in a seething condition in several parts of the Punjab, and if Ram Singh's release from his prison at Rangoon to the comparative freedom of the gentle and unobtrusive surveillance exercised over the late King of Delhi should result in his escape and reappearance in the Punjab, we should have to lament a few days' or perhaps weeks' slaughter and harrying in that fine province. To show how unreal is the calm affected by the authorities, I may mention that I have myself met more than one Kuka being hurried away to their native home, where it is considered these gentlemen might employ themselves more harmlessly than in surveying the horticultural beauties of Peterhoff.

COAL IN KABUL.—A Kabul news-letter informs us that a coal mine has been discovered in two places in the Yusuf Pass near Karra Kotal, in the Balkh territory, by the aid of the people of that place. The coal, the specimen of which was brought before to Kabul from one mine, burned very nicely, and was brilliant in colour, and heavy in weight. The coals of the other place, which have now been brought, burns somewhat slowly, and does not shine, though it is also heavy in weight. None of the coal of either description requires the aid of wood in burning; both of them burn well in an iron foundry with the assistance of bellows. The cost of excavation and of carriage is very excessive, partly on account of the great distance between Kabul and the mine, and partly because the road is difficult. A coal mine has also been discovered in Toorkistan.

THE CAMP AT HASSAN ABDUL.—It appears that the great objection against Hassan Abdul as the site of the Camp of Exercise—viz., the want of forage—is quite unfounded. There is at this moment an abundance of grass on all the hills near Hassan Abdul, and grass of an excellent quality. This will be cut and stacked for the use of the force. As regards the composition of the force itself, it will differ from the list we originally published only in the circumstance that the Punjab Government is unable to give as many of the frontier regiments as was at first proposed. From Abbottabad one regiment of infantry and a mountain battery will join the camp. The guides from Murdan. From Kohat one mountain battery, a regiment of cavalry, and one of infantry. From Bunnoo and from Dera Ismail Khan a regiment of infantry each. It has not been thought prudent to denude the frontier to a further extent than this. —Pioneer.

OFFICIAL SLANG.—In a recent order of the Punjab Government, it was directed, amongst other things, that "the use of slang phrases and of vernacular or provincial terms should be avoided in official English correspondence." This strict injunction seemed, at first sight, like some elephantine joke, but the following passage from Braddon's "Life in India," just published by Messrs. Longman and Co., to some extent clears up the mystery involved in it:—"Official conversation is often interlarded by technical terms in the vernacular of Hindostan, which might just as well be expressed in English had not custom made the native terms more familiar. Ex. gr. Brown, the collector, loquitur: Well, you know, Ram Bux got the izara (farm) of Begghinuggur from the zemindar (landlord) at a jumma (rental) of Rs. 2,000, paying Rs. 5,000 peshekkve (premium) and a nuzzur (gift) of Rs. 500; but when he came to settle with the ryots (cultivators), half of them put in claims to hold their lands lakhray (rent free) or at a low jumma upon istumrare pottas (leases in perpetuity), and he had to put them into Court. Then the rubbee and khurreef (cold weather and rain crops) were got in before he could collect his rents, and he had to make any bundobust (settlement) he could carry on.' These terms find their way into official reports, and these papers being further embellished by sundry Latin and French phrases, are often very polyglot indeed in their character." So that, after all, there is a good deal to recommend itself in the Punjab Government's order. —Times of India.

COLLISION.—We regret to announce that the steam ship Khedive, shortly after she swung round from her moorings at 1.30 P.M. on Tuesday afternoon, came into collision with the Canal steamer Aral, which had dropped down the river about a quarter of an hour in advance of her. The former vessel had just turned, and had been left by the harbour master in charge of the pilot, when the Aral suddenly made an attempt to reverse her position, going right across the Khedive's bows; when the latter, perfectly helpless, in order to avoid the accident, (as she was going at full speed, and a strong tide was with her), struck the other just abaft the foremast, cutting her down to the water's edge, and, unable to stop, proceeded apparently uninjured. The Aral backed, and, in so doing, struck the bank, which is very steep at that part, and as her fore-compartments filled, she slid off, and is now lying in eleven fathoms of water. Happily, so far as is yet known, no lives have been lost, and the fault seems to have been on the part of the Aral.—Englishman, Aug. 20.

A NEW CHURCH DIGNITARY.—The Rev. Mr. Baly, who has been appointed Archdeacon of Calcutta, arrived in Bombay by last mail from England, accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Baly and the Rev. W. Waterhouse. The latter gentleman preached at the Cathedral last Sunday morning, and at the evening service the Rev. Mr. Baly preached the sermon, taking for his text, "Soul, thou has much goods laid up for many years." His sermon was remarkable for being an extremely practical one, and created some little discomfiture as well as astonishment. The sinfulness of the rich in living to themselves alone, and delighting in fine houses, horses and carriages, good living, and the best of everything that this world can bestow, was pointed out in plainest and telling language, and the practical teaching which was applied to them and all others as well, was so marked and effective that there is no wonder the discourse was considered as unusually suggestive and practical. The vanity and empty ambition of the day will receive many useful lessons if the sermon on Sunday evening at our Cathedral is any indication of the future style of preaching of the new Archdeacon of Calcutta. The rev. gentleman and Mrs. and Miss Baly left Bombay for Calcutta on Monday morning, accompanied by the Rev. Mr. Waterhouse.—Times of India, Aug. 23.

WASTE LANDS IN ASSAM.—We greatly regret to find that the policy of Government in regard to waste lands is again placing it in opposition to the interests of planters. It is not our present intention to discuss this question in all its bearings, nor are we now finding fault with the Waste Land Rules themselves, as they at present exist, though, no doubt, there are features in them susceptible of improvement, but the grievance regarding which the outcry is now becoming so general is the policy of passive opposition pursued by district officers (it is whispered under secret orders from the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal) to all applications for grants of waste lands in the Mofussil—a policy which, in effect, renders the rules themselves a dead letter. The question is one of great and direct interest to all engaged in the cultivation of land in this country, whilst its indirect importance to the commercial world at large can hardly be over-estimated. We believe the question is at present under the consideration of the Landholders and Commercial Association, with a view to making a representation to Government, and we would recommend our correspondent and others who may have similar causes of complaint, to put themselves in communication with the secretary of that Association. The matter is one in which all interested should make common cause, and which, if properly represented to Government, will, nay must, be placed upon a proper footing.

OUR PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—General Strachey believes the P.W.D. to be the best managed department in India. Let us see what is the system in this department, and how new works are decided on and carried out. Things happen pretty nearly in this way: a new project is thought advisable, and some engineer with a certain number of assistants is deputed to make the necessary surveys, estimates, &c. When he has finished his work, he sends these in along with a somewhat long report. These estimates are frequently very rough, and not much better than an approximation to the probable cost. The roll of plans and estimates will lie in the office of the Chief Engineer or Joint Secretary of the province, until he may have time to examine into the merits or demerits of the scheme. Most likely more information will be called for, but after many months his approval, with certain alterations, will be given. The Chief Engineer, or Consulting Engineer for India in that particular branch, will then have his turn, and the result will be similar. The sanction of Government will after a delay of several more months be given, but it will only be a demi-official sanction. Shelter for the officers and more detailed surveys will be made, and the proper alignment will be laid out; this will take a working season, perhaps two; then the earthwork will commence, but the masonry works will be left still in uncertainty. Most likely the Superintending Engineer or the Chief Engineer will in the meantime have gone home on furlough, or have been transferred to some other work or province, and their successors will have different views of the best form of works, and fresh plans will be made and sent in. The second set of plans may be the final ones, so a corresponding time will be spent before any decision will be come to. Week after week and month after month will pass—and, as in the case of some of our canals, year after year—and no design be finally sanctioned; each new officer having his own ideas will alter, but at the same time hesitate at taking the responsibility of finally sanctioning these altered plans. Even when they are decided on, the Executive Engineer will be hampered with innumerable delays, interfered with in minute details, and called on for report after report on trifles.—Pioneer, Aug. 6.

HONORARY REWARDS.—The order of British India was conferred on a subadar of the Sappers and Miners at Secunderabad on the morning of the 7th Aug. Three men of H.M.'s 76th also received good conduct medals. The whole of the Subsidiary Force, numbering nearly 5,000 men, paraded during the ceremony in review order. Colonel Lumsden was received with the usual salute, and remained during the whole of the proceedings beside General DeSaumarez, who commands the Force.

DAMAGES BY THE CYCLONE IN NORTH ARCOT.—From a letter of the Acting Collector to Government, it appears that, during the storm that occurred in May last in the North Arcot District, fifty-two tanks were destroyed in the Vellore Taluq, the largest being at Munjoorput and Kammamoodrum. In the Arcot Taluq ninety-six tanks were destroyed, and the loss of cattle and grain was very large. Two hundred and fourteen tanks were destroyed in the Wandewash Taluq, and cannot be repaired for some time.—Madras Times.

DEATH OF YOUNG CIVILIANS.—The Madras Government have applied to Bombay for the services of some junior civilians, because the number in this Service has fallen so low that several collectors are left without assistants. This is owing to some miscalculation in the Secretariat, which brings out only two Civilians each year. The result will be that for some time to come we shall have assistants who look down on this Presidency, who do not know a word of the languages, and who have no wish to learn them. As there has been no unusual number of retirements lately, we fail to see what difficulty there was in calculating two years ago how many men would be required to fill up vacancies in the Service.—Madras Mail.

HYDERABAD.—Sir Salar Jung has given general satisfaction in his having appointed an East Indian gentleman, Mr. Charles, as Postmaster-General in H.H. the Nizam's Government. Mr. Charles is a clever man, and one of the oldest residents in Hyderabad. All the improvements in the Revenue Department were made by him, and it is to be hoped that he purposes introducing more of the English element into the Postal Department. We learn that the Department of Public Works of H.H. the Nizam of Hyderabad is to be reorganised. The present secretary has nearly drained it of all corrupt practices, and is gradually ridding it of the inefficient executive officers. The whole of the salaries are to be increased according to the new system. A new D.P.W. code is being prepared, and we soon hope to see in the Nizam's P.W.D. as efficient men as in our English Government.—Bombay Gazette.

DAOITS IN MYSORE.—A correspondent writes:—One of the most successful captures of daoits which has for many years been made in Southern India has just been effected by Captain Gordon Cumming, who was recently sent to the Toomkoo District for this special purpose. Within a month he has succeeded in capturing upwards of thirty-four individuals who have for some time past been the terror of the whole district. A long course of perfect impunity had rendered them so bold that they had regularly instituted a system of levying black mail from all the inhabitants, and they had executed regular bonds, promising not to commit daoities in the event of the annual payments to them by the villagers being regular. That a system of this sort should have gone on for years, as Captain Gordon Cumming's enquiries showed it to have done, is almost incredible. The daoits captured were tried at the end of last week by Colonel Pearse, and several of the ringleaders were sentenced to transportation for life, while the remainder were, on an average, sentenced to ten years' rigorous imprisonment. The delight of the usually apathetic villagers, when their dreaded foes were sentenced, can hardly be imagined. One man had been in prison in Mysore for seven years for a daoity, and had been able on his release to inspire such terror that the Government demands were not more regularly paid than his exactions. The people of this division are lucky in having an experienced officer like Colonel Pearse for their session judge. Had a lighter sentence than transportation for life been passed on these men, the parties who gave evidence against them would have been in a state of abject terror, anticipating the period of their release. I fancy the fraternity of daoits will remove the scene of their operations from the Toomkoo district for some time to come, and will go where they will not be so well looked after. I hear that in one district adjoining matters have become so bad that the magistrate has had to apply for a body of horse to patrol the streets of his headquarters' town at night.—Bangalore Herald, Aug. 17.

STATION TALK.

MHOW, Aug. 17.—We have had almost incessant rain throughout the past week, which has been most damp and dismal, with very little or no life stirring—no, not even on "the Mall," which is now in an evening all but deserted. We have had over thirty-five inches of rain already; and there are still six weeks of the wet season remaining. General Daly gave a ball at the Residency on Monday evening, which went off very pleasantly. Dancing was kept up to an early hour on Tuesday morning to the strains of the Nawab of Jourah's band, which is quite an institution in Indore, thanks to the Nawab's tutor, Lieutenant Wilson, and which plays out in the evening twice a week. General Daly proceeds shortly on leave to Simla, Colonel Watson, C.B. and V.C., performing his duties. An unusual and dismal sight took place in Indore on the station on Tuesday morning, when a convict was hanged for a murder committed by him a short time ago. The man was a chuprassee employed in the Thuggee Department, under Capt. Berkeley, and from unknown motives killed a comrade because he was found fault with while on duty. Dr. Beaumont, Residency Surgeon, and Captain Bank superintended the execution. All the Mhow station were present at Major-General Montgomery's ball on Wednesday night, which was a very pleasant one. The same evening the conductors and staff sergeants gave a dance in the house lately occupied by Colonel Tender, which was attended by a large number of their friends. Our spiritual wants are at last likely to be supplied, after having been upwards of a year without a chaplain, excepting an occasional visit from the Rev. Mr. Hacon from Indore. The Rev. Mr. Waterhouse has been appointed to this station, on his return from furlough, the Rev. Mr. Crommelin, our former chaplain, having taken an extension of leave. There are likely to be some transfers of the engineer staff of the State Railway. Mr. Bernards, who only joined last year from Bangalore, is now transferred to the Irrigation branch in the North-West Provinces. These frequent transfers come rather hard on men with large families and small incomes; and must be bad for the work.

DHOOLIA, Aug. 18.—The weather during the last fortnight has changed wonderfully, and the rain has fallen off considerably; in fact, we have had a succession of hot sultry days. Cholera is raging with great violence in Khandeish, and daily one is startled with rumours that it has broken out here or there. The greatest number of persons attacked appears to be in the Sowda districts on the N.E. extension of the G.I.P. Railway, when out of 338 people attacked between the 10th July and the 13th August, 127 appear to have died. In Bhosawal 46 deaths have been registered up to the present out of 107 attacked from the 25th July. The people are much alarmed at this dire plague. The Hospital Assistant telegraphed for from Poona to go to the Government Model Farm to assist, came there only to fall a victim himself, and the poor man died among strangers far away from his own home. Cholera appears to have deserted the Model Farm at Bhurgaum, but only to rage more fiercely all round. In the town of Bhurgaum (three miles from the farm) it is raging very fiercely at present, and assistance has again been asked for from the Medical authorities at Poona. It is to be hoped the sad death of the last Assistant will not deter others from doing their duty manfully. From the middle of July up to the present nearly 2,000 persons have been attacked, out of which 457 deaths have been registered. Every effort that human agency could make has been done to avert the evil, and the issue is left in the hands of the great Creator, who for his own wise purposes ordains these plagues for erring man. Mr. Duff, the Collector, goes on leave in September, and Mr. Thelwall, the First Assistant, being the senior next, is likely to act for him. Considerable changes are likely to take place in the Local Funds here. The most important is the abolition of the workshop. This is a step in the right direction, as I am informed that the workshop was nothing more than a drain on the local funds of the district, bringing nothing in. In fact, instead of paying itself as it was intended it should do, a large sum was appropriated monthly to pay the salaries of the foreman and establishment. Clergymen seldom visit this benighted station, except at rare, few and far intervals, something after the style of the proverbial "Angel's visits," although the chaplain at Deolalee or Malligaum, I think, is supposed to visit the stations of Dhoolia and Ahmednugger every two months. It is to be hoped that Argus-eyed dockers of salaries and allowances, the Accountant-General, will look over the travelling diaries of some of these reverend gentlemen. Dhoolia certainly has not been visited, I think, since March or April, and it was not till the matter was brought to the notice of the Lord Bishop that the "dear brethren" of Khandaish were noticed at all.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

TRUE CHARITY.—The Sindian records that two Warrant Officers' wives who were suffering from fever at Hyderabad were brought down to Kurrachee and lodged for treatment in the General Hospital. The matron being ill and away, Dr. Thorpe called upon some of the European females who are supported by the Trinity Church by grants of 10 rupees a month each. One of them responded, "Do you mean to say that I am going to attend upon soldiers' wives?" This much for charity.

KATTIWAR.—After all it seems that the Pradhan or Rajasthan Court of Kattiwar—the Federal Council designed to settle all disputes between chiefs and vassals—is not likely to be launched immediately. Difficulties have arisen. The Kharbarries can always find some plea for the perpetuation of chicanery and disorder; but we fear some handle has been given them by the high and mighty way in which the Supreme Government demanded the appointment of a very big revenue and boundary surveyor, instead of the Viceroy merely signifying the desirable end to be accomplished, leaving the Bombay Government to work it out by degrees and in its own way. Colonel W. W. Anderson's long talk of furlough will, in any case, commence from October next, and it is settled that the Hon. Mr. Ravenscroft will act in his stead. Possibly if the present arrangement for the Court of Conciliation falls through, that gentleman may afterwards be able to re-open the ball.—Times of India.

NEW CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.

Resolution No. 1,150A, dated Nynee Tal, July 31.

Read—The new Criminal Procedure Code, Act X. of 1872.

1. OBSERVATIONS.—The Lieut. governor directs the attention of all judicial authorities to the changes effected in the law by the new Code, which comes into force on Sept. 1 next.

2. Magistrates under the new Code are of three classes, corresponding respectively to magistrates exercising full powers, subordinate magistrates of the 1st, and subordinate magistrates of the 2nd class, under Act XXV. of 1861.

3. From the provisions of section 10 of the Act, read with the fourth and last clauses of section 2, it appears to the Lieut. governor that the conferment of powers under the old law is sufficient to carry with it corresponding powers under the new Act. But under section 42 all officers who, on Sept. 1, have powers as full-power magistrates, or as sub magistrates of the 1st and 2nd class, will be gazetted respectively as 1st, 2nd, and 3rd class magistrates.

4. The magistrate of the district has power under sections 23, 25, and 27 to invest magistrates subordinate to him, of the 3rd, 2nd, and 1st class respectively, with certain special powers in addition to those belonging to them by appointment. The Lieut. governor will invest all magistrates of districts with the following additional powers:—

(1.) Under section 48, to withdraw from the magistrates subordinate to them, whether in charge of divisions or not, such classes of cases as they think proper;

(2.) Under section 49, to distribute business among their subordinates by localities.

5. In addition to the powers which magistrates of the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd class may exercise in virtue of their appointment, and those powers which may be conferred upon them by the magistrate of the district under sections 27, 25, and 23, there are certain other powers enumerated in the last-named sections, which can only be conferred by the local government.

6. Commissioners of divisions are requested to submit, after consultation with the magistrates of the districts in their divisions, the names of all magistrates of the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd classes whom they would recommend for increased powers under sections 27, 25, and 23. Only magistrates of the 1st and 2nd classes can be specially empowered by Government to entertain cases without complaint; and only 1st class magistrates can be specially empowered by Government to make over cases to a subordinate magistrate, hear appeals from subordinate magistrates of the 2nd and 3rd classes, and make orders in nuisance cases.

Minor provisions and specifications of magisterial duties under the new Code follow, which are here omitted.]

SILK AND SERICULTURE.

The following is an extract from the proceedings of the Government of India in the Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce, dated Simla, August, 1872:—

Read an account of silk in India, by Mr. J. Geoghegan, Under Secretary to the Government of India in this department.

RESOLUTION.

The high price of silk, arising from the ravages of disease in the silkworm in the countries formerly contributing the greater portion of raw silk for European consumption naturally roused attention to the possibility of rearing healthy broods in regions hitherto untried, or of extending the productive powers of silk-producing countries still unaffected by the taint. In furtherance of these objects, a Silk Supply Association was formed in England on a basis analogous to that of the Cotton Supply Association, and India was the quarter to which the new Association turned its attention.

2. The Association accordingly applied to the Secretary of State for assistance in its efforts to stimulate and increase the production of silk in India, similar to that afforded to the Cotton Supply Association.

3. The Secretary of State with his (Revenue) despatch No. 27, dated March 31, 1869, forwarded, for the information of the Government of India, and for such consideration as might be deemed requisite, a copy of the papers relating to the formation of the Association.

4. The Government of India wrote to the Secretary of State in reply, assuring his Grace of its appreciation of the importance of the objects for which the Silk Supply Association had been established, and offering to render all the aid in its power to promote and extend the cultivation of silk in India, and to improve the quality of the article.

5. The correspondence with the Secretary of State was then circulated to the several local Governments and administration in the Bengal Presidency, with a request that they would give publicity to the proceedings of the Association, the papers being at the same time published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

6. But the first thing needful before taking action towards the further development of the silk industry in provinces where it already exists, or of its extension to other provinces where it is not yet established, was to collect such information as was attainable in regard to past attempts to foster sericulture in India, the degree of their success, if successful, and the causes of their failure, if the reverse, together with materials for a general review of the present position of all industries connected with silk in India.

7. Accordingly, all available records were got together, and a circular was addressed to local Governments and administrations, in which the following points were noted as those on which information was desired:—

"Places where silk culture has been pursued, with particulars of climate; extent of land under cultivation in mulberry, or other food for silkworms; quantity of silk produced; quantity and price of silk produced; kinds of silkworms kept, with their scientific names; method of rearing the worm; method of reeling the silk adopted; particulars as to extent of European enterprise; amount of silk woven on the spot, and nature of fabrics; quantity and value of silk exported (1) by sea, (2) by land; full particulars of any attempts or experiments made during the past thirty years, whether by Government or by private persons, with a view to improve or extend the culture; opinions of qualified persons, official and non-official (whether in regard to stock of worms, their food, mode of rearing, manipulation of silk, or on any other point), and improvements recommended."

8. The replies received at this call, and such other records as could be obtained from any quarter, were entrusted to Mr. J. Geoghegan, Under-Secretary to the Government of India in this department, for the purpose of compiling a careful account of silk in India, especially of the various attempts that had been made to encourage and extend sericulture, so as to assist the Government in coming to a decision as to the action (if any) which it might be expedient to take in the matter of promoting sericulture.

9. Mr. Geoghegan has accomplished this laborious task in a very creditable manner. The work produced by him is interesting and valuable, and it will materially help the Government of India in coming to a decision as to the steps to be taken in this important matter. The Governor-general in Council accordingly desires that the thanks of this Government be conveyed to Mr. Geoghegan, and that the compilation be circulated to all local Governments and administrations, the Chambers of Commerce, and the several Scientific and Agricultural Institutions now on the accompanying distribution list, with a request for further information, or for any additions or corrections that suggest themselves.

10. H.E. in Council also requests that Mr. Geoghegan will be good enough to continue to devote his attention to the subject, with the special view of procuring hereafter a more perfect second edition of his work.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of the foregoing resolution and of the compilation be sent to the several local Governments and administrations, the Chambers of Commerce, and the Scientific and Agricultural Institutions named in the distribution list, for the purpose indicated in paragraph 9.

Ordered also, that a copy be forwarded to Mr. Geoghegan.

THE LATE SIR WILLIAM H. WALKER.—Our obituary column contains the name of a gentleman who was very widely known in East Indian circles, Sir William Harrison Walker, formerly of the Hon. East India Company's naval service. He had completed his 72nd year at the time of his death. A son of the late Mr. Benjamin Walker, of Sittingbourne, Kent, he entered the service at the age of fifteen. From this he retired in 1839, on the expiration of the Company's charter; but subsequently commanded several ships trading between England and Calcutta. He was also a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, and Senior Professional Member of the Marine and Harbour Departments of the Board of Trade. He received the honour of knighthood last year, in recognition of his long and able public services under the Company and the Crown.

HEATHENISM AND CHRISTIANITY.

On Sunday week the Bishop of Carlisle, Dr. Harvey Goodwin, preached in Carlisle Cathedral upon the controversy which has arisen out of the recent speech of the Archbishop of Canterbury at Carlisle.

In the course of the sermon he said:—"When Bishop Heber wrote his exquisite missionary hymn, not so very many years ago, and spoke of 'the heathen in his blindness bowing down to wood and stone,' the facilities for becoming acquainted with those heathens were exceedingly different from what they now are. Then, no doubt, as now, there were distinctions among those whom we popularly class under one common name of 'Heathen;' there were philosophical speculators in India and China, and there were ancient civilisations based upon moral and religious teaching then as there are now; but it was only students who knew much about such matters. The ordinary mind simply looked upon the world outside Christendom as covered with one great oppressive cloud of darkness. But now it is impossible to deal with the question in that rough and ready way. The inhabitants of distant countries are constantly among us, and live with us on equal terms as members of our civilised society, and although that does not change the fact that they are not disciples of Christ, still it does very much to change the average popular estimation of what the work is which has to be done by Christians. Everyone must see that a portion at least of what we regard as the heathen population of the world does not consist of men such as Heber's hymn brought before our minds, not of men subject to the evils of gross idolatry, not men sunk in all the pollution of savage life, but educated men of high civilisation and refinement, who must be persuaded we have something to give them which they as yet want, something of which their civilisation and refinement are no sufficient substitute. Moreover, not only do we see more than we used to do of the unchristianised portion of the world, but the unchristianised portion of the world sees more of us. The Hindoos and Parsees and the Mahomedans can come and see for themselves, and they do come and see for themselves. The future of the Kingdom of Christ depends, humanly speaking, very much upon what those foreigners do see when they come to visit our shores. One would desire they should go back in the same state of mind as that which belonged to the Queen of Sheba, when she went to visit Solomon, and almost, if not quite, persuaded to be Christians; in fact, if England were what she ought to be; still more, if Christendom were what she ought to be, missionary work, so far as India is concerned, ought to be at an end—the natives ought to be their own missionaries. The spiritual influence conveyed by the constant passing and repassing of Hindoos and Englishmen between one country and the other ought to have the effect of introducing the gospel into India with far more completeness of effect than any society could attain. But what would be the impression made upon an educated Hindoo by the divided state of our opinions among ourselves? We may know that some of our so-called religious newspapers are the most irreligious of all newspapers, but he cannot know this. We may know or believe that our religious controversies not unfrequently represent the action of the most noisy and headstrong, not that of the most wise and prudent; but he cannot be expected to know this; and so the almost necessary result of looking upon us from the Hindoo point of view would be to make the Hindoo think little of our religion and look for the secret of our strength, not in that, but rather in our human science. He will be tempted to regard as our representative men not those who most earnestly preach or uphold the Gospel of Christ, but rather those who are notable for purely secular knowledge, or those who have tried to substitute for the definite religion of Holy Scripture and the Church that kind of atheistic philosophy which has lately been especially prominent, and which to a Hindoo mind will have such especial charms. The mischief would not be so great if the practical result were thoroughly good. But is this so? We must expect a Hindoo to form his judgment from the general impression made by that which commonly meets his eye, and not by exceptional cases of excellence. If we expect to move the Hindoos to join us, it must be by making our light to shine so that they can see it. The missionary's task would be comparatively a simple one if he could say to the natives of any heathen country, 'If you would only come home with me, you would perceive what a blessing it is that I am now offering to you. If you could see England, you would easily understand what I want to make your country.' To this test dare he hold up England as the proof of what his teaching can do? Whether he dare or not, his teaching must and will be put to this test. The Hindoos do come to see what a Christian country is, and if they go back disappointed or mocking, as some of them do, how can we be the 'salt of the earth?' How can we be the 'light of the world?'"

THE MAHARAJAH DHULEEP SINGH has taken a residence at Lowestoft for a term.

MONEY ORDER SYSTEM EXTENDED TO INDIA.—On the first of October next, and thenceforward, Money Orders may be obtained at any Money Order Office in the United Kingdom, payable at any place in British India. The Commission chargeable will be uniform with that charged on Money Orders issued on the British Colonies generally, viz.:—On sums not exceeding £2, 1s.; above £2 and not exceeding £5, 2s.; above £5 and not exceeding £7, 3s.; above £7 and not exceeding £10, 4s. No single Money Order will be issued for a higher sum than £10. Measures have been taken for the issue of Money Orders in India, payable at Money Order Offices in this Country.—General Post Office, 16th September, 1872.

FIELD GUNS FOR INDIA.—The authorities of the Royal Gun Factories, Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, have lately received an extensive order for 9-pounder muzzle loading field guns for India, to be constructed on the same principle and according to the pattern recently introduced for the field batteries of Royal Artillery in England. These are intended, it is understood, to supersede the bronze field guns manufactured both at the Dial-square, Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, and the Cossipore Foundry for the Indian service a few years since, when there was great faith placed in the bronze system—a system which has, notwithstanding its theoretical excellence and advantages, been thoroughly tested and found wanting.

THE JAPANESE EMBASSY paid a visit to the City on Wednesday last, accompanied by Sir Harry Parkes and General Alexander. They went first to the Mansion House, where they were received by the Lord Mayor, and thence escorted by him to Christ's Hospital, St. Paul's Cathedral, and the Bank of England. After visiting the Guildhall they returned to the Mansion House, where they were entertained at luncheon by the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress. The Governor of the Bank and Alderman Sir Robert Carden were also of the party. On Tuesday the Embassy paid a second visit to Woolwich Arsenal, where they spent six hours in the manufacturing departments, and took luncheon in the Ordnance Select Committee offices. They also paid a visit to the International Exhibition, and were much interested by the printing machinery there displayed.

THE BURMESE AMBASSADORS arrived at Edinburgh from Newcastle on Thursday afternoon, and were received by Lord Provost Law. Yesterday (Monday) they visited Glasgow, and were entertained at luncheon by the Provost and magistrates of the city. In returning thanks for the toast of the health of the King of Burmah, proposed by the Lord Provost, his Excellency the Envoy Extraordinary said he felt highly gratified at the kindly greetings with which they had been received in Glasgow, and he should not fail to communicate the fact to his Royal master. He had heard a great deal about the city of Glasgow in his own country—its wonderful manufactures, its harbour and shipping, and its gigantic commercial transactions. He trusted that their present visit to England would lead to bringing the nations, both politically and commercially, into closer contact, and that its result might be for the welfare of both countries and mankind in general. The Embassy visited various places of interest in and about the city. To-day they are to be presented with an address by the Chamber of Commerce.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.—The Indian Engineers, that is to say, the officers on the old Bengal, Madras, and Bombay Lists, complain that they have been badly treated. Their brethren of the "big guns," as they put it, have recently been afforded an opportunity of retiring by dozens on handsome pensions, whilst they have been offered no inducement to relinquish active life; the juniors of the Artillery having at the same time obtained a most undue advantage as regards promotion and future prospects. This smacks very much of complaint for the very sake of complaint, for if figures prove anything a glance at "Hart" will show that the Engineer John Company men have had the advantage over the "Artillery boys" for years past. In every grade the Artillery have found themselves superseded by those of the scarlet tunics. It was to compensate the Artillery for their loss of position, and at the same time to remove the state of stagnation to which the various lists had been reduced, that the magnates of the India-office were induced to do a generous action for once.

PILOT ELSON.—A correspondent at Portsea writes to us respecting the relatives of Pilot Elson, whose bravery and self-sacrifice were so conspicuously displayed in connection with the disastrous wreck of the ship Rothsay, shortly after leaving Calcutta, and the subsequent death-struggle on a raft. A subscription for the relief of Elson's widow has been started among the merchants of Calcutta, the sum of 6,000 rupees having been obtained when the last mail left; and our correspondent points out that the gallant fellow (who had also in 1868 been shipwrecked and adrift on a raft) has a widowed mother living in Landport, and that he was in the habit of supplementing the miserable parish dole of which she is in receipt by occasional remittances. These, of course, are entirely stopped, and the old woman is now left wholly dependent on the parish of Portsea, except what little additional support she can receive from two daughters, who themselves have a hard struggle for existence by doing needlework. The case of this poor woman, taken in connection with her son's heroism, will at once commend itself to recognition by the many thousands whose hearts were stirred by the story of Elson's marvellous self-sacrifice.—Daily Telegraph.

THE FAILURE OF MESSRS. LEGATT AND CO.—In the Bankruptcy Court, on Friday, before Mr. Registrar Hazlitt, Mr. Robertson Griffiths applied for the extension of an interim injunction granted last week staying further proceedings under an attachment levied at Bombay by the National Bank of India (Limited) on 13,000 bales of cotton. Mr. T. Plews, on behalf of the bank, consented to an extension of the injunction until after the meeting of creditors, but he desired publicly to deny the statement that the bank had continued the proceedings at Bombay after the Court had granted an injunction in the first instance. The attachment was lodged before the filing of the petition for liquidation, and had merely ripened by operation of law, but it was a mistake to suggest that any further proceedings had been taken. A statement had also gone forth that the debtors had failed in consequence of the stoppage of Messrs. Gledstones and Co.; but, so far from this being the case, it appeared that the latter were creditors for £65,000. His Honour said that as statements had gone forth which were now contradicted, he had no doubt that due publicity would be given to the contradiction of those statements. An extension of the interim injunction was then ordered by consent.

INDIAN MINES.—"J. C." writes to the Times:—A few days since there was mention made in your pages, of which I have also private advices by the same mail, that diamonds had been found near Simla. In 1863 valuable indications and minerals were found there, but it is not British territory, and the Rajah refused to make any terms with the discoverer, who therefore declined to show his "find." Iron and salt are the only minerals worked by the natives near the Himalayas. The latter brings the Rajah of Mundi an income of Rs. 300,000 per annum.—A lead mine has been opened at or near Sabathoo by the Rajah and a few Europeans, which promises some success, but the greatest source of silver is from the "silver country of the Vazeers," "Vazeeri Russi," in "Kulu," one of the last places visited by the late Lord Mayo. This has become the right of a European, to whom the Government granted a lease of a mine at Shigri, north of Kulu, "being the first mineral lease ever granted by the Government of India."—There are still plenty of diamond mines in India, but the exclusiveness of the native princes and the apathy of the English Government leave them unexplored and unworked. As Harry Emanuel says, India now sends no diamonds to market.

THE SASSOON ORGAN.—A series of concerts have lately been given in town on the grand organ built by Messrs. Bishop and Starr, the gift to the Town Hall of Bombay by Sir Albert Sassoon, Kt., in honour of Prince Alfred's visit to that city in 1870. One of these performances, on Saturday, September 7, was by Master Percy Mull, son of the proprietor of the Times of India, a little boy of twelve years of age. We should hesitate to give our impressions of the marvellous genius displayed by this child, but for the universal testimony to it of the highest judges of the musical world. The formidable programme—consisting of the masterpieces of Mendelssohn, Handel, Rossini, and Bach—he got through with such perfect power of interpretation and ease of execution that he at once placed all criticism out of question, and raised the surprise and admiration of a learned and accomplished audience to enthusiasm. In fact, the child playing from these masters was a re-creation of their works. Where all was so perfectly done, it is unnecessary to refer to the programme in detail; but we could not help remarking that the child's feeling for, and his treatment of, Bach's music was like a boy enjoying his favourite game which he felt sure of winning. Few of the most accomplished and matured players can master Bach. It is needless to say more, but we cannot conclude without congratulating Mr. Mull on the card he has drawn, in his son, in the lottery of the life of man.

NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of this company was held at the City Terminus Hotel, on Tuesday last, Mr. R. O. Campbell in the chair. In moving the adoption of the report and accounts he pointed out that the net profit on the half-year was £42,011. 12s. 10d., which was sufficient to wipe out the balance of £33,406. 15s. debit of profit and loss account in December last, and pay an interim dividend at the rate of 3 per cent., and carry forward £1,635. 10s. 4d. Many, no doubt, would have thought it better not to pay any dividend at present, but carry the whole amount forward; but the board was anxious to give the shareholders some return for their investment, and so justify the prediction that had been made of their prosperity, which he doubted not would continue. The shareholders would remember that in the hour of their misfortunes in China it was suggested by many that that branch should be closed, and under the feelings of disappointment caused by the nonfulfilment of their hope of success, the board were not at first indisposed to listen to the proposal, but thinking it better not to act hastily, had decided on keeping it on, and were now reaping the advantage of that course. The branch there was good, and formed a very valuable auxiliary in their exchange business. In Calcutta and Bombay they had a fair share of the business, and he might fairly say they had turned the corner, and the public seemed to think so too, for the shares were rising in the market, the deposits increasing, and at no time were their bills at better rates relatively to the other India banks on the East or the discount market. He felt sure the progress would be satisfactory, and concluded by moving the resolution, and that the dividend be paid on and after the 16th inst. Mr. E. W. Wingrove seconded the motion, which was carried.

THE NEW K.C.B.'s.—Major-General Sir George Bouchier, C.B., of the Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, whose promotion to the dignity of a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath appears in another column, is an officer of high standing and meritorious services. He was born about the year 1819, and entered the Bengal Artillery in 1838. He became first lieutenant in 1841, captain in 1853, major in 1858, lieutenant-colonel in 1861, and full colonel in 1864. His services are thus enumerated in "Hart's Army List"—He served in the Gwalior campaign of 1843-44, and the battle of Punnia, for which he obtained a bronze star. He commanded a field battery during the Indian Mutiny, and was present at the actions of Trimmooghat on the 12th and 16th of July, 1857; he was also present at the siege of Delhi, at the actions of Bolundshuhur and Agra, at the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde, and the defeat of the Gwalior contingent at Cawnpore, for which latter service he was repeatedly mentioned in the general's despatches; he was nominated a Companion of the Bath in 1858, and his name also appears in the list of officers to whom rewards have been given for distinguished and meritorious services. Colonel Sir Charles Henry Brownlow, C.B., of the Bengal Staff Corps, is an aide-de-camp to the Queen, and his name appears in the "Indian Army List" of 1867 as commanding the 20th Regiment of Native Infantry, and also in the cadre of officers of the late 4th European Native Infantry. His appointment to the service dates from 1847 or the following year, and he was nominated a Companion of the Bath in 1864.

THE USE OF QUININE IN INDIA.—Mr. C. T. Buckland, the Commissioner of Burdwan, writes to the Times respecting the use of quinine in connection with the fever which still ravages Burdwan:—"It has fallen to my lot officially to superintend the operations connected with the relief of the sufferers from the fever for the last three years, and the only medicine which has been at all efficacious has been quinine. Owing to the great cost of quinine, the medical authorities have been compelled, by the ordinary rules of economy and Budget estimates, to attempt to use cheaper substitutes, and it has been necessary for me to use the most forcible language in demanding an unlimited supply of quinine. I am not blaming the medical authorities, but I merely beg to express the most unqualified opinion that quinine is the only remedy; and it was with the greatest satisfaction that I saw a few weeks ago that the Indian Government had telegraphed for a special supply of 500 lbs. of quinine for the use of Burdwan. As the fever will almost certainly break out again in October and November, it is to be hoped that this supply is already on its way to India. In almost my last conversation with the late Earl of Mayo on the subject of the Burdwan fever he was speaking of the results to be expected from the cultivation of cinchona in the Government plantations at Darjeeling, and his lordship expressed a hope that the time would come when the Government would be able to supply quinine at one shilling an ounce in India, whereas the last ten pounds which I got direct from the Government stores in Calcutta cost rather more than six shillings an ounce. If Lord Mayo's anticipation can be fulfilled the importance of this cultivation to Government and the people committed to our charge is incalculable. The magistrates and medical officers of Burdwan, who, in spite of severe personal suffering, have perseveringly ministered to the wants of the native community, are most deservedly entitled to the praise which you have awarded to them."

THE COLONELS' QUESTION REDIVIVUS.—An Indian correspondent of the Broad Arrow asks Mr. Cardwell on what principle majors' promotions are to be made in the Royal regiments in future? The warrant states that promotion up to the rank of major is to be regimental, and for the command of a regiment seniority tempered by selection. In the face of the warrant, how can the promotion of Major Wilkinson to the command of the 16th Lancers be reconciled? If he has been selected as being the right man in the right place, it is throwing a slur on all majors of cavalry senior to him. Colonel Wilkinson has only sixteen years' service—a captain of '63 and a major of 70. Compare his seniority with other cavalry majors, taken from "Hart":—In the 1st Dragoon Guards a major has 24 years; 3rd ditto 29 years!!; 11th Hussars 24 years; 12th Lancers 20 years; 15th Hussars 23 years; 18th ditto 34!!!; 19th ditto 24 years; 20th Hussars 30 years!; 21st ditto 26 years. Are none of the majors fit for the command, or is Colonel Wilkinson's promotion a hint for them to retire? I see the senior major of the 18th Hussars was a brevet lieutenant-colonel three years before, and a regimental-major six months after, Colonel Wilkinson got his company. Now, for promotion to the rank of captain, Lieutenant Pole, of the 13th Hussars, was promoted regimentally to captain, with six years' service, yet Lieutenant Jee, of the 5th Dragoon Guards, of the same service as Lieutenant Pole, has been superseded by Lieutenant Peters, of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, being promoted captain in the 5th Dragoon Guards. I thought one of the arguments in favour of the new regulation was that non-purchase would help those who have been unlucky in promotion, but judging by the promotions lately made I think interest alone will regulate promotion. Who is to blame—the Duke for recommending or Mr. Cardwell in promoting? In the abstract we do not personally care how promotion goes; all we want are well-marked rules, and that promotion should be given strictly in accordance with those rules.

Will no M.P. help us to get properly defined rules?—Q IN THE CORNER.—India, August 11, 1872."

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE SON OF TIPPOO SAHIB.

The Times remarks that the death of Gholam Mahomed, the last surviving son of Tippee Sahib, and the head of the family founded more than a century ago by Hyder Ali in Mysore, is an event which, if it does not possess political significance, has at least an historical interest. When the capture of Seringapatam and the death of Tippee Sahib finally broke the Mahomedan rule in Mysore, Gholam Mahomed was a boy of six or seven years old, and in the honourable captivity, for such it really was, in which he has since lived, he had no chance of showing great qualities or of acting a greater part. Yet the power of his name, it is said, over the imaginations of the Mahomedans in India was never entirely extirpated, and in his place a daring intriguer might more than once have given us trouble at times when we had quite enough on our hands. The wisdom of dealing liberally and kindly with the representatives of princes defeated and deposed is illustrated by the case of the heir of Tippee as well as by others that will be readily remembered, and the policy of the Indian Government in recent years has kept this end steadily in view. The Mussulmans of India the Indian census shows to be more formidable even in mere numbers than was supposed. They are, too, as we have been lately reminded, peculiarly susceptible to the temptations of conspiracy and rebellion. It is to be hoped that the Government of India will succeed in satisfying some of their justifiable aspirations, and though they must never hope, under our equal rule, to win back the predominance they enjoyed and abused under Hyder and Tippoo, they will, with kindly and generous treatment, learn in time to forget the evil traditions of ascendancy, and to accept frankly the benefits of an impartial Government and an equitable social system.

THE BISHOP OF CARLISLE ON "THE HEATHEN."

The Pall Mall Gazette asks if any considerable body of English people really imagine that they are either the salt of the earth or the light of the world? If they do, it may be an act of charity to break down their absurd vanity by such arguments as the Bishop of Carlisle's; but to imply that they are by telling them to act up to their character is disguised flattery of a very vulgar kind. Suppose a nurse were to say to the child under her care, "What a naughty child you are to be speaking to little common children as if they were your equals!" would the lesson be one of humility or pride? If preachers were to preach to advantage, and to base what they have to say upon facts, the very first fact with which they have got to deal is that Christianity does not produce the effects which, according to certain views of it, it ought to produce; that all sorts of different opinions prevail in perfect good faith as to what constitutes it; that in the most Christian countries the great mass of mankind do not really believe in it with the faith which influences their conduct and moulds their character, but only acquiesce in it in a superficial, half-hearted way. To take it for granted that this is all wrong, the result of ordinary negligence which can be removed by appropriate admonition, and that matters may be set to rights by reminding congregations that the Hindoos are looking at them, is like giving a man a glass of water to clear his throat of a consumptive cough. What a Hindoo or any one else who looks at the condition of England with open eyes will learn from it is plain enough. He will see one of the most intelligent, vigorous, and prosperous nations in the world actively engaged in leading the life which suits it. He will find in it, among other things, many religions, and in particular several forms of Christianity, each of which is believed by a considerable number of persons with various degrees of energy, from enthusiastic belief down to mere acquiescence. He will see that the enormous majority of the nation, without being altogether indifferent to religion, are very far indeed from being enthusiastically attached to it, and that far the greater part of their thoughts and actions depend upon totally different principles. Above all, he will see that, whatever according to theological theories ought to be the case, religion is no more the whole of life, or even the supreme guide and ruler of life, in Europe than it is in India. He will perceive, in short, that such sermons as the Bishop of Carlisle's are in the nature of reproaches to men for not living up to an ideal which never has been realised, which never can be realised, which hardly anyone wishes to see realised, and which in some particulars is habitually transgressed or modified by people whose consciences do not reproach them for such transgressions and modifications. That all this is true in fact no one can deny. Of course it is another question what is the proper inference from the fact; but, at all events, let us begin by recognising its existence. It would be a great gain if the clergy would do so in real earnest, and would once for all discard from their sermons reproaches as unmeaning as an exhortation delivered by a judge in former times to John Doe or Richard Roe to give up his litigious habits would have been. When they had done this, they or anyone else who was interested in the subject might well say to Hindoos, Go and see England if you want to know the nature of the work that Englishmen are doing in your country. If you look at it with intelligent eyes, you will see a sight which you will never forget as long as you live, and which will give you more new ideas than you will know what to do with.

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES & COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA,

As Originally Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, M.A., M.D., F.R.A.S.,

Reporter on the Products of India.

Folio, half-morocco, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

This work—by affording a Key to the Fashions of the People, and to the Cotton, Silk, and Wool Textiles in actual use in India—is of special interest to Manufacturers, Merchants, and Agents; as also to the student and lover of ornamental art.

"We congratulate Dr. Forbes Watson on having produced so useful and so practical a work, and on having diffused knowledge upon all material points connected with the clothing of the people of India, which heretofore had been unattainable. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costume and portion of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere description. The colours, too, of the various fabrics are given from the articles themselves, and we would in particular invite attention to the plates at page 118, all or most being figures of respectable Mohammedans in Upper India, in rich dresses, as conveying excellent impressions of colour and effect in Native Indian costume."—Times.

PEPSINE.—The popular and professional medicine for Indigestion is Morson's Pepsine, the active principle of the gastric juice. In Powder, Lozenges, Globules, and as Wine.

CHLORODYNE has now obtained such universal celebrity it can scarcely be considered a speciality, its composition being known to most European practitioners. Many of the Chlorodynes of commerce are not of uniform strength; this has induced Morson and Sox to compound their preparation. Sold in ½-oz., 1, and 2-oz. bottles.

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA: A SERIES OF PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN,

ORIGINALLY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF

AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

EDITED BY

J. FORBES WATSON AND JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale.

The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super-royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 5s. per volume.

The First and Second Volumes are still on hand.

From the TIMES.

"We gather from the Preface that this work grew to its present handsome dimensions from a very modest commencement. It originated in the wish of Lord and Lady Canning to take home a private collection of photographs which might serve to recall the scenes and incidents of their Indian life, but as it advanced its importance began to be perceived, and Government, with a most judicious expenditure of public money, took it in hand. Very few of the photographs are unaccompanied by descriptions, often copious and graphic, of the subjects they illustrate, and the result is a singularly varied panorama of human life and character exhibited under almost every conceivable aspect. Although these four volumes deal with only a portion of the empire, there is scarcely a type of character, from the loftiest to the most debased, that is not to be found in them, and nowhere else, perhaps, in the world are peculiarities of character so strongly marked and sharply defined as in India. We might exhaust far more space than we can afford without giving the reader at all an adequate idea of the strange varieties of character to which these volumes introduce him."

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, August 30; Agra and Madras, August 28; Calcutta, August 27.

THE accounts of the spread of cholera in various quarters are far from cheering. The disease has broken out in Jalandhur, and Mooltan, it is spreading in the Central Provinces, and raging furiously in Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir, where out of 367 seizures in one day, 144 ended fatally. In and around Lahore 101 died out of 198 attacked in one week of August. A timely change of wind seems to have abated the pestilence in that city; but meanwhile a serious outbreak of the disease in the Central Jail had caused the removal of some 1,500 convicts into camp. At Kussowlie up to the 21st August twenty-three out of forty-one cases had proved fatal, while at Dagshai only eight had died out of twenty-two attacked. The disease has also appeared "in a mild form" at Lucknow. Among the victims to cholera at Allahabad was the Rev. F. Fagan, the Civil Chaplain, whose death, as the Pioneer observes, will be "felt as a personal sorrow by numbers beyond Allahabad." Few chaplains in India have so deservedly endeared themselves to all who have known them by gentle manners combined with a blameless life and a loyal discharge of duty.

New suggestions for treating cholera in its various stages are continually challenging the public notice. The latest of these comes from India, where a doctor has written to one of the papers recommending chloral hydrate as a means of controlling the dreadful collapse from which so few have hitherto recovered.

GREAT fears are expressed for the safety of that section of the East Indian Railway which comes near the Ganges at Ghoga, between Colgong and Bhagalpûr. Before the end of August the river had encroached on the railway three hundred feet, and it was feared that during September the remaining hundred and fifty feet would be overflowed, and part of the embankment carried away. Every care has been taken to watch and haply to arrest the approaching floods; but the fear is that all such measures will only mitigate the threatened mischief. The river appears to be cutting for itself a channel in one of its old beds, part of which underlies the railway embankment. When the water comes up to this sandy layer, it is expected that the sand will get washed away, and the upper part of the embankment will fall in.

IN compliance with instructions from the Supreme Government, that of Bombay has appointed a Committee to report on the estimated returns on a railway from Carwar to Gadak, on the probable cost of improving the port of Carwar, and on the amount of traffic likely to be diverted thither from other ports in the neighbourhood. The Committee consists of Mr. W. Have-lock, Revenue Commissioner of the Carwar district, Colonel Anderson, Settlement Commissioner of the Southern Mahratta Country, Colonel Wilkins and Lieutenant-Colonel Hancock, of the Royal Engineers, and Mr. Currey, Agent for the Bombay and Baroda Railway. The objections to the line proposed have already been forwarded by the Viceroy to the India Office; his Lordship meanwhile admitting, as he safely might, that the line in question "ought not to be built at present if it is thought unlikely to prove remunerative." At the same time he declines to overlook the imperial benefits "which would result from opening at least one efficient port on the western coast in addition to Bombay."

IT is stated by the Bombay Gazette that Mr. Erskine, on the plea of ill-health, has declined to act as Chief Secretary to the Bombay Government when Mr. Ravenscroft goes to Katiwar. It is probable, therefore, that the post in question will be conferred on Mr. Peile, the Director of Public Instruction. From the Bengal side, we learn that, when Sir John Strachey retires next March, his place in the Supreme Council will be permanently filled by Mr. E. C. Bayley, now acting for Mr. B. Ellis. Mr. Dampier will then succeed Mr. Bayley as Home Secretary. It is also asserted that Mr. R. S. Ellis will succeed Mr. Arbuthnot in the Madras Council.

THE new reservoir at Toolsee, in aid of the Vehar Lake, which supplies Bombay with water, was formally opened on the 21th August.

THE Sutlej, like the Ganges, shows threatening symptoms of a desire to change its bed. Between Ludiana and Ferozpur it has broken through the high road in eleven places. Lower down, the same unruly stream has baffled the attempts of our engineers to keep it within bounds at a spot where the Indus Valley State Railway was to be carried across it. The works devised for its repression have been washed away, as well as a large office building with nine domes, at a loss to Government of about thirty thousand rupees.

AMONG other items of news, we note that the Indian Government has given a lakh of rupees—£10,000—for the relief of sufferers from the Burdwan fever, that Captain Gibson has been honourably acquitted of the charge brought against him, and that Captain Lindsay has been acquitted on his second trial for drunkenness.

IF civilisation means general freedom to sell adulterated goods for genuine, Madras must be very backward in that respect. A native milk-seller has actually been sentenced, at the Madras Police Court, to two months' rigorous imprisonment for merely offering for sale milk diluted with water. Imagine the outcry that would be raised in England if a virtuous milk-seller were treated on the same principle, for mixing other things than water only with his milk! If England ever retrograded to that extent, we should even hear of brewers and publicans being sent to the treadmill for hocussing our beer.

ACCORDING to the Englishman, a company, with a capital of seven lakhs of rupees, in hundred rupee shares, is to be started at Kanhpur—Anglice Cawnpore—under the title of the Muir Cotton Mills Company (Limited).

A BOMBAY telegram of September 20 states that the Viceroy will hold a grand investiture Durbar on the 16th of November, at Bombay, and not at Umballa, as was previously announced.

ACCORDING to a Calcutta telegram of September 18, the Khivan Envoy has had an interview with the Viceroy at Simla, and delivered a letter of courtesy for the Queen. In a private interview he asked the good offices of the Viceroy with the Russian Government on behalf of the Khivan Government. Lord Northbrook declined, as we said he would, the matter not being one in which England could possibly interfere; but, in answer to a request for advice, he recommended the Khan to restore the Russian prisoners, and enter into friendly communication with the Russian General at Tashkend.

FROM Bokhara the telegraph brings dreadful accounts of the cholera raging there; as many as a thousand deaths a day are said to be taking place.

WE are glad to hear by telegram that financial prospects in India are altogether promising.

A VERY doleful and quaintly worded petition from "B. Marshalla and others" has lately been published in the Calcutta Gazette. The writer of the petition details the grievances of those who sign it in that kind of Baboo's English with which some of us have long been familiar. The petitioners "respectfully beg to acquaint the time when the Company's Government monopolised as a charter party in India; during the time of Lord Clive he organised a system in India and was then carried on in a different scale." In those days the people were contented. "We all were in a body praising them for their welfare that they may continue in the same position." Under the rule of her Majesty's Government "we supposed that we should be better off. The act has been changed in a different light." The petitioners therefore implore the Government to "make some sort of alterations with regard to our embarrassment." They are at present "suffering and lingering." "Gentlemen are taxing us both right and left, and not allowing us to gain an honest livelihood for to support ourselves and family to carry on any sort of business or trade, that are charging us so much licenses and taxes, such as trade license, income taxes profit, water taxes, gas-light, house rate, police taxes, wheel taxes, horse taxes, refuse taxes, and different others. One person to pay so many sorts of taxes and licenses! Such extremes is unbearable. . . . Poor people are all dying for food and suffering from wants only on account of the said licenses and taxes." With a faint echo of Scriptural language they complain that "the small mite" has been taken away from them, that their families are starving, and no one hears their cries for mercy. Then comes another dash of Biblical allusion to "our Heavenly Father who protects us, and to love one another," followed by an exact quotation—"Naked we came out of our mother's womb and naked we shall return." Remarking that "neither the money nor the richness will follow us in the grave," and that all alike, "the crippled as well as old and the young, rich and poor, high and low" are subject to the same God before whom there is no difference, the complainants further protest against the exclusion of natives "above thirty years old" from the Government service. In conclusion they beseech the Viceroy and his Council to "consider and please gravely look into the subject and pass such orders that we poor British subjects can live in a state of happiness and can be free from all this trouble."

THIS touching document having been passed on to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Mr. Campbell admits that the municipal taxation of Calcutta is "high for an Indian city;" is proportionally heavier in effect than the average local taxation of England and Wales; is more than four times as high as the taxes in the suburbs of Calcutta, which barely average Rs. 1½ per head, more than thrice as high as the taxation of Howrah; and "six or eight times as high as the municipal taxation of Bengal towns, such as Dacca, Patna, and Moorshedabad." A taxation reckoned at Rs. 5½ per head is also materially higher than the Rs. 4½ per head levied in Bombay. It must however, thinks Mr. Campbell, be borne in mind that Calcutta is just now paying heavily—about 8½ lakhs a year—for a very complete system of drainage and water-supply, the profits of which it is already beginning in various ways to reap. Admitting that there are "a good many different rates and taxes, he points out that of the 17½ per cent. taken from the rental of house property 10½ per cent. is paid by the owner. As for the trade and carriage and cart taxes, they are defended on economical grounds. "They do perhaps raise a little the price of food and of all commodities; but if people live in large towns they must be content to pay somewhat higher for necessaries of life than in the country; and on the other hand they have the advantage of higher wages and a better market for their labour." In the General Municipal Bill now before the Bengal Council provision is made for abolishing all fees for the use of public latrines. With regard to other burdens Mr. Campbell objects to interfere with the action of the Calcutta justices. Calcutta however has certainly "a great deal to show for its expenditure," and the deaths are barely half as numerous as they were six years ago. The pressure of taxation moreover is said to be no heavier on the poor than on the rich; some of the taxes named in the petition being paid by the rich only. Finally, with reference to the age of admission into the public service, Mr. Campbell recommends no change, holding to the belief that "young men who are entering on life" will serve the Government better on the whole than men "who have tried and failed in other careers." "Your poor petitioners" in short would seem to have gained nothing from their appeal. Perhaps they deserved to gain nothing; but people who are confessedly groaning under heavier burdens than those of an average English town will hardly be comforted by learning that fewer of their townsfolk die yearly than they once did, that the poor are not more heavily taxed than the rich, and that other Indian towns are far better off in respect of taxation than Calcutta.

IF the Indian papers are correctly informed the whole number of unemployed officers doomed to compulsory retirement under the conditions of the Duke of Argyll's despatch will amount to less than fifty—in all likelihood to much less. On the Bombay side it is said that only five officers will be called upon to retire. If this be so, the new order concerning them would seem to be superfluous, for the power it places in the hands of the Indian Government already existed, however sparingly it may have been wielded heretofore. We can only hope that none of the officers touched by the new order will be punished over again for offences committed long ago. However mercifully the local governments may enforce the new rules, the result will hardly be free from suspicion, in view of the manifest desire of the ruling powers to cut down the military expenditure. The retirement of so small a number will bring about no material saving, while it is almost certain to prove the groundwork of a new grievance, swelling the list of those which Parliament will ere long be invited to consider.

THE frequent unhealthiness of Meeanmeer has been ascribed to various causes, but perhaps the most efficient among them seems to have been overlooked. If we remember rightly, part of the cantonments have been built among the ruins of old graveyards long since abandoned to decay. If any of the water supplied to the barracks comes from this neighbourhood, the prevalence of cholera and other diseases need cause no surprise. In the time of Ranjit Singh Meeanmeer is said to have borne an evil name from the pestilence which once prevailed among his troops there encamped. Be that as it may however, if Meeanmeer is not to be abandoned, something should be done to improve the water-supply. On this point Dr. De Renzy has offered a good suggestion through the Times. He proposes to employ two or three hundred of the convicts at Meeanmeer in pumping water from the canal into a covered reservoir capable of holding a week's supply. The cost of this reservoir and of a covered conduit to the station would not, he thinks, be great, while it would secure a supply of wholesome water for all classes at a cheap rate.

THE high price of coal in England ought, one would think, to discourage the use of English coal on all Indian railways which could get coal of anything like workable quality from the newly-discovered beds in Central India. Much of the working expenses on the railways in Western India are due to the heavy cost of coal imported from England. No doubt the Indian coal hitherto discovered cannot be compared for railway purposes with English coal; but even the Great Indian Peninsular line could surely be worked more cheaply with fuel from the Warda Valley than with that sent over from this country. The cost of railway fuel on the Bombay side has hitherto averaged double that of the Bengal lines, which draw their coal from Raniganj. The Bombay companies should take a hint from those English ones which have lately begun importing coal from Belgium rather than pay the increased English prices. According to a writer in the Times, the coal beds of India cover an area of 50,000 square miles, and in average thickness far exceed those of the United States. Already fourth on the list of coal-bearing countries, India may yet prove equal to any in respect of actual quantity of coal. The Godavery and Warda fields alone equal in extent the whole productive area of England. Many of the coal seams are forty or fifty feet thick, and some as much as a hundred. It is a pity that the coal is so inferior in quality to our own; but if it be no worse than that of Raniganj, it ought easily to be made available both for the Bombay and Madras lines.

In a circular addressed to the various Chambers of Commerce in this country, Mr. Cooper, the well-known traveller, has once more taken up his old theme of commercial intercourse overland between India and Western China. The Panthay embassy, headed by Prince Hassan, son of the Mohammedan potentate who has wrested a large province in Western China from the rule of the Chinese Emperor, is about to return to Talifu, and the Prince has given Mr. Cooper leave to accompany him on his homeward journey. An unquestioning believer in the efficacy of commerce as the harbinger of peace, prosperity, and general enlightenment, Mr. Cooper asks for his countrymen's sympathy and support in his efforts to extend to China those blessings which "the noble and self-denying efforts of an army of missionaries have failed to bestow." To none of the schemes hitherto put forward for tapping the inland trade of China from the side of India, has he given his adhesion. He is "simply advocating the opening up of trade in those channels which are found to be most practicable." Seeing how little is yet known of the social and commercial prospects of Yunan, as brought out by the political changes of the last twenty years, he is inclined to look upon the scheme of a railway from Rangoon to Yunan as "premature and obstructive of private enterprise," pending the attainment of further information. Nor has he much hope of diverting by such means more than a fraction of the trade of Sze-Chuan, four-fifths of which already find a sure and lucrative outlet in Eastern China by means of the Yang-tse river, reaching Hankow in ten and Shanghai in fourteen days. More than half the province of Sze-Chuan is a wild and thinly-peopled country, from which very little traffic can be expected. Mr. Cooper also warns us against counting on any help from the King of Burmah, towards a project whose chief supporters have openly expressed their desire to relieve that monarch of his dominions. Some day perhaps a closer acquaintance with the circumstances of Western China may warrant the investment of a moderate capital in the Rangoon and Yunan Railway. Meanwhile, says Mr. Cooper, the best way of establishing a trade-route is to "penetrate Yunan, and gain such statistical knowledge of the country, its population, products, and capabilities of sustaining a large trade, as will justify us in asking the assistance and protection of the Indian Government." In the interests of trade he protests against urging the Government to send out expeditions involving large outlay and some political entanglements for no commensurate result. His sole aim at present is, with such help as the merchants of England may grant him, to try and find out the requirements of Yunan and the best mode of supplying them. That done, his commercial patrons might select the safest and most convenient route; and if all turned out well, the nation could then be invited to lay out money on railways or any other mode of transport which it might prefer.

MR. COOPER'S appeal is strongly seconded by Mr. McClure, of Manchester, in a circular which dwells on the interest displayed by many statesmen, merchants, and men of science in Mr. Cooper's scheme. In addition to the goodwill of the Burman Court and the French missionaries in China, Mr. Cooper, we are reminded, enjoys the crowning advantage of friendly intercourse with the Panthay Prince Hassan, who will one day rule over the broad realms conquered by his father from the Chinese. In order, therefore, to promote an enterprise that promises so well for our trade, Mr. McClure asks for help from all friends of commercial progress or geographical discovery, "so that the expedition may be extended further than a private purse will admit." It is worth noting in this connection that Prince Hassan took no little interest in the factories he visited during his stay in Manchester, and is leaving England with the firm intention of helping to open up a trade route through the Panthay country.

FIELD MANŒUVRES.

Writing in the Times upon the lessons of the last Autumn Manœuvres, a well-informed critic bears witness to a great improvement in all branches of the service. The movements of the troops were freer, the designs better planned and better executed. "The officers of the Army are better instructed and more eager for fresh knowledge than they were twelve months ago, and the men are vastly improved in marching capabilities." In praising the work done by part of the cavalry, the same writer evidently agrees with the military critic in the Echo, who speaks of the performances of Colonel Baker's cavalry, alike in masking the movements of their own side, in detecting those of the enemy, and in covering retreat, as "lessons taught by a master." The handling of the artillery in the Southern Army also appears to have been worthy of the highest praise. If the Northern Army was unlucky in its leaders or its staff, or both together, its Southern rival appears on the whole to have been well served. One thing however in these manœuvres came out with undeniable clearness; and that was—the need of a thorough change in the tactical training of our officers and men. After all the experiences of recent wars, and the lessons we ought to have been learning from the German campaigns in France, it is odd to read of regiments advancing for hundreds of yards in solid formation under a fire in which nothing could have lived, of cavalry making splendid charges against overwhelming numbers strongly placed, of guns maintaining a duel with infantry only three hundred yards off, and of two infantry regiments blazing at each other across a lane. As the Times critic points out, to every question which a foreigner might ask us concerning the proper way of moving troops under certain conditions, of advancing, for instance, against a wood, attacking a village, crossing a stream, or defending a hill, we should still have to return but one answer, "deploy into line, covered by a line of skirmishers." In the face of the changes wrought by the new arms, great and small, it is everywhere felt by thoughtful observers that the tactical training of our soldiers must speedily undergo a radical change if we would avoid untold disasters in the next war, which may at any moment be forced upon our hands. Nor does anyone of the slightest military experience doubt that the cardinal feature of the new system will be found in a large increase of independent action among subordinate officers of every class. Under the new conditions of fighting, it is clear that the issue will largely depend on the right handling of small and scattered bodies; and that end can only be secured by a training likely to develop higher qualities than implicit obedience and sheep-like readiness to follow your leader at all hazards.

On these and many other points connected with the art of war Lieutenant Maurice of the Royal Artillery has discoursed with equal learning, shrewdness, and clearness of exposition in the Essay which lately won the Wellington Prize.* The keynote to his masterly treatise on the Field Manœuvres of the future is struck in the opening sentences, which assert the need for a thorough change in the very basis of the system hitherto employed for tactical purposes in the English army. Starting from Colonel Hamley's definition of manœuvres as "the quick orderly change of highly-trained and flexible masses from one kind of formation to another, or their transference from point to point of a battle-field for purposes which become suddenly feasible in the changing course of the action," he proceeds to apply the lessons of the late war to the problem for whose solution the Duke of Wellington had offered a prize. Too good a soldier to ignore the experiences of former wars, and too sensible a critic to draw wide conclusions from scanty premises, Mr. Maurice shows himself none the less firm a champion of many sweeping reforms in our system of field-manœuvres. If the breechloader has not rendered the study of former wars unnecessary, it has at any rate forced upon fair-minded thinkers the immense importance of adapting our modes of fighting and marching to the new conditions involved in the use of a weapon which carries many times as far and shoots many times as fast as the old musket. The data furnished by the late war may not always or in all respects satisfy the impartial critic; but from the sources already open to us we may gather plenty of useful hints as to the direction which all reforms of existing tactical processes ought to take. It is certain, for instance, as Mr. Maurice points out, that "the distinct formal movements by which an army is made to assume throughout a similar or a corresponding formation, are no longer possible in presence of modern weapons. It is absolutely essential . . . that each small section of an army should be moved in such manner as the local circumstances impose," its freedom of action being limited only by its general relation to other parts of the army.

Freedom of action within certain limits for every officer, sergeant, and corporal, is one of the points on which Mr. Maurice most strongly insists. Each corporal should be responsible for the men under his command, each sergeant for twelve men and two corporals, and four sergeants with their complement of men should be placed under one subaltern. Four subalterns with their commands would make up a whole company from 200 to 250 strong, commanded by its captain, and four such companies might form one battalion; each captain having large discretion left him as to the movements of his own company. Instead of the old formal advance in line, each battalion would throw out a company in skirmishing order, with another company in support on either flank and a fourth held in reserve. Henceforth, in fact, the line of battle will resolve itself into an extended line of skirmishers, with their supports conveniently near them; while the guns will generally be massed at certain points of vantage in the rear. Close formations will only be possible out of cannon-range or under good cover. The chief use of columns will be to supply skirmishers with a succession of supports and reserves. These supports should never, in Mr. Maurice's opinion, be formed in line when opposed to artillery fire, because the new tactics employed by German gunners and the great help derivable from range-finders would tell more fatally against troops drawn up in line than against open columns.

According to Mr. Maurice, and he has good reason for what he says, the whole system of infantry manœuvres ought to build itself on the movements of a small squad of men under a sergeant. Each section with its four squads should be trained to manœuvre as an independent company, and the advance of a company would form the model for the advance of a whole brigade. How to give each small body the utmost freedom of action without risk of losing its place and usefulness as part of a larger body, is a problem which can only be solved by the most careful training of every officer and private in his proper duties. The old habit of obedience will not be enough. Every man, above all every officer, must learn to think and act for himself as a responsible member of an intelligent and harmonious whole. We must worry our soldiers with fewer parade-drills and field-days of the old showy pattern, and accustom them instead to frequent rehearsals of the manœuvring best suited to future autumn campaigns.

On the uses of cavalry also Mr. Maurice has something to say. In spite of the breechloader, he holds that infantry already shaken and disordered from various causes may almost certainly be crushed by good cavalry taking them unawares. Such cavalry will also have many opportunities of a dash at field-guns, when these are widely separated, as they often will be, from the infantry they are meant to support. Light horse in large bodies, supported by cuirassiers, will serve to protect the army from any movement of the hostile cavalry towards its flanks or rear. In covering the march of troops, in masking their movements, in scouting, in working with horse-artillery, and in following up a disordered and retreating foe, their usefulness will be at least as great in the future as in the past.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

UNEMPLOYED OFFICERS.

The Bombay Gazette owns itself curious to watch the working of the late order regarding the retirement of unemployed officers. We take it that a polite invitation to accept one grade of pension higher than that to which they are entitled will be sent to each General doing-duty Field Officer, backed by the alternative of compulsory retirement to those against whom any record of delinquencies can be raked up from the archives of the Adjutant-General's office. That there are such records most people are aware. When the unemployed list was larger than it is now, we believe these officers were classified under some such heading as—first, "unqualified;" second, "failed;" third, "unfit for any appointment of trust;" fourth, "mentally or physically unfit." Off-reckonings, promotion to Major-General, retirements, and mortality have carried away a good many of the old gentlemen whose names were entered in one or other of the columns with the above flattering headings; but there may possibly be some left with black marks against their names, whose days as full Indian pay and allowance warriors are numbered. In a former article we warned the unemployed that the authorities were laying their heads together to devise some mode of shelving them, before they lived long enough to earn the much coveted off-reckonings. Except that a man who knows that he may have been scheduled as we have described may not like to stir the dirty water, it is not unlikely that those who may now get their choice between becoming voluntary or enforced pensioners should petition to be allowed to serve out their thirty-eight years, on the grounds that their little shortcomings having been condoned for so long, it is a hard case turning them adrift at their present comparatively advanced age, when employment at home is most likely unobtainable, whereas if they had had the same hint given them eight or ten years ago, they might have succeeded in getting into the Irish constabulary or some civil occupation. The measure steps on the confines of repudiation, and some litigious old men may sue MacAllum More "and others" if they consider themselves hunted. Indians in Parliament will have their hands full of petitions for presentation. The late Colonel Sykes will be a great loss to the compulsory retired officers. The proposed scheme is, on other hand, very liberal to the good boys, who are out of employment from no faults of their own, but are simply the victims of circumstances, and also to many whom it will suit entirely being allowed to work out their time in England, instead of returning to eke out an existence in a land from which they have nothing to hope, and where, as far as they can foresee, their chance of ever coming to the front is nil. The very fact of their rank shuts them out from all but the higher appointments, which are already either all filled, or for which deserving men are already marked down. By the present ruling they retain the advantage of being available for active service in the event of a war—forming, in fact, a reserve force of officers on full English pay. We hope before very long to see them regularly incorporated in the British Reserve; and are glad, for our own sakes and that of other taxpayers, that Government have at last arrived at an appreciation of the fallacy of the actuarial statement that it was cheaper to pay the Indian Colonels a thousand a month in India (on the chance of course of their "becoming casualties") than the English pay of their rank at home. The actuaries' calculation was naturally based on the per centage of mortality of troops in India compared with troops in England, but they obviously never took into consideration that by a little judicious manœuvring these fine old misused individuals managed to pass their existence in about the finest climate in the world, viz., the plains of India in the cold weather, and the Himalayas in the summer; and are consequently calculated to outlive most of their fellow-countrymen of an equally advanced age, who have to brave the changeable, and to them somewhat trying, climate of Great Britain.

EFFECT OF RAILWAYS ON TRADE.

The Englishman remarks, that two singular and not altogether felicitous coincidences have occurred in connection with Mr. Samuel Laing's evidence before the Indian Finance Committee. We have already noticed one of these in the circumstance that just about the time when his roseate views of the prospects of the opium revenue reached the Indian public, they were also put in possession of a report by the Consul of Hankow, giving a somewhat startling account of the increased cultivation and consumption of the China drug. So, at the very time when the replies, in which he identifies the great commercial progress made by India during the last ten or twelve years with the influence of railway communication, were received in this country, the report of the committee, showing that the traffic of the country has almost entirely forsaken the railway and returned to its old routes, was published. It seems obvious at first sight that, if the great bulk of the trade of the country is carried by other routes than the railway, and much even of what was once carried by railway has preferentially adopted other means of conveyance, the benefit conferred by it on the trade of the country cannot be so great as Mr. Laing supposes; and one is naturally led to suspect that the late increase in our trade must be owing to other causes than the introduction of railways. Yet, when we come to put ourselves the question whether railway communication could be entirely stopped without seriously damaging the trade of the country, we shall find it very difficult to answer in the affirmative. Coming to examine the question more closely, we shall see that there is really no contradiction involved in these apparently conflicting conclusions. Indeed, so far from this being the case, it would be quite possible that no goods should be carried by railway at all, and yet that the railway should be of essential service to the trade of the country. The conduct of trade is dependent quite as much on facilities of personal and epistolary communication as on facilities for the transport of merchandise. And there can be no doubt that railway must tend greatly to develop commerce by promoting the former class of communications, even though they may not be used for the latter. One of the first effects of railway communication is to diminish the number of hands through which produce passes. This is especially the case in a country like India, where all but the wealthiest class of native merchants who have agencies of their own prefer disposing of their goods on the spot to despatching them to a distant market, of which they have no personal knowledge, and which they probably have never seen. If communication by letter is at the same time slow and uncertain this disinclination to operate at a distance is naturally increased. Now, as regards the greater part of the country in the neighbourhood of the East India Railway line, Calcutta was in former days such a distant and unknown market to ninety-nine out of a hundred native merchants, that they would as soon have trusted their produce to London or Liverpool. The moment the railway was opened, this was altered. What was a journey not to be undertaken, except under the influence of some such emergent necessity as could seldom occur in the entire life-time of men of this class, became one of a few hours, or, at the most, of two or three days. If the bania himself was not at once tempted either by curiosity or a desire to make a better profit to undertake the journey he would soon hear so much from the multitudes travelling to and fro about the ease with which it might be accomplished, and the prospects of advantage it held out, that he would not be long in acquiring the necessary courage. Supposing him to possess sufficient capital, it would, in many cases, be only necessary for him to see for himself, in order to seize the opportunity of trading direct with the port of exportation. As a matter of fact, there are at least half-a-dozen merchants sending produce to Calcutta now where there was one before the railway was opened, though many of them may not be employing the railway for the conveyance of the goods. Obtaining higher prices than formerly, they have a greater temptation to extend their purchases, and the result is that in the end the ryot gets higher prices too. It is not only personal knowledge of Calcutta that is necessary to this; it is equally essential that the trader should be able to keep himself promptly informed of changes in the market, of the arrival and sales of his goods, of the state of his account, and the like. A ready means of remittance is also of great importance. Now, in all these points railway communication is of the very greatest benefit, and its stoppage would throw difficulties in the way of these men, which would ultimately lead them to return to their old system of selling on the spot.

INDIAN GOVERNMENT.

The Friend of India holds that perhaps the very first requisite in the Government of India is indubitable strength. The people of India never appreciated, and never will appreciate, a weak ruler, be he Governor-General or Lieutenant-Governor. They will appreciate a reasonable man, a thoughtful man, a man who will weigh circumstances and facts before he ventures upon theory; but a weak man, a vacillating man, in the seat of Government, they abhor. India has had some strong rulers and some weak ones, but, as a rule, the English rulers in high authority have been strong. Perhaps it is owing to the peculiarities of the two races. The restless impetuosity that brings a man out to India when he might be comfortable at home is a sort of guarantee that he will hold his own. The East India Company had two aims in electing its governors—first, it required strength and capacity; secondly, it required docility and a genial view of men and things. The directors hated one of the best men ever sent out by the Company to India—Sir Charles Napier. He was the man to save an empire, but he would brook no abuses. Far less politic than Clive, honourable and unselfish to the last degree, a Bayard in peace and war, he yet wanted those gifts which were absolutely necessary to accommodate an Eastern people to a Western rule. Clive took the country as he found it. He was strong in every sense of the term strength. He was truer than the rest of men with whom he came in contact. Unquestionably he was a better Governor than if he had even a truer conscience and a less inexorable will; and though India has no interest in will without conscience, in will with conscience, in inexorable justice, in a determination that never quails, she has a strong interest. We throw out these remarks as a hint to those whom they concern. The things first of all indispensable in Indian rule are strong will and stern justice. A just man, for instance, would draw no more from the resources of the country than was absolutely necessary, and would not suffer any man, or body of men, to grow rich at the cost of the poverty of the people. But he who dares to do this must not only be just but fearless. No other course possible would make so many powerful enemies, but no other course leads to so certain and enduring a fame. Such a man must, of necessity, strike all round, at all rogues, European or native, and he will earn the opprobrium of rogues while he wins the honour and gratitude of honest men. Even, however, if there were no gratitude, even if there were no honour, none the less would it be to the advantage of the individual Governor that he possessed an inexorable will. Otherwise he has no security for peace and ordinary comfort. Once let it be understood that a Governor-General or a Lieutenant-Governor is ready to be guided by other minds, even when opposed to his own, and his lot is far from enviable. Every time he yields to influences, social or political, is the step to a fresh yielding. The true rulers of India, we say, have been men who thought for themselves, acted for themselves, and never suffered any influence to sway them when there was a great right on the one side and a great wrong on the other.

UNPRECEDENTED RAIN IN UMBALLA.—On the night of the 10th Aug. and until day did break, there was indeed a deluge. The whole of the bazaars were flooded, and the distressing cries of the natives, husbands looking for their wives, anxious mothers bemoaning the loss of perhaps their only ones, were indeed distressing. On that eventful but unfortunate day many were deprived of a home. Three little children were seen struggling in the impetuous but unrelenting waves, and were swept away nobody knows where. Such a day of desolation has never, to the memory of the oldest inhabitant, been known. On visiting the large nullah that divides as it were the Cantonments from the Sudder Bazaar, another sight came to view, beast struggling against beast, endeavouring to stem the tide, but all alike doomed to the same fate. The regimental bazaars did not suffer so much, being better constructed, but fear was entertained that the smaller bridges of the railway would be damaged, and steps were accordingly taken to avert any portending accident.—Public Opinion.

THE RECENT WRECKS.—In the proceedings of a Committee of Inquiry into the wrecks of the Champion and Rothsay, it is said that the barometers of both vessels indicated the approach of a storm, and the Committee are of opinion that in the face of this warning it was imprudent to proceed to sea. They recommend that a general order should be given to the officers of the Pilot Service, warning them against proceeding to sea from Saugor anchorage during the months of June or July, when the weather is threatening and there is already wind and a low barometer. The Lieutenant-Governor has asked for the opinion of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Master-Attendant on this recommendation of the Committee. His Honour himself has doubts as to the expediency of issuing such an order, "for we do not know for certain which are the worst cyclone months; while we believe that cyclones may occur in April, May, September, and October, as well as during the months named by the Committee. It would manifestly be inexpedient thus to fetter the discretion of masters of vessels during half the year. At the same time there is very much to be said for the Committee's view; and whatever be the result of their recommendation, it will be an advantage that the attention of masters, owners, and shippers, should be directed to the views of the Committee."

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, Aug. 17.—You will receive my military items by telegram, and I have really little else to tell you. I am told that Captain Gibson has been honourably acquitted of having accepted an illegal gratification in regard to some boundary settlement, in Rajpootana, so far as I can recollect. I do not telegraph this news, as my authority is not official, and I believe the young officer himself knows nothing as yet of the finding of the Court. The fatal case of cholera at the Lawrence Asylum at Sonawur has been reported in a very unbusinesslike way; we are left to guess whether it was amongst the children or among the teachers or inferior staff. The Assistant Commissioner has issued the following notice:—

“Travellers whose way would under ordinary circumstances lie through Kussowlie, are informed that under present quarantine arrangements no native is allowed to leave Kussowlie without a pass, and any native may be subjected to quarantine. Natives are, however, allowed to pass round below Kussowlie by the lower circular and cart roads under police escort. J. W. GARDINER, Assistant Commissioner, Kussowlie. —Kussowlie, 14th August.”

It has not been thought necessary to march out the 85th from Dugshai. Only the prisoners have been sent under canvas. The chief mortality appears to have been amongst their number. The usual detachments for the Solon standing camp and rifle butts will go out as soon as weather permits, but it is not thought that the cholera is so bad or so dangerous as to warrant all the men being marched out in this variable weather. The question of Simla or no Simla will be settled directly Lord Northbrook returns. I expect there will be a council and a handful of secretaries and personal assistants at Simla next year, but the under-secretaries and the working bees of the establishments will remain in Calcutta. This is much as I told you before. Mr. Wynne has been added to the committee of which I have already informed you.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

SIMLA, Aug. 23.—Illness has been the cause of my long silence, but really there has been no news of importance or interest to send you either by wire or by post. The weather until a day or two ago has been abominable. Rain, fog, and wind have been continually with us severally or conjointly, and congestion of the liver has become fashionable. Lord Northbrook wisely went off to Chini to get out of the unpleasant atmosphere. His energetic private secretary Captain Baring stayed behind, but the weather had its effect upon him too, and he has gone into the interior to try the effect of change of air. Other big men have left this vaunted sanitarium also. The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, Sir Richard Temple, and “a select circle” have all thought it better to move a little way from the delights of Simla in the rains. An official known here as A.E.O. writes to the Indian Daily News, severely admonishing the Simla correspondent of the Englishman for not falling in love with a climate which has tortured his liver and his temper; but Major Pendennis is not the only one who has had to confess that there are drawbacks to even the attractions of the Indian “Capua.” Ladies and gentlemen of official position, who dread, like A.E.O., the removal of the Viceroy’s Council and the Departmental offices from Simla, are loth to own that their boasted sanitarium has not been quite so healthy of late as they could have wished. Doctors Moir and Mantell, the civil surgeons in charge of the stations, have had their hands pretty full of patients, and Doctor Bradshaw has also had numerous calls for his services. We have not had cholera amongst us, although it has been killing Europeans at Kussowlie, Dugshai, and Subathoo, but we have had other complaints too numerous and too painful to mention. But there has been a break in the foul weather, and to-day the sun is having a struggle with the fogs as to which shall be master, and he seems likely to be victor. Lord Northbrook is expected at Peterhoff to-day, when political life will resuscitate and I shall have, I daresay, something to tell you by telegram or by letter. Since Lord Northbrook went upon his little excursion trip, discussions have been going on regarding the question of the Simla exodus, and certain newspapers have been contradicting one another as to what has been done by his Excellency in the matter. One journal affirms that a Committee has been appointed to decide upon the advisability of locating certain of the public offices permanently at Simla—a contemporary contradicts this, and declares that no Committee has been ordered at all, and things are to remain “as you were.” The truth is that a Committee was ordered by Lord Northbrook on the evening of his departure for Chini, to report regarding the cost of the removal of the Government to Simla, and to consider whether some reduction in the expense of that removal might be made by leaving the whole or a portion of any of the departments or offices in Calcutta. The order did not give the Committee the option of considering the advisability of locating any of the offices at Simla. If they go into that question they will simply exceed their instructions. The members of the Committee are:—President: Mr. G. H. Batten. Members: Mr. J. Geoghegan, Lieutenant-Colonel A. B. Johnson, Lieutenant K. C. Pye, R.E., and Mr. R. H. Hollingbery. Three at least of those gentlemen are known to be strongly in favour of Simla as the spot were official men work best and draw their salaries with the greatest satisfaction to themselves, but the restriction put upon them in confining their suggestions to the Calcutta side of the question leaves them rather powerless. Sir John Lawrence wittingly or unwittingly allowed a rush of Departmental officers to Simla—the cost then to the public was something enormous, and although “Honest John,” as his friends chose to designate him, promised an inquiry into the cost—the result of that inquiry, if it ever was a real one, has never been published. Mr. Fawcett may perhaps ask for it some of these days, and if it be produced, I think it will require at least an additional chapter from Colonel Malleson to his already published panegyric on Sir John Lawrence and his administration. If the truth could “leap to light,” there would be no more disgraceful expose of weakness in high places, amongst the many exposes already made regarding our rule in India. I much doubt, however, if the truth will be allowed to take any leap but—“a leap in the dark.” The Committee will, it is said, give in their report immediately after Lord Northbrook’s return. The moment I learn the result I shall inform you. I must continue my obiter dicta to-morrow, as it is just post-hour.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-COLONEL HOWARD.—Lieut. Colonel Edmund William Eardly Howard, Bengal Staff Corps, died at Almorah on the 20th instant.

ALLAHABAD.—Mr. Mayne, the Commissioner of Allahabad, has been very ill. On Saturday, Aug. 22, his condition was considered very critical. On the evening of Sunday there was a slight change for the better.

MILITARY.—There is no truth in the report that Brigadier Wilson wishes to exchange his appointment at Peshawur for the command of the Eastern Frontier. Amongst those under this gallant officer’s command, says a Punjab contemporary, the wish was father to the thought!

GENERAL MCMURDO.—General McMurdo is understood to be about to resign his command at Rawul Pindee, and leave the country for good next month. The announcement of the General’s departure is said to be “everywhere received with feelings of the deepest regret.”

STATE RAILWAYS.—With regard to the alternative proposals for the extension southward of the Delhi and Rewari metre gauge railway, the Governor-General in Council has finally ordered that the line shall proceed from Rewari, via the Bhowal crossing of the Sabi river, through Khartal, Ulwar, Rajgurh and Baswa to the neighbourhood of Bandikuri, on the Agra-Sambhur line. The exact spot of the junction is reserved for settlement, but Major Stanton is empowered to proceed with the rest of the work departmentally at once.

PROGRESS OF CHOLERA.—We read in the Times of India, the death from cholera is announced of the Rev. Feltrim Fagan, chaplain of Allahabad. Very distressing rumours relating to the awful ravages of cholera among the troops at Lahore reach us; the deaths are said to be very numerous. The Artillery at Lucknow have been sent out into camp in consequence of an outbreak of cholera in their lines. The cases of cholera at Kussowlie, up to 21st instant, had been forty-one, of which twenty-three were fatal. At Dugshai, on the other hand, with twenty-two cases the deaths had been only eight. The Government of India has given a grant of one lakh of rupees towards the fever relief operations in the Burdwan district.

DR. BELLEW.—The Lahore paper says—“Dr. H. W. Bellew has arrived in India from Seistan, and will proceed to Peshawur. Although the Mission has been unsuccessful as a political undertaking, we hope Dr. Bellew will be allowed to publish a narrative of the journey. We have no doubt Dr. Bellew’s good services will receive some recognition, notwithstanding the failure of the expedition; for as most of our readers are aware, this is the second journey in Central Asia which Dr. Bellew has undertaken on Government service. He accompanied the Lumsdens to Candahar in 1857, and published a most interesting account of his travels. Dr. Bellew is also the author of a work on Eusufzai and a Pushtu Grammar and Dictionary.”

THE RAJAH OF MANIPURE.—The Rajah of Manipore has been presented by Government with the 500 muskets lent for the use of his troops during the Loshai Expedition, and thirteen sporting rifles of the latest and most improved principle have also been ordered from England by Lord Northbrook as a present for his Highness, his princes and minister. The 500 stand of arms already presented to the Rajah were smoothbore muskets of Enfield pattern, of the same kind as those in the hands of the native army previous to receiving the Enfield rifles of the British army. In addition to the present Lord Northbrook has sent a handsome letter to the Rajah acknowledging the valuable services rendered by his contingent during the expedition. This is a graceful acknowledgment of the good services we have from time to time had occasion to notice; an acknowledgment which does honour to the Government, while the public will see in it indirectly a first instalment of justice to the officers to whom the successes were due.

ROORKEE VOLUNTEERS.—We learn that H.E. the Governor-General has been pleased to approve of the formation of a Volunteer corps, to be composed of the students of the College at Roorkee, to be designated the "Thomason College Volunteer Company." Captain H. M. Laing, R.E., Principal of the College, has been appointed its commandant.

CHOLERA AT JULLUNDER.—We are sorry to hear that cholera has at length made its appearance at Jullunder, which station has hitherto been free from epidemic. The Deputy Commissioner was at Phillour on a tour of inspection at the time the news reached him, but he immediately posted back to Jullunder, to take measures for arresting the progress of the disease as much as possible.—Indian Public Opinion.

CHOLERA AT MEEAN MEER.—The Simla journal has heard very distressing accounts regarding the ravages of cholera at Meean Meer—or rather in the camps to which the troops have moved. The number of fatal cases is so large, and the proportion of officers attacked and placed hors de combat so unusual, that that paper refrains from making more than a brief allusion to it—in the hope that before it is published more cheering news may have been received.

MR. COWAN'S PENSION.—Some of our contemporaries, says the Pioneer, profess to be still incredulous of our assertion that Mr. Cowan's pension has been definitively granted. We can only repeat that nothing is more certain. The Secretary of State has sanctioned a pension to Mr. Cowan of Rs. 300 a month, accompanying the sanction, however, with the most unreserved approval of the orders of the Government of India with reference to both Mr. Cowan and Mr. Forsyth. We are not here discussing, but simply stating facts.

MUSKETRY RETURNS.—The returns showing the result of the past annual musketry course by the British and native troops serving in the Bengal Presidency have been published. The figure of merit of the British Infantry battalions shows an increase of 12.62 points over that obtained last year; and, though this very satisfactory result may be in part attributed to the general use, for the first time, of Snider arms, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief feels sure that much is also due to the great interest which all ranks have taken in this important part of a soldier's training.

DEATH OF MAJOR P. MURRAY, R.E.—It is with regret we have to announce the death at Roorkee of Major P. Murray, R.E., commanding the head-quarters of the Sappers and Miners. The lauded officer had been suffering for several days, and had to undergo more than one surgical operation, but notwithstanding all that the best medical science could do, he succumbed on the 19th inst., and was interred the same evening with military honours. Major Murray had long been connected with the Sappers, and for his many good qualities had endeared himself to the whole corps. The command of the head-quarters devolves on Captain Blood, R.E., pro tem.—Pioneer, Aug. 22.

YET ANOTHER CASE OF SUICIDE BY A SOLDIER AT UMBALLA.—Corporal Butler, of the 20th Hussars, committed suicide on the 13th instant, by discharging a carbine loaded with a blank cartridge into his mouth. The sad occurrence happened in barracks, and the unfortunate man walked several paces down the room before he fell. He was conveyed to the hospital, and died twenty minutes after. He was a convalescent, attending hospital daily. The brain was uninjured, but the throat and parts around were torn to pieces. Temporary insanity was the verdict of the jury, and he was interred with military honours. Shortly after the occurrence, an order was given to close the Corporals' mess, which is suggestive that over-indulgence was the primary cause of the crime.—Morassillite.

THE PANTHAY EMBASSY.—The Home Government seems to be making an unaccountable error in its treatment of the Burmese and Panthay Embassies, now in London. The former are everywhere received with honour; the latter are scarcely mentioned or noticed officially. The King of Burmah is a King, we grant, and the Panthays are representatives of a personage of far less defined position. But, looking to the importance of this people to our trade routes to Western China, to the thorough friendliness of the tribes, and to their strong disposition to commercial relations, it does seem, as seen from the outside, that Government is committing a huge error. If these people come back hopeless or insulted, farewell to many a dream of trade with Western China. The goodwill of the Lord of a Million Umbrellas is hardly worth buying at such a price.—Friend of India.

TRADE RETURNS.—The trade and navigation returns of British India for the month of June last show (says the Bombay Gazette) the total value of imports in that month to have been Rs. 2,57,22,757, and of the exports Rs. 4,48,67,162. The value of the imports shows a slight increase over the same month in the previous year, when goods to the value of Rs. 2,33,47,486 were imported, and a decrease on 1870-71, when they were valued at Rs. 2,91,46,548. The value of the exports was less than that of the same month in the two previous years, which was Rs. 5,55,98,424 in 1871-72, and Rs. 5,90,39,751 in 1870-71. Of the goods imported, Rs. 1,26,85,828 were landed in Bengal, and Rs. 82,50,819 in Bombay; whilst Bombay exported goods to the value of Rs. 2,06,50,373, as compared with Calcutta's Rs. 1,38,39,758. These figures are exclusive of treasure, of which the total amount imported was Rs. 24,76,561, and exported Rs. 15,98,412.

TRAGEDY AT INDORE.—We are sorry to hear of a shocking murder committed in the Nujeeb lines at Indore. It seems that a Nujeeb named Shaikh Kulloo was found asleep at his post, and was duly reported to his superior officer; but as the man bore a good character he was pardoned, and warned to be more careful in future. A few nights later, however, he was found again asleep at his post, by a Nujeeb named Sheo Narain, the circumstance being reported early in the morning to a Duffadar (Shabaz Khan). Between five and six o'clock, Shabaz Khan was sitting in a room preparing his hookah, when Shaikh Kulloo came in and begged that the Duffadar would not report him. The latter said he must do so, upon which Shaikh Kulloo drew a sword which was concealed under his left arm, and approaching the Duffadar from behind, with one cut almost severed his head from the body. The murderer then ran out, and was met by Sheo Narain, who closed with him, but received some cuts, not of a dangerous nature, and another Nujeeb coming to his assistance, the murderer was at length secured. We are glad to be able to add that he has been tried and sentenced to be hanged. Both Sheo Narain and Nundram, the Nujeeb who came to Sheo Narain's assistance, acted most courageously, and are entitled to much praise for so speedily disarming the murderer.—Civil and Military Gazette.

CHOLERA IN LAHORE.—The number of cases of cholera reported in Lahore and its vicinity for last week is 198. The deaths are 101. Although this number is greater than the previous week, we should note that the medical authorities report an improvement since Saturday. On that day the wind changed, and on Sunday and Monday very few cases were reported. The weather has now for some days been very hot and bright. A serious outbreak of cholera took place last week in the Lahore Central Jail, and nearly all its inmates, about 1,500, have been moved out into camp up the Ferozepore-road. The jail appears to a visitor so perfectly clean and fresh-looking that it seems impossible any epidemic could spread or even live in such a place, and it is doubtful if a rough camp life will be much improvement. However, every precaution is being taken that experience can suggest. We have no full accounts from the various camps of the 37th Regiment, which is, however, generally reported to be suffering severely. The Artillery, as we mentioned in last issue, were ordered to Montgomery, but the authorities there made the strongest objections to their coming. They were, therefore, stopped and placed in two camps at Sidohur and Chandrare. The 24th P.N.I. Meean Meer has not moved out into the district, but is now encamped in its own parade ground. The regiment lost three sepoy from cholera, but it has to be noted that these men were employed on fatigue duty, striking and packing the tents of the married people of the 37th Regiment at Shalimur, so it may be inferred they contracted the disease whilst so engaged. "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good." The beggars of the city are living in clover just now, as every death in his neighbourhood galvanises the bhumia into giving alms to these lazy impostors.—Indian Public Opinion, Aug. 20.

THE CENSUS IN BENGAL.—We believe the results of the census in Bengal will in many instances be of a surprising character. It is quite clear, for one thing, that the population has been immensely underrated, and that the number of people under the direct rule of the Lieutenant-Governor will now not be less than 65 millions, and probably will be more. It is quite certain also that in the districts east of Calcutta the Mahomedans greatly preponderate. It is more than likely that these districts do not contain less than 20 millions of Mahomedans. This is a very important matter indeed when we come to consider the state of Mahomedan education, and the facilities offered for introducing the Mahomedan youth to useful and lucrative employment. The average population of fully cultivated districts on the plains of the Ganges is not less than 640 per square mile, or a human being to every acre. The most thickly cultivated districts in the North-Western Provinces will not be higher than 2½ acre to each human being, and, allowing for the large proportion of the soil under cotton, jute, &c., and the large amount of rice exported, it is probable that not more than half an acre is devoted to the food of each human being in these provinces. We have not the figures of Great Britain, but we should say that not less than 2½ acres are required there for each human being, taking the gross produce and the imported food stuffs. Allowing, therefore, for the comparative—the extraordinarily comparative—frugality of the people of India, it does seem that, after all, the agricultural productiveness of the country is not at so low an ebb as some people would lead us to imagine. The people work primitively, and it is the duty of the Government, and indeed it appears also the pleasure of many officers, to assist in producing a better system of agriculture, but at the same time every agriculturist works in his own way, with tools as antiquated as the deluge, and ideas scarcely less antiquated, though adapted to the peculiarities of the country, and in a mass the people produce results which are not to be despised. We look forward with much interest to the declaration of the census, which we trust will bring the Government and the people nearer together on both material and moral grounds.—Friend of India.

A "PUNCH" FOR CALCUTTA.—Under the title of the Indian Charivari, Colonel Percy Wyndham proposes, should sufficient inducement offer, to publish a fortnightly illustrated comic paper, the subscription to which, for a half-year in advance, will be Rs. 10; for a quarter, Rs. 5; and for a single copy, R. 1. The following is the prospectus, which will show the intentions of the projectors:—It has frequently been remarked amongst the European community of the glorious East, and of this, its metropolis, in particular, that no literary vehicle exists by which the faults and follies of our public men may be satirically exposed, and our own various grievances humorously ventilated. The sharp, pungent sting of wit and humour directed against the foibles of those around us is much more to be dreaded than the dull matter-of-fact paragraph of the daily press; and it cannot be denied that in the public "service" alone, no matter whether military, civil, or otherwise, a large field presents itself for good-humoured banter and fun. Then, again, look at our political world and our would-be honourable municipal body, even amongst the private community, native and European, how often circumstances occur which present themselves in a most ludicrous light. It is our purpose, should sufficient inducement offer in the way of subscriptions, to occupy this position, viz., that of supplying once a fortnight an illustrated paper, reviewing current topics and matters of interest in a light playful spirit—shooting folly as he flies, "no thing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice." Artists of acknowledged ability will be engaged for our illustrations, and the literary portion will be under the superintendence of one whose previous efforts have raised many a hearty laugh. Contributions of wit, humour, and fancy, are solicited, but it must be distinctly understood that the "Indian Charivari" will not admit anything savouring of personality, its object being rather to promote hilarity and dissipate all depression of spirits and ill-humour. We intend to laugh at and with our small world around us, and hope they will return us the compliment. Intending subscribers are asked to apply to the proprietor, Colonel Percy Wyndham, Bengal Printing Company, who promises, should a sufficient number of subscribers not be forthcoming, to return moneys received.—Englishman, Aug. 20.

Madras.

MILITARY.—Lieutenant-Colonel Stewart, the Adjutant-General Designate, arrived at Madras from Galle on Tuesday, August 27. Colonel Roe left Madras on Saturday, August 24. He goes direct to England, and after two or three months' leave will resume command of his regiment on its arrival there from Aden.

GAME PRESERVING.—We hear that the Bill for the Preservation of Game in the Madras Presidency has been thrown out by the Supreme Government. Rumour has it that this was done chiefly because of the apparent difficulty of administering the law over such a large tract of country.

PRINCIPAL, MADRAS MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Dr. George Smith, Principal Madras College, returned to Madras yesterday by the P. and O. steamer Sumatra, from London, and assumed charge of his office from Dr. W. N. Chipperfield. We hear that Dr. Chipperfield intends proceeding to England shortly on leave.—Athenæum, Aug. 28.

THE GOVERNOR OF PONDICHERY AND LORD HOBART.—We cannot sympathise with his Excellency the Governor of Pondicherry in his complaint to the Madras Government that emigrant-recruiting has been prohibited in certain districts. Lord Hobart has explained to his Excellency that this step has been "necessitated by the prevalence of cholera in those districts." We are sorry that Lord Hobart did not advance still more substantial reasons.—Times of India.

THE OVERLAND MAILS FOR MADRAS.—We are glad to learn that during the short stay of Mr. Percy at Bombay he has done some good in expediting the delivery of the overland mails at Madras. During the voyage of the steamer from Aden to Bombay the sea-assorters will in future assort all packets, &c., and immediately on the arrival of the mails at Madras window ticket holders will be furnished with their packets without the least delay. By this change the proposed arrangement of having a railway travelling post-office from Arcunum to Madras will be done away with.—Madras Athenæum.

CIVIL.—We hear, says the local Mail, that the Hon. J. Arbuthnot will not return to Madras, but will go from Ootacamund direct to Bombay, en route for England. He leaves about the end of October. We understand that an intimation has already been received from the India-office that the Hon. R. S. Ellis will succeed Mr. Arbuthnot in the Council. Mr. Hudleston, we presume, will succeed Mr. Ellis as Chief Secretary. It remains to be seen who will succeed Mr. Hudleston. Mr. Carmichael seemed to have the best chance, but he is supposed to have incurred the anger of the Ooty gods, because he and his colleagues on the Cyclone Committee told the plain truth about the mismanagement of the Marine Department. Truth is not only stranger, but sometimes more injurious, than fiction.

LORD HOBART.—We fancy that Lord Hobart must begin to regard an Indian Governorship as a delusion and a snare, and we shall not be at all surprised if he throws up his appointment before the usual five years' tenure has expired. His Lordship, we hear, is continually grumbling at the weather, and a man who does that on the Neilgherries can never be very happy on the plains. Lord Hobart has just shifted from Ootacamund to Coonoor for a brief change. He is, we believe, already contemplating a descent from the Hills, and proposes to make a tour next month through some of the districts before returning to Madras. The route has not yet been settled, and perhaps it would be as well if some of the experienced revenue officials about his Lordship were to remind him that the month of September is not unfrequently a rather trying one in the plains. At all events, a change from Coonoor to Madras in that month is usually regarded by local Salamanders as a trifle worse than a jump from the frying pan into the fire.—Madras Mail, Aug. 26.

WOUNDED BY A BOAR.—An accident occurred recently to a young planter of Coonoor, when out with two companions trying to bag a wild boar that had been marked down in one of our sholahs. The animal was stirred up, but proved dangerous, and charged, upsetting one of his enemies, and afterwards inflicting a nasty wound in his cheek. There is but little doubt that the affair would have terminated fatally for the young sportsman had it not been that one of his companions gave piggy his coup de grace by a well-directed bullet.—South of India Observer.

CANALS IN HYDERABAD.—We learn from Hyderabad that the Ibram-patam Canal is likely to prove a failure. The officer selected to carry out the project, we learn, was formerly an enterprising draughtsman in the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, and consequently did not mind taking the canal over a hill. This of course was at a time when Sir Salar Jung had Hobson's choice in the selection of his employes, as very few English ever thought of entering the Nizam's service. The grand mistake, we learn, was by a cutting of eighty-five feet being made over the hill in question. This mistake has just been discovered, and the energetic projector now advocates a tunnel. Our correspondent thinks it nothing but just to exonerate the present D.P.W. secretary from all blame in the matter.—Bombay Gazette.

LOCALISING THE MADRAS ARMY.—We believe from what we hear that the plan of localising the Madras army in Bangalore finds more and more favour with those in authority, and is not unlikely to be pressed on the attention of the Supreme Government. The advantage of having the troops located in a fine healthy climate is obvious enough, but then again, if further palatial piles of barracks are to be built, and if further lakhs of rupees are to be spent on the Ulsoor water supply, and other further lakhs of rupees in sepoy's lines, stabling, and a big iron fort somewhere in the direction of Morrison's farm, to say nothing of a fortified place of refuge, and other trifling items of military expenditure, it really becomes a consideration as to whether the game would be worth the candle after all. Locally the idea would be really very good, but the vast sums of money that would have to be spent in carrying it out will certainly not recommend it to Lord Northbrook's attention.—Bangalore Herald.

DENGUE IN MADRAS.—The virulence with which this disease is raging in Madras is simply astounding. In most of the Madras churches especial prayers are offered up for the abatement of the scourge. Black Town is the scene of the severest visitation. It is computed that eighty per cent. of the East Indian and native inhabitants of Black Town have been ill with it. There are whole streets where scarcely a soul, man, woman, or child, has escaped. Though the disease has proved most fatal to children, yet even grown up persons are said to have succumbed. It is true that the strong invariably escape death, but we hear that those who are most healthy, most muscular, or of full habit of body, feel the frightful bone-aches, shooting pains, and after effects of the disease most keenly. Whole months after the actual virulence of the fever has abated, the pains in the joints remain. Men feel for a long period after the fever has left them as if they had been severely beaten and bruised.

THE RECENT FORGERIES.—No further discoveries have as yet been made with regard to the gigantic forgery of £100 Government currency notes alluded to by us in several of our previous issues. Captain Weldon, one of our police magistrates, as our readers are aware, has been deputed to the special duty of tracing out this fraud. The reward of £1,000 offered for information leading to the discovery and conviction of the forger or forgers still continues to be made by Government. With, however, so strong an inducement to our detectives to exert themselves and trace out the perpetrators of this gigantic swindle, they have hitherto failed to do so, and the forgers are still at large. The reward is large enough to induce a London detective to come out and set about the work; and we have little doubt, did one do so, and he was fairly and honestly assisted by the authorities here, that it would not be long before he was on the trail of the swindler or swindlers concerned in this gigantic forgery.—Madras Athenæum.

"POTTING" DACOITS IN BRITISH BURMAH.—The Assistant Commissioner, Mr. A. H. Hildebrand, in charge of the Salween district, reports that a dacoity was committed on the night of the 11th June on a house in the Yoonzaaleen circle, at the village of Laybawmee. There were twelve dacoits fully armed concerned in this attack. An inspector of police with ten constables were soon on the track of the dacoits. Some Karens came in and gave the report that their village had been attacked by twelve Karanees, and apparently the same gang who were concerned in the previous dacoities in another direction. The police followed the dacoits and found them in a jungle, engaged in cooking food. The police surprised their camp, when three shots were fired at the inspector, whose men returned the fire, when they rushed forward. Two of the Karanees were shot dead, one hit in the chest, and another in the abdomen. The police inspector nearly severed the head of a third dacoit from his body by a blow of his dah. The other dacoits bolted and got off. None of the police were hurt. After giving chase to the dacoits the police slept a night in the jungle, and gave chase the following day, when they came upon the dacoits a second time. Another dacoit was destroyed, for the inspector of police is reported to be a dead shot. They followed in the track of the dacoits till five o'clock, when they arrived at the Pah Choung, or British boundary. Karen villagers were despatched all round to see if the dacoits lingered in our territory, as it was expected there was a large force of them. To these brave constables the local Government, on the recommendation of Mr. Hildebrand, awarded a gratuity of Rs. 105 to be distributed among them. They have certainly done well in this instance, and eminently deserve the reward granted to them by the Chief Commissioner, the Commissioner of Tenasserim, and the Inspector-General of Police.—Rangoon Times, Aug. 8.

A WRECK-STREWN BEACH.—It is now three months and a half, or very nearly so, since the cyclone. And what an aspect does the beach present at the present moment! To the north of the pier the scene—masoolah boats are the presiding geniuses of the place,—masoolah boats rotten, masoolah boats sound, masoolah boats in pieces. Canvases or leaf-roofed huts, here and there, only tell of the scene where the goods recovered from the late disasters were temporarily housed and stored. Huge logs of wood in heaps, pieces of iron, bales of cotton, and clusters or detached specimens of the irrepressible native, make up the prospect along the beach to the north of the pier. The pier itself is a strange object. The slender undulating pathway, which spans the great gap made during the cyclone, is now and then passed over by trembling natives. On the shore side of this gap stands the old inevitable trainway carriage, with its white top. Stand at the shore end of the pier, and turn your face towards the Fort. At your feet lie half a dozen cannon, dismantled, rusty, and woe-begone in appearance! Here and there the rusty flukes of anchors also lie half imbedded in the sand before you. Above are cranes, with also rusty chains depending from them. Masts of shipwrecked vessels lie imbedded in the sand hard by; and these are not lonely, for heaps of wood and debris of various kinds keep them company. When we come to the beach before Arbuthnot's office we find the same heaps of wood, of bales, of coals, of casks, of cases, of spars, of masts, and of ship iron. The masoolah boats are thick as blackberries on the beach. Now we come for the first time to the hideous encroachments the sea has effected on the road. Heaps of stones lie near. A telegraph post is in danger of falling seawards. Further or near the Fort, the road is in many places fearfully endangered. A large iron ship, which was the Armenian, lies on the beach opposite. Workmen are incessantly thronging like bees around it. Not far from shore lie four other wrecks—the bow of the Hotspur still catching the foamy snow of the surf as the breakers rush past and over it. If we proceed further southward still there is another wreck lying close to the beach, with the usual huts between it and the road. The beach opposite the lighthouse is clear. Further on southward there are three wrecks, with a large amount of various kinds of debris piled on the shore near them. And last of all, opposite the Fort, is the great iron Invereskie. Numbers of coolies are trying to excavate the sand near it, so as to give it a chance to get out to sea. The sand is piled in enormous heaps. The bow of the vessel is much lower than its stern. The sweep of the sea has formed quite a bay in front of the vessel. But, alas for the engineer, the vessel threatens to heel over! Immense ropes are therefore attached to the masts, to prevent such a catastrophe. But it is very improbable that the ship will after all, by hook or by crook, be got off. Such is our panorama of the Madras Beach.—Madras Times.

STATION TALK.

JACOBABAD, Aug. 10.—The Russians have been most successful in the Khiva expedition; they have occupied the province of Urgenj and raised its capital to the ground. Another ambassador has left for India to supplicate the Viceroy for immediate assistance. The Russian forces are advancing on to Khiva. It is reported that the Russians are meditating an advance on to Kundur, which country lies on the northern boundary of Afghanistan. There are some grave misunderstandings between the Khan of Khelat and the British Political Agent at his Court. The Khan is not a man of his word; he makes a promise to-day and to-morrow it is broken. How far the rumour is true I cannot say, but it is believed by all that the Khan does not intend to abide by the treaty his Wuzzer on his behalf entered into with his Sirdars and the British Government last April at Jacobabad. Major Harrison, it would appear from last advices, was on the eve of leaving Khelat. I am very sorry that I have not full particulars of this new breach of promise on the Khan's part. I am led to the conclusion that there is something under a cloud which causes an apprehension of being needed force by arms to make the Khan of Khelat abide by every treaty that he has hitherto made. The state of affairs seems so serious that people are afraid to speak of them. You and the public may rest assured that, if our Government do not take immediate active measures, anarchy and civil war will predominate in Beloochistan for many a year. I am far from playing on the fears of the British public both in India and at home, as the Sindian would have it in a late issue, but in my duty to your journal I am bound to give the most reliable and authentic news. I hope in a few days to follow this letter up with all particulars of the threatening difficulty in British and Khelat politics. It behoves the Government of Bombay and the Commissioner in Sind to place a full account of these affairs before the public. We have had some very heavy showers of rain lately, accompanied with severe gales. Especially yesterday morning from half-past three to eight A.M. it rained very heavily, and the fall is registered as two inches. There has been damages done to houses, whose roofs have more or less fallen in, and we are again threatened with a flood. The hill torrents have united their waters with the Indus floods, and the bund four miles west of Jacobabad has been breached fifty feet in width. A new bund close by the station is being built for its protection. This work is progressing most rapidly, and every endeavour is being made to fill the breach. Should anything serious occur, you will hear from me by wire.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE SASSOON INSTITUTE.—His Excellency Sir Philip Wodehouse, K.C.B., has accepted the office of Patron of the Sassoon Mechanics' Institute, in the room of Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, late Governor of Bombay. He has also given a donation of Rs. 150 to the Institute.

MUSCAT.—MUSCAT POLITICAL AGENCY, Aug. 15.—Reports from the South-Eastern districts are to the effect that the Sheikh Saleh el Harithi is endeavouring to organise the party in opposition to the Government of Syud Toorkee. The latter have, however, no apprehension, and communications are open.

INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY.—The works designed to confine the River Sutlej to a direct channel where the bridge is intended to cross for the Indus Valley State Railway have been carried away by the stream, and the large office building with nine domes has been washed down by the encroachment of the river; the loss to Government will be from Rs. 20,000 to Rs. 30,000.

BUSHIRE.—BRITISH RESIDENCY, BUSHIRE, Aug. 9.—The Native Agent, Arab Coast, reports perfect tranquillity at sea. The disturbances on the road to Shiraz still continue. An Inspector of the Persian Telegraph, Sergeant Collins, of the Royal Engineers, was murdered by the robbers near Shiraz. The dismissed Persian Foreign Agent has not as yet left Bushire. The Relief Committee have decided in discontinuing employment of labour from the 11th instant, when the date crop will commence to be gathered in.

BANIA SLAVE TRADERS.—The Jam-i-Jamshed says:—"It appears from Dr. Livingstone's letter to Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, late Governor of Bombay, that the principal contractors who supply the Sultan of Zanzibar with slaves are Banias of India. They are mostly inhabitants of Kutch and Sind. These Hindoos, who pretend to have a compunction for injuring puny lives, freely indulge in the most sinful trade, which costs thousands of human lives every year. It is necessary that the caste Mahajuns of India should take notice of this and excommunicate the delinquents. The Banias of Zanzibar, though originally subjects of the Rao of Cutch, call themselves British subjects, and hide at Zanzibar in perfect security under the protection of the British name; but by the unlawful trade they carry on they have lost all right to protection. It is the duty of the Rao to concert measure with the British Government to get his unmerciful and inhuman subjects punished for their crimes."

ADEN.—The interior is tranquil, and supplies continue to come in regularly. The health of the garrison and civil population is excellent. The Turkish steam vessel Ninova arrived here on the 7th August. During her stay off Hour she was civilly treated and provided with supplies by the Onlakee Sultan, to whom a small present has been sent in acknowledgment.

COTTON EXPORTS FROM BOMBAY.—From a statement submitted to Government by Mr. L. Reid, C.S., Commissioner of Customs, we see that during July last 15,875,468 lbs. (40,138½ bales) of cotton, of the aggregate value of Rs. 52,62,779, were shipped from the port of Bombay to foreign external ports and foreign Indian ports. 11,830,056 lbs., of the value of Rs. 39,36,697, were shipped to Liverpool; 49,952 lbs., valued at Rs. 19,200, to London; 740,288 lbs., valued at Rs. 2,34,642, to Havre; 708,848 lbs., of the aggregate value of Rs. 2,62,270, to Trieste; 78,400 lbs., valued at Rs. 28,000, to Marseilles; 17,98,496 lbs., valued at Rs. 5,88,740, to Venice; 117,600 lbs., of the value of Rs. 42,000, to Naples; 541,604 lbs., valued at Rs. 1,51,140, to Hong Kong; and 224 lbs., valued at Rs. 90, to Aden.

THE S.S. "EMILIA."—Speculation as to the fate of the Italian steamer Emilia, 1,060 tons, Captain Caffarino, was put an end to by the steamer herself turning up at Bombay. It was supposed that she had been lost in the late cyclone off Calcutta, but the delay in her arrival here was owing to some portion of her screw breaking down. She belongs to the class denominated auxiliary screw steamers. The damage done was repaired, but it again gave way, and the rest of the voyage had to be performed under sail. She left Calcutta on the 6th July, and broke down on the 20th, so that she is forty-nine days out. She experienced some rough weather coming round, and carried her rudder head away; nothing else of any importance occurred during her voyage after the break down.—Times of India.

SIND.—The state of affairs at Khelat is the same as before. The Sarawan Sirdars have made attempts to recover the property taken from the Kalifas in January last, but have not been very successful as yet. It is said Sirdar Alla Dina Kurd has the chief part of the plunder, and is very loth to give it up. 2. The detachment of Rifles with treasure had reached Kelat on the 23rd July, after a very trying march for the first half of the way, the rest having been most excessive. 3. Mir Nadir has left Charbar for Kasir Kand, and Mir Hussein's brother Mirab Khan has taken charge of the Fort of Charbar. The latter has proved himself very unconvincing, and talked of stopping supplies being furnished to the Telegraph Department, and used threatening language to the employees. He has been called upon for an immediate explanation. 4. The rains at Kej have been abundant, the town is flooded, and the date crops have been considerably damaged.—W. L. MEREWETHER, Colonel Commissioner in Sind.

AN OLD GOVERNMENT SERVANT HONOURED.—A meeting of the inhabitants of Akola was held in the camp, on the 13th instant, to present an address to Dastoor Bomonjee Jamasjee, Assistant Commissioner of Akola, on his transference to Oomratotee. This gentleman has been in the service of Government since Akola was given over to the British in the year 1853. There were about one thousand people present at the meeting, and everybody loudly expressed sentiments of affection and reverence towards the learned Dastoor. On the 12th he was entertained to a splendid dinner by Captain Huddleston, Judicial Commissioner, when all the ladies and gentlemen of the station were present to honour the departing officer. On the night of the 13th instant he was invited to a grand feast by Messrs. Bomonjee Ookerjee and Co., well-known merchants of Akola, when all the Parsees of the station were present, and complimentary speeches were made. On the 14th European and native gentlemen and ladies mustered strong on the railway station to bid good-bye to Dastoor Bomonjee Jamasjee, and heartily cheered him as the train left the platform.—Times of India, Aug. 30.

AN EXTRAORDINARY VOYAGE.—On Wednesday morning the ship Davina, from Calcutta, June 25, Captain H. Leisk, arrived in Bombay harbour. The Davina was in the late cyclone in the Bay of Bengal, and experienced very bad weather. She left the Sandheads at four P.M. on June 26, and the first approach of bad weather was experienced in a heavy gale from the westward, which continued without intermission until July 1, and during which a quantity of cargo was thrown overboard to save the ship. One boat was washed from the davits, the longboat stove in by the sea, and several of the sails were blown out of the bolt ropes. The sea made nearly a clean sweep of the deck, washing away the deckhouse and hencoops. The bulwarks were also washed away. The westerly gales continued with heavy squalls until July 12 when the coast of Sumatra was made. The vessel put into Acheen on the 15th, and sailed on the 17th. The equator was crossed on July 29 in long. 95 deg. East. On August 5 in lat. 9 deg. S. the trade winds were experienced, the ship ran on Westing down on the parallel of 11 deg. S. The equator was crossed on August 16 in long. 64 deg. E., and Bombay was made yesterday morning. The Davina has her Calcutta pilot, Mr. Lidstone, on board, and another officer of the Bengal Pilot Service, who was proceeding as a passenger, on duty to the Pilot Station. She was unable to discharge either of them on account of the extremely bad weather, being unable to get near the Pilot station at the Sandheads, or to keep in the vicinity; doubtless, however, the two Calcutta pilots will be well-looked after by their brethren of the Bombay Service.—Times of India, Aug. 30.

AN ALARM OF FIRE AT THE COLABA OBSERVATORY.—At about a quarter to ten o'clock on Saturday morning an alarm was raised that the Colaba Observatory was on fire. The chief engineer of the fire brigade with the fort engines, together with a number of the European and native constabulary of the Fort and Colaba stations, immediately repaired to the spot, when it was discovered that the fire was already put out. It appears that a large glass kerosine lamp, which is usually kept burning night and day in the room where the chronometers and other very valuable astronomical and nautical instruments are kept, exploded, and the ignited oil spreading about the floor, burnt itself out, causing no other damage but only the value of the glass lamp that exploded. It was fortunate that the flames did not catch the instruments, which were said to be standing on wooden tripods on the floor, or the losses would have been somewhat serious. The accident to the lamp is said to have been caused by the lamp trimmer, who either managed to drop the lighted wick into the lamp by overturning it or by some means or other, which caused the lamp to explode. The man appears to have escaped uninjured.—Times of India, Aug. 30.

Official Papers.

GOVERNMENT RESOLUTION ON THE REPORTS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, FOR THE YEARS 1868-69, 1869-70, AND 1870-71.

The last resolution of Government in the Educational Department upon the annual report of the Director of Public Instruction was issued on September 29th, 1868, at the close of Sir A. Grant's administration, and since that date the judicious and well-considered proposals made by Mr. Peile have received from time to time separate consideration, and have, for the most part, been carried out to the extent that the pecuniary resources of Government would admit; but no general orders have been issued upon the accounts yearly rendered by Mr. Peile of the work accomplished by his department. The time has, however, come when it will be advantageous to review the general course of educational progress in this presidency during the past three years, since Mr. Peile has held office, and to declare the views of Government on the policy which he desires to pursue with the view of improving and extending the operations of the agency entrusted with the education of the people.

2. It cannot be denied that a retrospect of the past three years is creditable to the general working of the Education Department; well-considered reforms have been introduced into the system of instruction, and a great impetus has been given to the effective demand for schools, not only in British territory, but also in the contiguous native States. Undoubtedly the expenditure has largely increased, but against this must be set the increased fixed capital of the department, partly represented by the larger number of schools and colleges erected, and partly by the higher standard of education attained by the various grades of inspectors and schoolmasters.

3. Taking the statistics afforded in the last report (1870-71) it appears that the expenditure from the public revenue on the university and the encouragement of science and art was £5,732, and upon instruction and the superintendence of instruction £209,078; of the latter sum, £94,804 came from the Imperial revenues, and £114,274 from local sources. In order to give approximately the total cost of public instruction in this presidency, Mr. Peile roughly estimates the sums expended by managers of aided schools from their own resources at £39,367; but these returns, though tolerably accurate, are not to be implicitly relied upon. Taking the figures as given, it appears that £100,536 of Imperial revenues, and £153,641 obtained from local sources, were expended in the past year; that is, the expenditure from local funds strictly so called, and managed by the Department of Public Instruction, was about 14 per cent. greater than the expenditure of Imperial money, and the total expenditure on education from local sources of all kinds was very much larger than the grant from the Imperial Treasury. The expenditure of indigenous schools and private schools not aided or inspected by the department, is, of course, not taken into account.

4. The vast and increasing importance of local funds and local sources of supply in supporting the cost of national education is so important a subject, that it may be illustrated by the following table. The contributions from the public revenue, from local funds, and the private expenditure of private schoolmasters, as roughly estimated in Mr. Peile's reports, during the past three years, stand thus:—

Contributions from public revenues	£93,544	£94,128	£97,027	£100,536
Do., local funds	80,291	90,948	91,731	114,274
Rough estimate of expenses of private schoolmasters	?	34,865	47,628	39,367
Total	£173,835	£219,941	£236,386	£254,177

It should be explained that under the term of local funds are included the receipts from several different sources, namely, the fees exacted from scholars, private and municipal subscriptions, the interests of endowment funds, and last, but most important, the funds appropriated to education by native States, and the cess or school rates imposed on the cultivating class by Act III. of 1869. "Local Funds" therefore must be understood to mean, as applied to colleges and higher schools, the fees or interests of endowments; as applied to schools in native States, the assignments of those States; and, as applied to middle and lower-class schools and vernacular training colleges, the school fees and educational cess. The cess, or agricultural school rate, belongs especially to popular instruction, and Mr. Peile shows that, with certain exceptions (Report for 1869-70, page 98, paragraphs 104, 105), the fund is strictly administered for the benefit of the masses on lower, middle-class, and particularly vernacular schools, and on the training of schoolmasters and building of schoolhouses for them.

5. Considering the importance of local funds to the support of the educational system, and the effect of recent provincial taxation and the order of the Government of India, December 14, 1870, H.E. the Governor in Council is prepared to concur generally in the views expressed by Mr. Peile in paras. 42, 43 of his report for 1870-71. They do not regard the order just referred to as absolutely final, and the remedy suggested will meet with due consideration on the part of this Government.

6. Passing from the summary of expenditure which has been made, to the results which have followed upon the increasing outlay, there appears an equally steady increase both in the number of schools and scholars. In the year 1867-68 there were little more than 350 students colleges, and 137,600 in schools. In 1870-71 the numbers reported in schools are 177,356, and in colleges 627. The net annual increase of schools and colleges and scholars has been in—

	Schools.	Scholars.
1869-70	267	10,443
1870-71	313	9,467
Total increase	946	39,714

The grand total of schools and colleges in existence is now 3,036. It must be borne in mind that the pupils of indigenous and other schools, and the schools themselves, where not controlled by the department, are not taken into account, but it would seem from the rough estimates given by Mr. Peile that, if these were added, the total number of persons under instruction would considerably exceed 200,000. Such numerical results are in themselves testimony of the efficient progress of the department presided over by Mr. Peile; but H.E. in Council observes that much remains to be accomplished before this presidency can favourably compare with the state of education in any European State. Assuming the population of this presidency and the native States to be 20 millions, as roughly estimated by the Director of Public Instruction, the proportion of learners to population would only be about one per cent.

7. That a great impetus, dating from last year, will henceforth be given to education in native States seems most probable, and H.E. in Council fully concurs with Mr. Peile in the views which he expresses in his report for 1869-70 on the responsibility of native Governments for the due supply of education to their subjects. The last report submitted (paras. 126, 127) happily shows that at length the Gujarat States have recognised the duties which they owe to their myriads of subjects, and the immediate success which has attended the opening of the Baroda school will, it is hoped, lead to a greater development of education throughout his Highness the Guikowar's dominions. In Cambay, Junjeera, Kutch, and Mahi Kanta, there are also indications of a tendency on the part of their conservative rulers to yield to the requirements of advancing civilisation, and his Excellency will never fail to notice with approbation the exertions of any State subordinate to this presidency to provide for the educational wants of its population.

8. In testing the advance already shown in the numerical results of the past three years by the quality of the successes attained in the higher university examinations, there is less cause for congratulation. As the Director observes in his report for 1869-70, para 44:—"A university degree is the central object of all educational ambition throughout the presidency." But the numbers of successful candidates do not appear to increase in a rate at all proportionate to the increase in the number of schools or scholars, as given above. The three reports now before Government exhibit the following results:—

Matriculated...	250	142	142
F.A. ...	40	34	44
B.A. ...	7	20	13
M.A. ...	4	2	2
First Examination for L.M.	4	5	4
L.M. ...	1	0	3
LL.B. ...	3	6	13
First Examination in Civil Engr.	7	4	8
L.C.E. ...	1	3	2

The rejection of all but 142 out of a considerable number of candidates for matriculation during two successive years would argue some defect in the high schools, and H.E. looks to the additional strength which has lately been added to the Government schools by the system of feeders and general reorganisation to remedy this want of success. It may be conceded that the standard of examination has lately somewhat increased, and it would appear desirable, with a view to obviate perpetual fluctuations, that, where practicable, the examinations should be conducted by the same examiners from year to year; but the chief remedy lies in the hands of the head masters; and, whilst it may be conceded that the present results are not altogether attributable to defects on their part, H.E. in Council looks to them for increased exertion, to enable them to send up annually from their schools an increasing number of scholars qualified to pass the examination now established for matriculation in the university.

9. Of the higher Government institutions, H.E. in Council notices with regret the loss which the Elphinstone College has sustained by the death of Mr. Hughlings in 1870. It is hoped that by the arrival of the three Professors who are expected, additional strength will be added to the college. The state of the Deccan College and Grant Medical College calls for no particular notice. The increase in the Poona Engineering College is highly satisfactory, and it appears that in the three years now under report the number of pupils has nearly trebled itself. The thanks of Government are due to the Principal and Professors of this college for its present promising condition, and also to Colonel H. St. Clair Wilkins, R.E., for the interest which he has taken in this institution, and the assistance which he has given to it. H.E. in Council entertains the strongest conviction of the utility of these establishments, and will be glad to see their number increased. The proposed addition of workshops, and formation of an industrial school in connection with the college—in which artisans will be instructed in various crafts, while engineering students will have the opportunity of learning the practical part of their profession—has the cordial approval of Government, as well as the suggestions for the appointment of a teacher of mechanical engineering. The complaint made in para. 65 of the report for 1870-71, that Government had withdrawn the engineering appointment promised to the graduate in C.E. who shall pass with the highest marks, appears to be without sufficient foundation. All that Government has done is to limit the bestowal of this appointment to those who pass in the first class, while three appointments in the upper subordinate establishment (of the Public Works Department) are reserved for those who pass the final examination at the college. This would seem at the present sufficient encouragement to the pupils of the institution, and the confinement of the highest prize to those who pass in the first class will probably act as a stimulus to increased exertion on the part of candidates for degrees.

10. The statistics already given have sufficiently shown the general working of the department during the past three years, and it remains to comment upon a few of the points more especially noticed by Mr. Peile.

11. The most important consideration is undoubtedly the policy which Government should pursue in respect to the support of schools, and on this point his Excellency in Council concurs in the views advanced in the reports before him. A national system of aided schools set on foot and managed by the people with the aid of the State may be possible in other provinces, but there exists in Bombay social conditions which render it impracticable here. Government has, therefore, already accepted the duty of collecting and administering a primary school rate, and his Excellency in Council is convinced that no expansion of English education, however valuable in itself, can cancel the obligation of this Government to multiply village schools and dispense vernacular education throughout the length and breadth of the presidency. That much remains to be effected before this result can even be approximated is evident from the figures given by Mr. Peile, who estimates that in the 40,000 villages and hamlets of this presidency, exclusive of Sind, there are as yet only 2,389 Government primary schools.

The scheme sketched by Mr. Peile in paras. 49, 50, and following paragraphs of the report for 1870-71, seems judicious, and calculated to effect the object it has in view of extending popular primary education.

12. But whilst primary instruction is for the whole people, higher education must necessarily for a time be confined to a limited class. The two can and should co-exist, and provision must be made for the support of both. Without assistance from the State, high education would either die out completely, or at the best become the prerogative of the wealthy. But in either case the State would lose all control over its quality, and would sacrifice to a great extent the result of its endeavours to introduce the fruits of Western learning into India. H.E. in Council entirely approves, therefore, of Mr. Peile's policy of supporting a certain number of direct Government Colleges and high schools, which shall at once impart European scholarship to a limited body, and serve as standards and exemplars to the country at large.

13. In 1854, the Honourable Court of Directors looked for the diffusing of useful knowledge to the instrumentality of masters and professors, "who may by themselves, knowing English, and thus having full access to the latest improvements in knowledge of every kind, impart to their fellow-countrymen, through the medium of their mother-tongue, the information they have thus obtained." What is mainly wanted is, that the more highly educated natives should be able to think and express themselves in their own vernaculars. Otherwise, there can be no guarantee that the Western learning which they have imbibed has so far assimilated with their intellectual system as to be productive of a healthy growth. One of the chief objects of education should be to enrich the vernacular literatures of India, and it is disappointing to find (Report 1870-71, para. 139) that this is not the case—a conclusion which is supported by the fact that the graduates and most highly educated natives do not compete for the valuable vernacular prizes open to them. In replacing the vernacular as an obligatory part of the high school course, Mr. Peile has acted with judgment; but H.E. in Council does not think that much advance will be made in this direction until the Syndicate of the Bombay University shall be induced to accede to the director's proposal that every candidate for the matriculation examination shall be required to satisfy the examiners that he has a sound knowledge of his vernacular. H.E. in Council entirely concurs with Mr. Peile's views upon this point, and it will give Government great satisfaction to learn that the Syndicates have reconsidered their decision conveyed in letter No. 61 of 1871-72 to the Director of Public Instruction.

14. In 1868 her Majesty's Chief Secretary of State for India remarked upon the unsatisfactory state of the normal schools, and it is gratifying to see the increased attention which has been bestowed upon this subject. The account of the Poona Female Normal School, given in paras. 96, 97 of the latest report, shows that a real progress has been made, and reflects credit on Rao Saheb Narayan Bhai, of whose assistance the director takes especial notice. Mr. Peile's proposals for supplying the wants of Gujarat by expanding the Ahmedabad class, meet with the approval of Government.

15. The progress made in developing educational and general literature deserves remark; and it may be expected that the edition of the Bombay Sanskrit manuscripts being prepared by Drs. Buhler and Kielhorn will be a gain to the literary stores of Europe, no less than of India.

16. In the latest report Mr. Peile has dealt at great length (paragraphs 100—125) on the subject of aided private schools, and the discussion of grants-in-aid is carried on more or less through all the reports before Government. The subject is one of considerable importance, although it would appear from para. 120 of the report that while the number of pupils in Government schools is annually increasing, the relative number of those in indigenous schools is proportionately on the decrease. Still the year 1870-71 added eight to the absolute number of aided schools, and the grants made according to results showed an excess on the previous year of £646. His Excellency in Council approves of Mr. Peile's views generally on this subject, and of the policy of the system which retains in the hands of Government a large control over the course of education in private schools. Assuming that the fees of the schools of higher education realise one-third of the cost, and that another two-fifths is obtained in grants from Government, their remains but four-fifths to be met by the school managers. His Excellency considers this limit liberal, and further concurs in Mr. Peile's dissatisfaction with aided primary schools not under competent management. It is perfectly true, as stated in the report, that the aided schools are not national, in so far as they do not represent the results of a purely spontaneous effort of the people of India. But this increase of higher schools relieves Government from the necessity of maintaining more than one higher State school in each large town, and in this way the private schools, which are not all of them denominational, are important co-adjutors of the State system. The class of aided schools of which Mr. Peile has not a few instances—that is, schools opened by educated natives who propose to obtain a living by them—may be patiently awaited. They will increase as the demand for a liberal education spreads among all sections of the population.

17. The status and gradation of educational officers, and their eligibility for employment in the Executive Departments, are matters calling for careful attention, and H.E. in Council is prepared to admit that Mr. Peile has valid grounds for the complaint which he makes in para. 46 of his latest report. Government are prepared to recognise educational service where creditably performed as experience pro tanto qualifying for some of the higher offices open to the Indian subject. Mr. Peile should submit in his next report some definite proposals on this subject, which will meet with the due consideration of Government.

18. The director's remarks on the education of Mahomedans and on the school of art have been read with interest; and H.E. in Council records his satisfaction at the manner in which these annual reports have been submitted. They contain full and accurate information on a great variety of subjects in an attractive form. The statistical tables evince great care and intelligence in their preparation. A sound system of public instruction, capable of indefinite extension, has been established on a secure basis, and whilst a great deal yet remains to be done, each year of the three years under report marks a distinct progressive stage in the development of education in Western India. For the success which has been attained, great credit is due to the Director of Public Instruction, and to the educational inspectors and principals of colleges, from whom he has received valuable assistance. H.E. in Council would express to Mr. Peile, and to all the officers favourably mentioned in the director's reports, his acknowledgment of the good service which they have rendered.

INDIA AT THE SOCIAL SCIENCE CONGRESS.

India has received more attention than usual this year at the annual gathering of this Association; probably the fact of Lord Napier being President of the Congress may have had something to do with this. Dr. Acland, in his interesting address on the subject of Health, made several very flattering allusions to the valuable aid which the medical services under the Indian Government had afforded in elucidating and illustrating the science of sanitation and pathology. He spoke in very complimentary terms of the reports of Dr. De Renzy, the sanitary commissioner of the Punjab, and the best water analysis he said he could find anywhere was that effected under the instruction of the Indian Government. In his remarks upon cholera he alluded to the recent outbreak of that disease at Meeran Meer as affording a probable instance of a case in which sanitary regulations, though excellent as far as they went, had yet wholly failed, owing to neglect of some one point, such as the effectual prevention of pollution of drinking water.

In Section B (Economy and Trade) Mr. Iltudus Prichard read a paper on India as a field for the study of Social Science, in the course of which he pointed out that India was a country which afforded a better field than any other for the study of the science which was the special object of the association. Great results were to be anticipated from extending the sphere of social science inquiry, especially in such a country as India. He anticipated the objection that the field of social inquiry in England was already too wide to permit of its being extended to such a distant country as India, and to such extended conditions as were there presented. To this he replied that all science was cosmopolitan, and that this axiom was specially true of social science. He contended that every one of the problems with which the Social Science Association dealt were elucidated and illustrated in the social systems of India to an extent unattainable elsewhere. Physically India might be separated from England, but politically the two were one. If some of the members of the Association would devote themselves to the study of social questions in India, and put themselves into communication with the leaders of thought in India, they would not only widen the basis of enquiry into the phenomena of social science, but would aid the labours of those earnest reformers, and by the exhibition of sympathy would to a very considerable degree atone for the shortcomings of England towards that great country.

On Monday a meeting was held in the Mechanics' Institute, Devonport, under the presidency of Sir John Bowring, on behalf of the National Association in aid of Social Progress in India, when Miss Carpenter, Mr. Prichard, Mr. L. Bowring, Dr. Pearce, and others, addressed the meeting. Mr. Bowring said he laid claim to some experience of India, having held various offices there; he had been a civil officer in the Punjab, private secretary to Lord Canning, and commissioner of Mysore. He added, his experience was that there was less of that friendly communication between the people and the officials, by which alone the latter could become acquainted with the real wants and feeling of the people than formerly. He thought that an erroneous impression had got abroad in England respecting the work which had been done in India. The improvements that had been effected were very many and most important; all that was wanted was time to develop the reform that was now being worked out in all branches of social life. He thought that the word caste was very much misunderstood. It was not so much a religious distinction as a class distinction, separating communities and classes of society. At the same time it undoubtedly had an intimate connection with religion, and could not be lightly interfered with. Mr. Prichard pointed out that the object of the Association was to erect a machinery by which the public mind in this country might be gradually educated so as to create a public opinion on India, without which, as Sir John Coleridge had shown in his opening address, it was hopeless to expect any great measure to be taken up and carried through Parliament. The time was coming, it might be in the distant future, or it might be near at hand, when the great question of the connection between India and Great Britain would have to be considered and settled, and he wanted to see a healthy public opinion created in this country, which would enable Parliament when the crisis came to deal with the subject in a statesman-like manner, and on broad grounds of sound Imperial policy.

On Tuesday there was a very animated discussion on the "Colonial Empire," raised by three papers, one by Mr. Edward Jenkins, one by Mr. F. Labelliere, and one by Mr. Westgarth, in which the future of the colonies was considered, and a scheme of federalisation of the empire put forward. Sir Robert Torrens was in the chair. The claims of India to a participation in the proposed federalisation were advocated by Mr. Prichard in a speech in which he contended that the connection of Great Britain with her Indian Empire was a matter of as much, if not more, importance than that of the colonies. He considered that the time had come when this country must face the question as to what she would do with India. It would not do for us to say that we regretted the past, or that it would have been better for England if she had never set her foot in India; but we had to solve the problem as to what was to be done with this important portion of the empire. He was quite certain that the more India was studied the more the people of this country would become aware of the enormous advantages that we derived from our connection with it, and discussing this question of the federalisation of the empire, he protested against India being left out in the cold.

Mr. R. F. Fowler, member for Falmouth, remarked that Mr. Jenkins's scheme would have the effect of reducing the House of Commons from its Imperial to a mere local position. He added, I am disposed to hope that it is a scheme which may ultimately be found practical, and I am glad that it has thus been brought forward. But there was one consideration which I think Mr. Jenkins rather pooh-poohed, and that was whether we could not introduce into the House of Commons a certain number of colonial representatives. I have always considered that a great opportunity was lost in 1832, when a number of small boroughs were deprived of Parliamentary representatives. There was then a great opportunity, which has not occurred since, and perhaps may never occur again, to give representation to the colonies; but, unfortunately, we did not avail ourselves of it. Now the only plan will be to increase the number of members in the House of Commons, and certainly that does not appear to me to be a very great evil—(laughter)—but I do believe that if we could introduce colonial members into the House of Commons it would be of great advantage to the empire. I was glad to hear the remarks of Mr. Prichard with regard to India. Mr. Jenkins appeared to think India was a country which for the present, at any rate, if not for an indefinite period, must be treated as a dependency of the Crown. I admit that the Indian question is a difficult question to deal with, and of course we could not allow that India should have a representation proportionate to her enormous population; but, nevertheless, I think we ought to bear in mind that India is a country to the views and feelings of whose inhabitants we ought to pay deference. (Applause.)

Sir Robert Torrens in summing up the discussion said he believed Mr. Jenkins's scheme of a federation of the Empire an impossibility. It had always appeared to him that the true solution of the difficulty was to clothe the colonial agents who came to this country with a different position to that which they now occupied. A charge d'affaires from the smallest petty German State would be treated with deference at the Foreign Office, and colonial representatives who were men of the highest political character were entitled to be treated in the same way. He quite agreed with Mr. Jenkins in excluding India from the consideration of this question. It was a great mistake which we fell into, to imagine that our institutions were fitted for all mankind. He did not believe that any other race on the face of the earth, except the Anglo-Saxon, was at all fitted to live under our institutions.—(Hear, hear.)

Miscellaneous.

DR. FAYRER, C.S.I.—Among those who were presented to the Queen at Dunrobin last week was Dr. Fayrer, C.S.I.

MESSRS. GLEDSTANES AND CO.—At a meeting of creditors of Messrs Gledstanes and Co., held at the Cannon-street Hotel on Sept. 17, a resolution was passed to liquidate the affairs of the firm by arrangement, and not in bankruptcy, and Mr. Robert Palmer Harding, of No. 8, Old Jewry, was appointed trustee. A full statement of affairs was laid before the meeting.

SUICIDE OF AN INDIAN OFFICER.—Colonel Cuppage, of the Bengal Staff Corps, committed suicide on Wednesday by laying himself on the rails of the Ulster Company at Lurgan. The limited mail from Dublin passed over the body, and completely dismembered the head from the trunk. The deceased was forty-four years of age. The jury returned a verdict to the effect, "That the deceased had committed suicide whilst labouring under temporary insanity."

ANGLO-INDIAN TEA COMPANY.—At the annual meeting of the Anglo-Indian Tea Company (Limited) on Saturday, a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum was declared, £500 was written off the preliminary expenses account, £500 off the goodwill account, and £982 carried forward to the next year's account. It was resolved to issue the remaining shares of the company at par to the present shareholders, and at 20s. per share premium to the public.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK.—The directors of the Delhi and London Bank have issued their report for the half-year ending the 30th June last. The accounts exhibit a net profit of £9,465. 5s. 9d., which, added to the unappropriated balance, makes a total of £9,798. 10s. 9d. Out of this amount it is proposed to pay a dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, and to set aside £2,000 for deficiencies on accounts that comprise the "lock up," leaving £1,046. 0s. 9d. to be carried forward.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The most recent exports to India were the following:—By the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. From Southampton, per Pekin, September 12, 1872: Gold—Alexandria, £38,000; Bombay, £7,000; Ceylon, £5,500; Madras, £1,136. £118,727 in silver bullion was sent to the Straits and China in pretty equal divisions by the same steamer. Price of silver: Bar, 5s. 7-16d. per oz. standard; Mexican dollars, old die, 5s. 2½d. per oz.; new die, 5s. per oz.; 5 francs, 4s. 11d. per oz.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £650,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £427,500; to Bombay, £220,000; and to Madras, £2,500. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 5 per cent., and on Bombay at that price about 91 per cent.; above on all Presidencies in full. The average rate on Calcutta was 1s. 10½d., and on Bombay and on Madras, 1s. 10¾d.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—The directors of this Bank have declared a dividend for the half-year ended June 30 last, at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, payable on Sept. 28, and have carried over a surplus of £88,149. 18s. 7d. to credit of the current half-year's account. The report contains the following:—"Unfortunately, since these accounts were closed, the failure of a firm of high standing, with which the Bank has had large transactions for many years past, has taken place. This will involve the Bank in a loss, the extent of which, depending on the realisation of the assets of various firms connected with them, cannot be correctly estimated; but at the worst, it will leave a large balance available to supplement the profits of the current half-year, and, apart from this, the business of the Bank at all points continues satisfactory.

QUARANTINE NOTICES.—The Marine Department of the Board of Trade have received from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, through her Majesty's Acting Consul at Lisbon, the following Quarantine Notices issued by the Portuguese Government, viz.:—(1.) That the ports of Meeanmeer, Lahore, Kassowlee, and elsewhere, are declared "infected" with cholera morbus since the 28th ult., and all the other ports of British India are declared suspected of the same disease since the same date. (2.) That the port of Nicolaieff is declared "infected" with cholera morbus since the 8th ult. And also a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Copenhagen, stating that upon the 7th inst. the Danish Government declared Wiborg (Finland) to be infected with cholera morbus, and that, in consequence, all vessels now arriving in Danish ports from that place will be subject to the usual quarantine inspection before communication with the land is permitted.

TROOPS SERVING IN INDIA.—The following Special Circular was issued from the War Office on the 10th inst.:—"In future the married establishments of batteries, troops, and companies serving in India will be kept entirely distinct from that of the depots. The married establishment authorised by the Indian Government for troops in India is as follows:—All married staff-sergeants and sergeants, 12 per cent. of trumpeters, drummers, rank and file, calculated upon the establishment of the batteries, troops, or companies serving in India. The number of married men already on the 'Married Roll' of the depot is as shown in paragraph 1 of clause 53, Army Circular, 1871. On the embarkation of a regiment for India any women on the married roll who may be left behind with their husbands in excess of the home establishment of the depot, and any who may from time to time be sent home from India, will be considered as a part of the head-quarters' married establishment of the regiment, and consequently will not create vacancies at the batteries, troops, or companies serving in India; as the families of such men will remain on the Indian married establishment, chargeable against Indian revenues. These families will be entered separately in the married roll forwarded to the War Office; and all expenses (including travelling at home) connected with them will be chargeable against Indian revenues. Paragraph 7 of clause 53, Army Circular, 1871, is cancelled, and paragraph 13 of that clause is no longer applicable to regiments in India or their depots.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.—From a statement of the amount of capital, revenue, and expenses of nine guaranteed and four State railways in India for the year 1871, compiled by Mr. J. A. Baynes, the secretary of the Bombay and Central Indian Railway, it appears that the average length of railways then in operation was 5,083 miles, the cost of construction (exclusive of stores) £63,958,904, being at the rate of £15,902 per mile. The gross traffic receipts for the year 1871 amounted to £6,177,104, or £1,191 per open mile of railway, the total working cost to £3,203,937, being 52.38 per cent. of the receipts, or £620 per open mile, and the net earnings to £2,844,169, or £557 per open mile. The number of passengers conveyed was 18,940,585, or 3,726 per open mile of railway. The weight of merchandise and minerals conveyed was 3,427,278 tons, or 670 tons per open mile. The total receipts for passengers amounted to £1,941,579, for goods to £4,022,115, and for miscellaneous traffic to £153,410, making together £6,117,104, or 8.60 per train mile. The cost of maintenance of way amounted to £647,500, or £127 per open mile; the cost of locomotive power to £1,102,754, or £218 per open mile; for repairs and renewals of carriages to £227,239, or £452 per open mile; for traffic expenses to £698,227, or £137 per mile; and for miscellaneous expenses to £400,892, or £79 per open mile—total, £3,203,937, or 4.48s. per train mile, leaving the net earnings £2,844,169, or 4.03s. per train mile, being equal to 3.2 per cent. on the capital expended.

THE NEW STEAMSHIP "HYDASPEE."—This vessel, which has been built and engined by Messrs. Denny and Co., of Dumbarton, for the P. and O. Company, was on Sept. 17 taken to Stokes Bay, under the command of Captain J. M. Rogers, for a trial at the measured mile, preparatory to being employed in the Eastern mail service. With an average pressure of steam of 57lb., vacuum 25½in., and the engines making 66 revolutions per minute, she ran the measured mile twice, with highly satisfactory results. The Hydaspee will be quite equal to her sister ship the Cathay. The following are the leading dimensions of the Hydaspee:—Length between perpendiculars, 361ft. 5in.; breadth of beam, 39ft. 4in.; depth from top of floor to spar deck, 29ft. 4in.; registered tonnage, 1,890.79; gross tonnage, 2,983.52. She is fitted with compound engines of 450 nominal horse-power, indicating 2,052 during the trial; diameter of cylinders, 86 and 50 inches respectively, with 4ft. 6in. length of stroke; diameter of screw (Griffiths' solid four-bladed), 17ft. 9in., and 25ft. pitch. The vessel has accommodation for 136 first and 50 second-class passengers and 2,000 tons of cargo, and is beautifully fitted in every department with all the latest improvements and conveniences. The engines worked admirably throughout the trial. The Hydaspee was appointed to leave Southampton Sept. 21, as an extra steamer for Bombay, with passengers and cargo, via the Suez Canal.

THE STATE OF MEEAN MEER.—Mr. W. Phelps, late chaplain of Meean Meer, writes thus to the Times:—"Allow me to confirm what 'Punjabi' has long said in your columns, as to the most crowded state of the infantry barracks at Meean Meer; also to modify the impression which must have been made on the minds of many of your readers as to the barren appearance of the station. This certainly is still to some extent a fault in the military capital of the Punjab, but it is a much decreased and decreasing evil. Of late years many trees have been planted, and by means of these and an excellent green and cricket ground, the work of Col. Davis, commanding the 37th Regiment, the desolate appearance of the infantry lines is much mitigated. All about the cantonment, too, the land has been brought largely under cultivation, an abundant supply of canal water being now available for irrigation as well as for household purposes. Yet, in spite of all this and other improvements that might be mentioned, and an excellent system of conservancy, the destroyer has again made his appearance with terrible results. No doubt there may have been some carelessness on the part of the water carriers, though the very efficient arrangements of the 37th Regiment make this, to my mind, highly improbable, but in spite of what Dr. de Renzy has written, a high authority, I admit, I doubt if bad water be the origin of the present outbreak, and I am sure the best supply of water in the world would not make it "impossible" for the cholera to visit the plains of Lahore. At present, it seems to me, causa latet. No doubt science will throw increasing light on the nature and progress of this stern and mysterious visitor, and every fact that is likely to aid the inquiry which will be instituted should be mentioned. One circumstance, perhaps, deserves notice, and that is the regularity of the intervals between the various attacks since the disease first appeared among our troops at Meean Meer. The first outbreak was in 1856. Four years elapsed, and again the disease appeared in an awfully malignant form in 1861 and 1862. Again four years passed, and in 1867 the pestilence visited the station. Again a cessation of four years, and now in the fifth year, we are shocked by the return of that well-known minister of death. Beyond a doubt the disease was by many expected to come this year, and the expectation probably contributed in no small degree to its outbreak and spread."

HIGHWAY ROBBERIES IN PERSIA.—"A Non-Combatant's Father" has sent to the Times the following extract from a letter describing the results of the Persian famine, which he has lately received from his son, resident in Shiraz, and a member of the staff of the English Government Telegraph in Persia:—"Things are getting very bad here. The famine may be said to have ceased, but the necessity for relief continues; the lower middle classes have sold their all during the great scarcity, and the wandering tribes have lost from want of feed their herds of cattle; but of course have had to pay the revenue. These people depend solely on their cattle and sheep for a livelihood, and have now reached a pitch of desperation which leads them to commit any atrocity; in fact the roads are most unsafe. Among our small staff of fifty here I can assure you within the last twelve-month the excitement has been great. We of course have to go out at all times, and though nominally provided with guards the people at the villages frequently laugh at orders of the various local governors, and the necessities of the service we are on force us to proceed without. Here is the list of casualties for the last twelve months:—1. One of our line inspectors robbed and beaten near Teheran; 2. One ditto robbed near Koomishah; 3. Captain Windham, R.I.A. (passing through Persia on his way to India), robbed of all his traps eighteen miles from Shiraz, but escaped ill-treatment, as his horse bolted with him into the town—no redress; 4. I was stripped in the middle of the night near Yezdicash, robbed of all my kit when travelling post, forced to walk barefoot for several hours, and only rescued by the road guards about noon, my feet being so swollen and full of thorns that I had to be carried into the post-house, having been taken some fifteen miles off the road—no redress; 5. The whole has culminated in the brutal murder of Sergeant Collins, R.E., on the 23rd inst. (July) at nearly the same place where Captain Windham was looted. Poor Collins, whose service was nearly completed, and who has been in failing health latterly, having seen active service in the China war, was surrounded by some twelve tribes-men,—Suffi Khanis 'eels' of the Eekhani of Fars—and after wounding two of his assailants (poor fellow, he was forced to fight, being mounted on a mule) was shot first in the back, and then through the brain, and his body dragged a few yards off the road and there left. The few servants and muleteers with him, who, Persian like, had not raised a hand in his defence, were liberated at sunset. His body was brought in two days afterwards, and I am glad to say that the Persians made an attempt to do him honour (of course, under pressure). A thief-catcher and forty horsemen went out on the trail of the thieves, but the leader has returned for reinforcements. This case is too flagrant not to be taken up, and we all live in hope that some faint show of justice may be made by the Persian authorities. So strong is the feeling of clanship among the Eliots (or wandering tribes), that unless powerful pressure is brought to bear on their chief, I fear the murderers will escape."

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE
APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

COMPANY.

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1859. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. . . . Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. . . . It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. . . . It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. . . . It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. . . . He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. . . . The night on the field at Ferozeshahur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. . . . The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. . . . Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. . . . Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. . . . His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. . . . It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, September 6; Agra and Madras, September 4; Calcutta, September 3.

LORD NORTHBROOK'S return to Simla on the 26th August from his refreshing and evidently delightful trip to Chini, was followed by a meeting of the Legislative Council on the 29th. In the absence of various members at Calcutta and elsewhere, the work got through was accompanied by little talk. Mr. Hobhouse presented the Report of the Select Committee on the amended form of the Indian Evidence Act of 1872. The Bill in question, which repairs an important oversight regarding the power of administering oaths, was passed offhand, and will become law forthwith. A Bill against uttering counterfeit coin in native States also became law. Sir R. Temple's Bill for extending to other parts of British India the privilege now reserved to the three great capitals, of transshipping goods brought by steamer without paying duty, was referred to a Select Committee, which was to report on it two months hence. Two or three other Bills were advanced a stage.

THE inquiry into the late Sagar Panic has issued in the following results. Colonel Radcliffe, commanding the Station and the 3rd Madras Cavalry, is transferred to the 1st Madras Cavalry at Kampti. Colonel Doveton is removed from the command of the 40th M.N.I., and directed to do "general duty" at the same station. Lieutenant-Colonels Couchman and Rose, Second in Command and Wing Officer of the same regiment, have been ordered off for general duty, the one at Kananor, the other at Bellary. Colonel Radcliffe's removal has called forth some surprise, from the belief that he had only acted in compliance with the requisitions of the civil power.

COLONEL HICKS of the 44th Bengal N.I. has also been banished from his command at Shillong to the penal limbo of general duty, on account of his behaviour towards General Bouchier during the Loshai Expedition. Lord Napier having deemed it undesirable, "in the interests of the service," that Colonel Hicks should remain any longer in command, he is requested with all politeness to name any station, other than Shillong, in which he would wish to do general duty.

WITH regard to the acquittal of Lieutenant Gibson, the Commander-in-Chief holds him "much to blame for not reporting immediately to his official superior, Captain Goodfellow," the attempt to bribe him, instead of adopting "the more dangerous course," which led to his trial on a disgraceful charge, after a long period of arrest. Poor Captain Gibson!

THE Indian papers give little further news regarding the progress of the cholera in Upper India. It appears however to have broken out at Meerut, and once more at Agra, whence the 65th Foot were to be sent out into camp. At Philour and Jalandhar no fresh cases had occurred since the 28th August. The prevalence of the disease in Kashmir is said to be greatly exaggerated. Dengue is still worrying our countrymen in Agra, Lucknow, and the Madras Presidency. At Agra residents have been requested to send for their own letters to the Post-office, nearly all the native postmen being laid up with dengue.

Two more victims of mark to cholera are reported from Allahabad. The Rev. Mr. Carter, who had only lately arrived from England, and was hardly recovered from a former illness, succumbed to the disease not long after reading the funeral service over the late Mr. Fagan. The latter gentleman's place as chaplain is to be filled up by Mr. Stephenson, Chaplain of St. John's Church at Calcutta. The death of Mr. F. O. Mayne, Commissioner of Allahabad, from the afterfruits of cholera, has called forth a feeling tribute from Sir W. Muir, which we cannot do better than quote in full:—

In Mr. Mayne the public service has lost an officer of singular devotion and ability. Early promoted to offices of responsibility, he discharged the trust with an energy and discretion which always secured success. He was employed in 1857-58 as a political officer with the troops in Bundelkhand, and his gallant conduct and wise administration in that capacity were specially recognised by her Majesty's Government, and rewarded by the Companionship of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath. In the offices of Inspector General of Police, of Commissioner, and of member of the Board of Revenue, he has proved himself, both in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, an eminently firm and able as well as popular administrator, and has rendered invaluable service to the Government.

In private life he was ever foremost in promoting works of beneficence and charity. And while his urbanity and kindness will long be remembered by every class, native and European, his large-hearted liberality, and ready advocacy of schemes for their comfort and relief, will make him most missed as the friend of the poor and destitute.

In Mr. Mayne, the Lieutenant governor mourns the loss of a faithful friend and colleague, and a wise and most loyal counsellor. And his Honour feels assured that his untimely decease will be deplored by the whole service, as well as by the community at large, in the North-Western Provinces.

MR. R. ELLIS, who was seriously ill with fever when the mail started, has really been appointed to succeed Mr. Arbuthnot in the Madras Council, on the latter's retirement in October.—We are glad to see that, in compliance with strong recommendations from India, the India Office has sanctioned a special retiring pension of Rs. 6,000 a-year to Captain Howe, Master Attendant of Calcutta.

IN a despatch to the Indian Government, the Secretary of State for India sanctions the grant to Mr. Cowan of a pension of Rs. 300 a-month, in terms expressly confirming the justice of the sentence pronounced against him by the acting Viceroy in Council. With regard to the part taken by the Punjab Government in the matter of the Kuka outbreak, Mr. Lepel Griffin, Officiating Secretary to that Government, has met certain statements of the Friend of India with a flat denial. Instead of "halting and hesitating where it ought to have acted," until Lord Mayo had telegraphed an order to stop the executions, it now appears that, "hours before the receipt of Lord Mayo's telegram," and immediately on the receipt of Mr. Forsyth's telegram, the Lieutenant-Governor, "who had been as much shocked as the Viceroy at the summary executions," had telegraphed to Mr. Forsyth that a sufficient example had been made; after the receipt of which telegram no further executions took place. Meanwhile, so far from halting and hesitating, the Punjab Government had sent off a strong force to the disturbed district, while Ram Singh and his chief followers had been summarily seized and sent out of the province. At that time the Viceroy had telegraphed his "entire approval" of the measures adopted at Lahore. With regard to any apparent delay in the transmission or receipt of messages, Mr. Griffin admits that the telegraph line was blocked with messages from various causes, but he affirms that "orders were never delayed for a single message placed before the Lieutenant-Governor which required orders." In short, the Punjab Government, "neither in the issue of original orders for the suppression of the outbreak, nor in the issue of orders necessitated by the execution of the rebels, halted or hesitated for a single hour; while every order so issued received the entire approval of the Government of India." So far well; but why then did Lord Mayo telegraph "to stop any further summary executions without the express orders of the Lieutenant-Governor?" If the Viceroy entirely approved of Mr. Davis's proceedings, could he not have left him to stay the hands of his own subordinates at the proper moment?

THE moral drawn from all this by the Times of India is the need of foregoing "the absurd and mischievous practice followed by the Supreme Government, of withholding all important information from the public until it has grown stale from long keeping." Under a wiser system it would have been impossible, argues our contemporary, for any journal to have even insinuated what the Friend of India broadly affirmed regarding the uncertain attitude of the Punjab Government. There is some force, we think, in these remarks.

"WHY should not India supply her own iron?" is the heading of an article in the Indian Daily News on the need of utilising the "immense resources" possessed by India in iron and coal. Questions of the same kind have been asked here and there for the last twenty years, and the only attempt to answer them was made to little purpose in Kemaon, where plenty of iron ore is believed to lie at hand, ready for smelting with charcoal obtained from the forests in the neighbouring "Terai." Somehow the experiment was made and failed, owing mainly perhaps to the faulty conditions under which it took place. Hazaribagh in Bengal however is said to enjoy the twofold advantage of being rich in coal and iron, besides lying near the main lines of road from Bengal to other provinces. In these days of high prices and increased demand for both iron and coal, it would surely pay the Indian Government to encourage in every way the production of home-wrought iron in a country which every year needs more and more of that metal for public and private uses. No consideration for English manufacturers should deter the Government from trying to revive on a grander scale that branch of industry for which India was once renowned. It was Indian workmen in Indian smithies, who used to forge most of the steel that found its way into Europe as the produce of Damascus. Next year's Exhibition at South Kensington will probably show some striking samples of modern Indian workmanship in steel and iron. If only the metal can still be found in sufficient quantities in the right places, there is no reason why India should be indebted to England for railway plant, steel guns, or iron steamers, costing twice as much as if they were made on the spot.

ACCORDING to recent telegrams from Calcutta, hurricanes, or "cyclonic storms," raged on the 20th current in Eastern Bengal, especially beyond Goalundo, in Assam. The jute crop seems to have suffered no little damage. About Serajganj 50,000 bales of jute have been destroyed, and many native boats have been wrecked.

THE Madras Times repeats the old complaint, so amusingly enforced in Thackeray's "Newcomes," touching the indiscriminate favour shown by our countrymen at home to visitors from India, of whatever rank or character. The "novel views" of which a contemporary speaks are really very old views indeed. As far back as we can remember it used to be a standing joke among Anglo-Indians that any Indian khitmatgār or "bearer" could always pass himself off upon our countrymen at home as an Eastern Prince or nobleman. It was generally believed, not always without reason, that a credulous and ill-informed public would open its arms to any stranger with a dark skin, handsome features, and a turban of elaborate structure. Now and then perhaps some keen-eyed Colonel Newcome would detect the imposture; but Mrs. Leo Hunter seldom cared to realise the unpleasant truth, and went on her way rejoicing in the halo which guests so distinguished threw around herself. If we mistake not, Amenoollah Khan himself, the Nana Sahib's envoy and agent, had risen from his master's kitchen to the place he filled for a time in English society. We should have thought that by this time our countrymen had grown wiser or more cautious; but if our Madras contemporary writes advisedly, much of the old blind love of lion-hunting still prevails among us, whether in the old or in new guise. That the complaint is not wholly groundless we are ready to admit, in view of the stories that now and then reach our ears or challenge notice in the papers. To say nothing of hoaxes perpetrated in private circles, we are too prone perhaps to lionise any native who comes among us with a mission, or with apparent claim to respect for high mental attainments. This however is better, by many degrees, than that blind worship of mere rank or wealth, or the pretence of either, which has so often laid our countrymen, and countrywomen also, at the feet of mere adventurers or wealthy snobs from either hemisphere. Some allowance should also be made for the English habit of showing kindness to all foreigners merely as such, and to that mixture of pride, good nature, and respect for truth, which tolerates all manner of plain speaking on the part of unfriendly critics from the East, especially when their remarks are levelled against the rulers of British India. It pleases the critics and does not hurt ourselves. Full credit may likewise be given to the enthusiastic few who really seek to redress the wrongs which India is supposed to have suffered at our hands.

As for the other half of our contemporary's complaint, namely, that Anglo-Indians at home are comparatively neglected and held of little worth, we should say that facts by no means bear out the indictment. It is true that formerly "Indians," especially Indian ladies, were somewhat coldly received in good society, but that was not altogether society's fault. In this respect however things have surely improved of late years, with the establishment of weekly mails, frequent furloughs, a comprehensive railway system, and the abolition of the Company's rule. In the political world at any rate old Indians may command such influence as they generally care to wield. If the India Office happens to underrate their merits, they can fall back on the East India Association, the Chambers of Commerce, the House of Commons, or the Press. On Indian subjects Lord Lawrence in the Upper House, Sir C. Wingfield and Mr. Eastwick in the Lower, are always sure of a respectful if not a numerous audience. Sir H. Rawlinson, Sir Bartle Frere, Sir D. Macleod, can fix the attention of a pretty large circle of readers or hearers, whenever they choose to express themselves in public. Anglo-Indians of the non-official class, like Mr. R. Elliot or Mr. Prichard for instance, have no difficulty in finding a vehicle for the expression of their opinions. If the best men do not always come to the front, that is a misfortune which they share in common with many of their countrymen whose experiences are confined to life at home.

GEOGRAPHY has never been the strong point of the English Foreign Office. An amusing instance to the point has lately appeared in a notice issued by the Marine Department of the Board of Trade, to which our correspondent "H.C." has drawn attention. Our Acting Consul at Lisbon reports the issuing of a quarantine notice by the Portuguese Government, to the effect that the "ports" of Mearneer, Lahore, Kassowlie, "and elsewhere," are declared infected with cholera since the 28th of August. The people in those places will be surprised to hear of their new-found connection with the seagoing trade of India. There is certainly a river near Lahore, but we were not aware that it had lately become navigable for ships of the smallest size, nor has the telegraph as yet informed us that the sandy wastes around Meeanmeer have suddenly been transformed into an inland sea. Kassowlie has hitherto been perched in the Himalayas, at a height which precluded the notion of its neighbourhood to the sea or even to a navigable river, and the only water in the place is drawn from wells. Poets have sometimes taken strange licenses in geographical matters, and Shakespeare talks of a seavoyage to Bohemia; but the maps of his day probably left much to the imagination. Of the Portuguese Government no great approach to accuracy was perhaps to be expected in a matter concerning India; but modern maps of that country are to be had for the purchasing, and her Majesty's Acting Consul at Lisbon would do well to study them, before endorsing the mistakes of Portuguese officials.

AN appeal of which few old Indians will have heard without sympathy, has lately been made to the British public in behalf of three aged sisters of Lieutenant Waghorn, the pioneer of the Overland route to India through Egypt. The eldest of these ladies, a widow of seventy-four, lives at Melbourne, infirm, unfit for work, and in very straitened circumstances. The second sister, who lives at Rochester, is a helpless invalid, and the third, a widow of fifty-nine, who lives at Melbourne, is so feeble that she will soon be obliged to give up the calling of a schoolmistress. These poor women, with beggary staring them in the face at the end of their struggling lives, have just issued a memorial to the merchants and ship-owners of England, begging for "such pecuniary aid as will provide a small allowance for them in their declining years." Remembering what England owes, politically and commercially, to the zealous and persevering sailor who first proved the practicability of the route through Egypt and the Red Sea, we sincerely hope that his sisters will not ask in vain for the means of smoothing their journey to the grave. Subscriptions for that purpose are to be received, it seems, by the London Chartered Bank of Australia in Cannon-street. Ready as our merchants may be however to befriend the kinswomen of Lieut. Waghorn, it may occur to those who know something of his story to hope that the task of succouring these old ladies may be taken up by other than private hands. As a servant at different times both of the Indian and English Governments, Waghorn deserved far better of his country than to be kept waiting year after year for the pension which he lived to enjoy for only eighteen months. It was in 1829 that he carried despatches from Lord Ellenborough to the Governor of Bombay by the route which has since become the regular highway to India; but it was not till fifteen years afterwards that his services in opening and developing the new route were grudgingly rewarded by his employers with a pension of four hundred a-year. It would only be an act of common justice, if the Indian and English Governments were to atone for former neglect and ill-usage by settling between them a modest annuity on his three sisters. The cost would be a mere trifle, an infinitesimal fraction of the pecuniary gain to England and India from Waghorn's successful labours. M. de Lesseps has raised a statue to his memory. The least that England can do is to save his sisters from slow starvation.

THE Times last week read the Indian Medical officers a severe lecture for continuing to theorise unprofitably about the causes of cholera, instead of accepting the simple conclusions drawn some time ago in England by Mr. Simon and Professor Parkes from a series of carefully recorded facts. Cholera, we are told, is mostly developed by the use of water tainted with cholera poison; and the spread of the disease in Indian stations can be prevented only by covering up the tanks and channels which furnish the water supply for our troops. The successful results of such a system, as applied to Indian cities, have already shown themselves in the case of Calcutta and Bombay; and if Meeanmeer is worth retaining as a military station, some measures of the kind proposed by Dr. De Renzy, one of the ablest sanitary officers in the Indian Service, ought to be adopted without delay. One chief source of cholera and other diseases, the contamination of open tanks and wells by the natives who habitually resort to them, would thus at any rate be cut off. A little money spent in this way would be spent to far better purpose than in building palatial barracks which retain the heat and are prone to tumble down or let in the wet during the rainy season.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, September 30, 1872.

DR. BIRDWOOD ON COMPETITION.

IN this age of competitive examinations, it is well to be reminded by such experienced critics as Dr. Birdwood of the weak points in a system which is everywhere superseding among us the old methods of selection by patronage and personal favour. On the theoretical advantages of open competition, of a fair field and no favour, it is needless to enlarge for the hundredth time. But it were equally idle to deny that the competitive systems hitherto adopted fall short in many respects of their assumed ideal. In a paper reprinted by the East India Association, Dr. Birdwood attempts to show wherein the new system, as applied to the Indian services, has failed in comparison with the older methods of selection, as well as those points in which the present system would bear material improvement. Himself an "unfeigned advocate of competition," if only it be thorough, and not a mere sham, he inveighs in unmeasured terms against a system which, in his opinion, "too often plucks the best men for the Indian Civil Service, and passes the worst." As things are now, the examiners are compelled to set more and more puzzling questions, tripping up as many competitors as possible, instead of testing culture, which can be tested "only by the continuous trial examination involved in the gradual following out of a regulated course of discipline." His views on this point are supported by the experience of Mr. Matthew Arnold, who once bore part in the examination for the Indian Civil Service.

"I can truly say"—remarks that high authority—"that the candidates to whom I gave the highest marks were, almost without exception, the candidates whom I would not have appointed. They were crammed men, not formed men; the formed men were public school men, but they were ignorant on the special matter of examination, English literature;" of English literature namely as taught in certain hand-books prescribed by the examiners. Another distinguished examiner pointed out to Dr. Birdwood, as the very type of an uneducated man, one of the most successful candidates of his year. The Doctor declares that some of the foremost candidates on a certain occasion owed their places on the list to "the fact of their crammer having, on the very morning of the examination in natural sciences, run them over the anatomy of the lobster, which was one of the subjects of the examination on that day." He might well say that such haphazard methods of testing men for the public service are only better than patronage carelessly or corruptly dispensed.

That the present system has done and may do little harm to the Indian Civil Service, is owing, we are told, to the value still set upon that service by the public at large. In the case of the Indian Medical Service however, for which there is no demand, competition has become "a pretence, a delusion, and a snare." It has often happened of late that the candidates for that service have barely outnumbered the appointments to be filled up. A large proportion therefore of the selected candidates have been men who would never have passed in under the system of the old Indian Directors. One result of this has been the great dearth of real science among the new men. Some time ago the Bombay Director of Public Instruction told Dr. Birdwood that no officer in the Bombay Medical Service was competent to fill the proposed Chair of Geology in the Grant Medical College. In the old days the Directors picked out promising young men who won for themselves a name in this or that branch of Medical or Physical Science, whereas the new system sends out as army surgeons "broken-down, spavined, winded, and galled country practitioners." We would fain hope that the Doctor has borne a little too hard on the present race of Indian Medical Officers; but if all we hear be true, it must be allowed that the Service in question is not what it once was, and is very far indeed from what it ought to be.

According to Dr. Birdwood, the best of our Anglo-Indian officials are now to be found, not in the covenanted Civil Service, but in the uncovenanted services, the educational departments, and the ecclesiastical establishments, to all of which the competitive system has not yet been extended. Owing to the virtual exclusion of university and public school men from the upper ranks of Indian administration, the covenanted service is being outmatched and overpowered by the open professions, the law, the press, and commerce, "all of which attract superior men from England." It may be hazardous to meet so broad an assertion with a direct negative; but we are loath to believe without positive proof, that the general run of competitors in the Indian Civil Service would suffer by a comparison with the average of merit in other classes of public servants.

There is more truth perhaps in the Doctor's views regarding the severance of the old personal ties which bound the India House to its servants. The present system, as hitherto worked, provides no substitute for the old feeling of loyalty on the one hand, and kindly interest on the other, which marked the relations of the old directors to their nominees. The old sense of fellowship also, as fostered by the training of Haileybury and Addiscombe, no longer exists among a body of young men unknown to each other and to their employers before they enter through the door of an open competition on the scene of their future labours. The young civilian or cadet of former days went out to a country of which he had already gained some traditional knowledge, and formed new friendships with the sons or relatives of his father's friends. Common interests and traditions knitted together the members of a service in which the old names were always reappearing under new conditions. How different this from a system which sends out to an unknown country a number of isolated strangers having nothing in common save the hope of drawing a handsome salary for a given amount of work! The India Office on the other hand has no personal existence for the Indian official. It is perfect as a mere machine; but men are not governed by machines, and the Indian Council has none of that living human force which made the old Court of Directors a source of personal attraction to all who served under them.

If the proper remedy for the latter defect is not easy to point out, there can be little doubt as to the direction in which the competitive system needs reforming. Whatever else Dr. Birdwood may have argued wrongly, he is right in proposing to "throw the public services open to the public schools, the Government-inspected schools and colleges and universities throughout the United Kingdom and the British Empire." In this way we should get some kind of guarantee for the candidate's previous training and qualifications, instead of taking him on trust fresh from a crammer who has contrived to vamp him up at short notice for a special and transient purpose. As "the best of examiners is the examiner of his own pupils," the selection of candidates should be entrusted to the masters and heads of each school or college whose turn it might be to compete for the prize; the final award being still reserved for the Civil Service Commissioners. If some arrangement of this sort were followed up or supplemented by the re-establishment of special training-schools like Haileybury and Addiscombe, and a due extension of the qualifying age for admission to the Indian Services, the competitive system would have fewer assailants, or at least would offer much fewer grounds for reasonable complaint.

POST-OFFICE ORDERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In pages 891 and 905 of your paper of yesterday's date (17th) you have notified that from the 1st prox. Post-office Orders can be obtained on India on payment of a commission of 2 per cent.

In page 908 you have quoted Bank Bills of Exchange on the three Presidency towns at from 1s. 10½d. to 1s. 10 15-16d. on demand.

The question for intending remitters is, What does the Indian Government consider to be the par of exchange?

If Government requires the payment of 2s. for every rupee, plus the commission, the purchaser of a Post-office Order will have to pay nearly 2s. 0½d. for every rupee instead of 1s. 10 15-16d., which a private bank would charge him.

If Government should consider the par of exchange to be 1s. 10d. it will only require the purchaser of a Post-office Order to pay less than 1s. 10½d. for every rupee, including commission. Many remitters would under such circumstances prefer the safety and cheapness of Post-office Orders, and would desert the private banks in order to patronise Government, which would thus unwisely interfere with the course of exchange, and with the operations of the banks and the merchants.

It must be remembered that the limitation of £10 is delusive. Europeans in India are known to have bought more than one Post-office Order (each for Rs. 100) to remit to their wives in the hills. There is nothing to prevent a speculator, whether he be a Ramdeen, a Rhodabukhs, a Jeejeeboy, a Mutteel or an Isaac, from remitting £1,000 through a hundred different post-offices. The Government cash balances may be seriously affected by remittances made by thousands of gambling speculators.

Again, you remark in page 891 that of course the Indian offices will issue orders payable in this country. If this be authorised at the rate of 2s. per rupee, it is possible that crores of rupees may be paid into Indian post-offices, and that the English post-offices may be called upon to pay millions sterling in this country; for at the present rate of exchange almost every one would be happy to pay one-third of an anna commission for every two shillings to be received. Thousands of civilians, officers, merchants, clerks, &c., &c., would prefer to buy a safe Government bill in the form of a post-office order payable at sight, and yielding 1s. 11½d. net per rupee, rather than buy a bill from a private bank, or from a merchant who might fail the following week.

The Secretary of State for India ought to be very careful to avoid interfering with the course of exchange. Enough mischief has already been done by the purchase of Bills in Calcutta for Government through the Bank of Bengal; notwithstanding that the mercantile world was given to understand that all paper remittances by the Indian Government were to be in the shape of bills on Indian Treasuries sold publicly in London.

It would be unwise in the Government to offer through its Indian postmasters 2s. for every rupee, for the simple reason that the intrinsic value of a rupee is little more than 1s. 10d. in English sterling money. The Government finds it necessary to remit annually more than eight millions sterling from India to London. There can be no possible reason for its offering to increase its remittances in this direction at a loss to itself.

Moreover, great care must be taken to guard against forgeries and embezzlement. Our Indian postmasters are not so trustworthy as English postmasters are, neither does any one of the Postmasters-General in India exercise one tenth of the supervision which is daily brought to bear on the proceedings of English postmasters. What is to prevent a clever Baboo postmaster from issuing £10,000 in P.O. Orders on various Post-offices in England, and bolting with the money before his dishonesty can be detected?—Your obedient servant, T.

URDU GRAMMARS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Will you oblige me with space in your columns for a few remarks on the review of Professor Dowson's Grammar, which appeared in the Athenæum of the 21st of September? The opening paragraph of the review has these words:—

We think it more than doubtful whether it was worth while to write another grammar of cet idiome méprisable, as De Sacy used to call the Urdu. But every professor likes to lecture out of his own book, and therefore we will not quarrel with the author, though the grammars of Ibrahim, Mukbah, Gilchrist, Shakespear, Yates, Arnot, Forbes, Eastwick, and Williams were surely more than enough to make us cry, Ohe! jam satis. The fact is, Urdu is such a simple dialect that the slenderest stock of rules added to the alphabet will suffice.

I would first remark that whether Urdu be an idiome méprisable or not, it is the language of millions of her Majesty's subjects, and as such demands familiar acquaintance with it on the part of all those who have any share whatever in the Government of the people who speak it. 2. The mere existence of any number of grammars of any language does not preclude the possible necessity for the existence of another. An extension of the principle involved in the reviewer's remark would, if carried out, put an end to all progress. 3. No one who had taken the trouble to master the Urdu language would ever commit himself to the assertion that it is so simple as to require but a slender stock of rules. This might suffice for a smattering, such as most Englishmen have, but for nothing more.

We often laugh at what we are pleased to term "Babu's English," but we are not generally aware of the laugh, so common on the side of the native of India, at what is termed the "Sáhib's Hindústáni." Well would it be, however, if nothing more than a laugh was excited by the blundering of the English sáhib in his conversation with the natives.

As to the grammars mentioned by the reviewer, one alone calls for notice, that of Forbes. Eastwick's in no way improved on Forbes's Grammar, and should never have been written. The same may be said of Williams's Grammar; it adds a little of no great importance to Forbes's work, but it is marred by the use of Roman type. Forbes's Grammar was no doubt written at a time when a grammar of Urdu was needed. He made good use of the matter existing in the works of his predecessors and corrected many of their errors. But Forbes's Grammar could not but be imperfect and inaccurate, inasmuch as he could bring but little personal experience to bear on and check the information he gleaned from the works of Gilchrist, Yates, and others. However, allowing to the grammar of Forbes all the perfection that the time at which it was written would permit, it must be borne in mind that Urdu has advanced with rapid strides since those days; much that was then current in the language has now become obsolete, and many new forms and idioms have come into use; so that a new grammar of the language is really a desideratum. I say is, because I do not see that Professor Dowson's Grammar supplies the want. The Syntax of his work is no doubt fuller, but it abounds in misconceptions; and the whole work contains numerous inaccuracies. I am not however writing a review of Mr. Dowson's work, and shall therefore say no more respecting it. I hope that ere long we may be favoured with a grammar based on scientific principles by a competent scholar.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Pray give the subjoined notice gravely issued by the "Marine Department of the Board of Trade," in the London Gazette of the 17th inst., a place in your columns as a warning to all concerned, that no less a person than her Majesty's "Acting Consul" at Lisbon has, on the authority of the Portuguese Government, declared "Meeanmeer," "Lahore,"

"Kussowlie" (7,000 feet above the level of the sea!) and "elsewhere" to be "PORTS" of British India!

MARINE DEPARTMENT, BOARD OF TRADE,
WHITEHALL-GARDENS, Sept. 17.

The Board of Trade have received from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, through her Majesty's Acting Consul at Lisbon, the following quarantine notices, issued by the Portuguese Government, viz.:—1. That the ports of Meean Meer, Lahore, Kussowlie, and elsewhere, are declared "infected" with cholera morbus since the 28th ult., and all the other ports of British India are declared suspected of the same disease since the same date. 2. That the port of Nicolaieff is declared "infected" with cholera morbus since the 8th ult.

Will you please suggest to Lord Granville that his "Acting Consul" at Lisbon be sent to the nearest elementary school and kept there until he shall have learned so much of Indian Geography as shall teach him not to induce her Majesty's "Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs" again to issue such an egregiously stupid notice, even under the authority of the Portuguese Government?

IS INDIA OVERTAXED?

The Englishman maintains that, not only is it quite possible for an administration which is consistent with a large increase in the trade of a country to be at the same time productive of a vast amount of dissatisfaction and unhappiness, but the fact of such dissatisfaction and unhappiness co-existing with increased trade and greater material prosperity makes the errors of administration to which they may be due doubly regrettable, and in a certain sense doubly inexcusable. And similarly, as regards taxation, for a Government which does not overtax a people, to tax them in such a way that they feel themselves overtaxed, seems more foolish, if less malicious, than really to overtax them. The gravamen of the charge against the Government of the English in India lies in this very fact that, though they tax the people lightly, and do a great deal, with no inconsiderable success, to increase the wealth of the country, they nevertheless contrive to make the burden of their taxes as galling, and the people as miserable, as possible. Our Government is, in short, so ill-conceived in some respects that it makes the people unhappy, in spite of material prosperity. Its very pearls are turned into scorpions by the conditions under which it dispenses them; its lightest burdens into instruments of torture by the exquisite ignorance with which they are made to bear upon the sorest places. We cannot lay too much stress upon the necessity of eliminating from the inquiry the misconception we are pointing out. The Government are charged with making the people unhappy and discontented, and the outcome of the inquiry seems likely to be an attempt to show either, on the one hand, that the people are not unhappy and discontented at all, because they possess certain immunities and certain gifts which some people think ought to make them happy and contented, sua si bona norint; or, on the other, that the Government are not responsible for their unhappiness and discontent, because it confers upon them these gifts and immunities. But it is not enough for the Government to fold their hands and say, Your taxes are light, and your imports and exports are increasing; if you are not happy, you ought to be, and there is an end of it. It is the business of the Government to ascertain why it is that, in spite of these apparent blessings, the result is so unfortunate, and, if it is in their power, to apply the remedy. And we cannot be too careful to impress upon the Committee the necessity of keeping this in view.

UNEMPLOYED OFFICERS.

The Bombay Gazette holds that as a matter of economy to the State, it would be much cheaper to value officers' expectations and get rid of them altogether by purchase, than to permit unemployed officers at their own option to reside in England and qualify for higher pension and off-reckonings. It is true the home rate of pay would be much less than the Indian rate of even unemployed pay, but the goodness of the English climate would produce long lived annuitants, and bills for off-reckonings would soon become a heavy annual drain. What we would urge on Government, is a scheme offering liberal annuities to officers to retire, the accepting of such to bar claim to colonel's allowances. The Government would thus at once pay the annuities out of the saving of the pay now yearly thrown away as "unemployed pay in India;" and thus Government would get rid of its liability to pay every officer of the army who lives the enormous sum of £1,140 per year. All officers would not accept even a liberal scale of annuities, but a saving on them would be effected by allowing them to go home on furlough pay, even if they did live on, and ultimately gain the coveted allowances. Very few men with families, we hear, looking at home cost of living, could afford to go on furlough, and remain upon a pound a day in England, although allowed to count the time for their off-reckonings. This being so, many an officer would accept two pounds per day sooner than serve on in India eight or ten years to gain £1,140 per annum. We cannot too strongly urge the great advantages which will accrue to Government by at once introducing a retiring scheme, and dividing the patronage of appointments, regimental and staff, with the employed and unemployed officers.

THE UNCOVENANTED LEAVE RULES.

The Bombay Gazette points out that in the very despatch which promulgates the doctrine that "there should not be different rules of leave or absence for persons of different nationalities" there is contained the extraordinary admission that, "Different rules may, however, be properly adopted for different branches of the Uncovenanted Service" [the italics are ours]; and all throughout the correspondence the explanation of this expression "branches" is limited to such Europeans who have been or may be appointed to situations in India with the sanction of the Secretary of State. The obvious and unquestionable meaning of the concession to this class of Europeans is a concession to an artificial and arbitrary circumstance which is denied to one that is natural and inexorable. Given a European gentleman with a liver or spleen, enlarged from a residence in this to him unnatural climate, he may not look to return to his native climate for recovery under rules favourable to his doing so because he was nominated to his post by the Government of India. On the other hand, his neighbour similarly afflicted may proceed to Europe sustained by chances better suited to his case, because he may thank God that he is not like other Europeans, for has not the Secretary of State nominated him? With regard to the latter class his Grace the Duke of Argyll says in his closing despatch of last December, "the case is different," the sense of which is, that the laws of Nature are different as regards those men who have received the sanction of the Secretary of State, and may be recognised therefore.

COAL IN INDIA.

The Madras Athenæum holds that now is the time for the Geological Survey to prove to India that its researches have not been unproductive of practical results. Let the geologists show us where the coal is, and let the Government vigorously set to work to utilise the material therein found. It is not that coal is more urgently needed in India now than it has been any time during the last twenty years. But so long as things went on smoothly in England and we could import coal at reasonable rates, so long there existed a coldness and indifference regarding the development of the coal fields in this country. But now that universal attention has been drawn to the subject, there is a much greater likelihood that any suggestions and propositions in connection with Indian coal will receive due consideration at the hands of the authorities. In the Central Provinces we have the Chanda coal-fields. In 1869 the late Viceroy, after opening the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to Jubbulpore, went on to the Chanda district, and at a village named Googoose formally opened a pit, which was named after him the Mayo Colliery. This pit is in the midst of a patch of two and a-half square miles, over which coal seams of between thirty and forty feet in thickness spread almost continuously. It has been calculated that this field contains, at the very lowest estimate, forty millions of tons of coal. The Great Indian Peninsula Railway agree to pay Rs. 24 per ton for this coal upon delivery at Sindhee. This is less than half the price of imported coal at the same place. In Berar again there are coal areas containing, it is thought, 480 million tons of good coal. In the vicinity of both these fields iron ores are found, and neither of them is many miles distant from the railway. We believe a branch line from the Chanda coal-fields to the nearest point on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway has already been sanctioned, if, indeed, it is not in actual progress. These are gratifying results, and the work which has thus been opened up should be prosecuted with the utmost diligence. India ought not to rest satisfied until she has succeeded in producing annually sufficient coal for her own consumption both by land and sea. Money spent in laying down branch lines between productive coal-fields and the nearest line of railway is money well spent. Many of the Indian mines produce coal of an inferior quality, which nevertheless is sold at a high figure on account of the excessive cost of transport. The inferior quality of the article would not necessarily prevent its being employed as fuel, especially on land, but the high price at which it is sold deters purchasers and induces them to buy imported coal. Tramways and branch lines, by diminishing the cost of transport lower the prices and extend the sale. In these days coal is so absolutely essential to progress that too much attention cannot be devoted to the subject. In England we know the power of coal, and we can easily realise what our condition would be were we to be suddenly deprived of it. Things would come to a standstill. But in India its power has yet to be shown. Why is it necessary to send raw cotton a journey of 8,000 miles in order to get it made up into cloth? Why cannot India do much for herself that she is now obliged to get England to do for her? The answer to these and a hundred similar questions is, the want of coal. If we had coal in abundance we might set up and profitably work the most complicated machinery in this country. We might weave our own cloths, saw up our own timber, build our own iron ships, make our own pens, pins and needles, and accomplish a multitude of other useful works that we are now obliged to get done thousands of miles away.

Bengal.

CHOLERA AT KOHAT.—There has been a good deal of cholera at Kohat. Up to the 26th Aug. there had been 28 cases and 14 deaths, in cantonments, and a few in the city.

LADAKH.—The trade at Ladakh from the 1st of January to the 30th of June has been very trifling, the value of the imports being Rs. 51,154 and of exports Rs. 1,10,894. This is accounted for by the Joint Commissioner by the heavy falls of snow having kept the passes closed till very late, and the two best months for trade, July and November, not being included in the returns.

MR. G. ROMAINE.—It is currently reported that Mr. G. Romaine, the Judge Advocate General of the Army, is about to give up his appointment, and to return to England. The office is not likely to be given to another English barrister. There are many men in the country already who are quite as well fitted to hold this office as any man to be had in England.—Madras Athenæum.

A FINE FOR THE LATE DISTURBANCES.—The Lieutenant-Governor directs that Shahjehanpore, Loodheepore Sabhun, Sadullapur Bharrowlee, Nizampore, Lodheepore Chubka, Inglisporwa, Mookhesera, Munduja, Salarpore, Nanpore, in the Meerut District, shall be charged with the cost of maintaining an extra police force in consequence of the misconduct of the inhabitants.

THE DENGUE AT AGRA.—The dengue is committing such havoc at Agra, the local paper tells us, that the Magistrate and Collector's Court has been closed for a week, and the Treasury and Branch Bank of Bengal only attempt to do urgent business. The Post Office delivery-peons are laid up to such an extent that the Post Master has issued a notice, asking people to send to the office for their letters.

DEATH OF MR. HANSON, C.S.—The Pioneer announces, with the most sincere regret, the death of Mr. T. G. Hanson, C.S., of inflammation of the lungs. When he left Allahabad for Nynee Tal he was in weak health; but with a characteristic contempt of his weakness he rode up to Nynee Tal in a severe rainstorm, arriving at his destination utterly exhausted. The inflammation that set in in consequence resulted in death.

THE RAINS IN THE PUNJAB.—The Umballa paper says that never, in the memory of man, have the rains been so universal in the Punjab as during the present season. Not only has the fall been unprecedented in quantity in the eastern and northern districts of the province, but it has this year extended to the comparatively rainless tracts of Mooltan, Jhung, Montgomery, and the Trans-Indus districts.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—Lieutenant-Colonel B. Walton, commanding Calcutta Volunteer Rifles, writes in praise of the progress made by the volunteer cavalry branch recently established, and says his great ambition is to see one thousand infantry and three hundred lancers, and this could be done if the young men of the "City of Palaces" would only come to "attention" and to the front, and rally under his banner roll.

THE COMMITTEE ON SIMLA.—The Bombay Gazette's Simla correspondent writes:—"The Simla v. Calcutta Committee have not yet met, but are busily engaged in collecting statistics of expense. The work of the committee is merely a matter of detail in support of a foregone conclusion. It is already settled that the bulk of the establishments is to remain at Calcutta next year, and only members of Council, heads of departments, and a few principal clerks who may find it to their interest to volunteer will come to this cheerless region."

CAN IT BE TRUE?—A native paper gives an account of a transaction that we can scarcely believe. It says that at a place called Santher, in Central India, the Raja's maternal uncle, with the aid of a force, put to death the members of a family—not sparing even the women—and confiscated the whole of the movable and immovable property belonging to them. One man alone survived, who has in vain sought for justice at the Agency, the Political Agent having ordered him to apply for justice to the Raja!—Indian Daily News.

MAJORS OF ARTILLERY.—We are very clearly of opinion that the Secretary of State's refusal of Major's pay to Artillery Majors is invidious and unjust, and moreover that its injustice is capable of being shown in such an odious light, and of being pressed so strongly on the common sense and fairness of the House of Commons, that it will prove untenable. We think the Duke of Argyll must be quite conscious of this, and prepared ultimately to yield, only it seemed convenient to him, as a matter of parliamentary tactics, to give the Artillery their cherry in two bites—first the rank and then the pay of the rank. At any rate we advise our Artillery friends never to rest satisfied with one.—Pioneer.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA reached Dacca on the morning of the 26th Aug., and, after visiting the Dacca College, and the Po.ose School, consecrated an additional piece of ground for the cemetery. A confirmation has been held at St. Thomas's Church.

THE RUSSIANS AT YARKAND.—The Cabul news writer gives the following account of the visit of the Russians to Yarkand, which he says, may be relied on:—"While I was at Yarkand, four Russian officers with twelve sowars arrived at Tajkand, and it was reported that they had been sent by the Russian authorities at Agha Musjid. The Yarkand Vakil accompanied them. The Meer of Yarkand had received them very honourably, and had ordered his confidentialists to show them all the important places in his territory. After spending a week at Yarkand, they with the Meer's Vakil, left for Khatta, the place which the Meer has lately conquered.

A PILOT DISMISSED.—After the Court of Enquiry held on Monday regarding the collision of the s.s. Khedive and the s.s. Aral, a Marine Court sat to try Mate Pilot Arthur Fuller, for being intoxicated whilst in charge of the French Barque La Tour on the 6th and 7th instant. After receiving evidence in support of the charge, and hearing Mr. Fuller's defence, the Court decided that the defendant was guilty. The Judge, in passing sentence, mentioned that as this was the second occasion that the defendant had been brought up on the same charge, he had no option but to sentence him to be dismissed the service.—Indian Daily News.

GWALIOR.—A very considerable addition of strength is contemplated in the armament of the Fort at Gwalior. At present the authorised armament comprises 24 pieces of sorts, viz., four 40-pounder Armstrong guns, three 24-pounder and four 9-pounder smooth bores, four 10-inch and six 5½-inch mortars, with three 24-pounder howitzers. Under the proposed increased scale the Fort will be defended by 40 pieces. These will include eight 40-pounder Armstrongs, three 24-pounder, and four 9-pounder smooth bores, four 13 inch, four 10-inch, and six 5½-inch mortars, with three 24-pounder howitzers, and eight bronze rifle mountain-guns.

COLONEL HICKS.—The decision of the Government of India regarding the case of Colonel Hicks, Commandant of the 44th N.I., has just been communicated to that officer. The decision of Government, in accordance with the opinion of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, is that it is not desirable, in the interests of the service, and of the 44th Regiment N.I. in particular, that Colonel Hicks should remain any longer in command; he is therefore remanded to general duty. The order goes on to say that this is to be communicated to Colonel Hicks with every consideration; and he is requested to name any station, other than Shillong, in which he would wish to do general duty.

SIR R. TEMPLE.—The Englishman contains the following paragraph:—"We learn from a private letter from Simla that Sir Richard Temple is trying to get another year of office added to his five." The public hope will be grievously cast down if Sir Richard Temple should retain office another year. It is not so much the mere fact of the income-tax as the manner in which that and other measures have been put forward that has convinced lookers-on that Sir Richard Temple is totally unfit to be Finance Minister. There are so many other offices for which he is well fitted that there could be no unfairness in claiming his retirement as an absolute necessity to public confidence.

DISTRICT OFFICERS.—Two important resolutions appear in the Calcutta Gazette of Wednesday last week. In the first the Lieutenant-Governor commends the examples of those district officers who, in addition to their other duties, find time to compile complete histories of the districts in which they are employed, suggesting at the same time some points for their consideration which may be included in their works. In the second his Honour sanctions the creation of temporary establishments not exceeding Rs. 200 to Rs. 400 per mensem for each district, for doing the work intended for the Subordinate Civil Service, and those establishments are to be retained so long as the inferior services are not organised.—Bombay Gazette, Aug. 30.

CHOLERA AT ALLAHABAD.—The Pioneer says:—"Mr. F. O. Mayne, C.B., Commissioner of the Allahabad Division, died at one o'clock yesterday morning, from the sequelæ of the cholera by which he had been attacked six days previously. We may hereafter attempt a sketch of Mr. Mayne's career—for he had 'acted history': at present we can think of nothing but the loss we have all suffered in his death. For people of all classes in Allahabad—Natives and Europeans—those who watched his public conduct and those who enjoyed his private friendship—will miss and mourn him alike." Another clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Carter, of the Church Missionary Society, has fallen a victim to cholera at Allahabad. Mr. Carter had but lately arrived from England, and almost the last duty he performed was to read the burial service over the Rev. Mr. Fagan.

THE FEMALE MEDICAL MISSION AT DELHI.—About five years ago, at the suggestion of a missionary from Delhi, a female medical mission was set on foot for the benefit of the native women of that city, with the double object of alleviating physical suffering, and of taking a knowledge of Christianity to them in their secluded homes. The only agent at present in connection with this mission is Mrs. Littler, who, after a course of hospital training in London, came out to devote herself to this work in 1870. Whilst acting in connection with the missionaries in all medical matters, Mrs. Littler is under the direction of the civil surgeon of the station. Between December 20, 1870, and October 18, 1871, Mrs. Littler paid 1,446 visits to 191 patients in the Zenana, and 1,917 visits were made to the dispensary. A house has just been taken in the city as a temporary hospital for women and for training nurses. Mrs. Littler has removed to this house, and will superintend its operations.—Delhi Gazette.

A FIGHT IN BUNDILKUND.—The (Hindco) Marwar Gazette reports a battle fought in Bundilkund last month between the army of the Rajah of Tehree and that of the Jagheerdar of Palehda. The account is as follows:—"The Jagheerdar, having in vain represented his grievances to the Political Agent, made an appeal to arms. The Rajah sent a detachment of his forces with six pieces of cannon to oppose him, and a battle took place, which ended in the defeat of the Royal troops and the capture of six guns by the enemy." This unhappy result is ascribed to the bad state of the Rajah's army, which is thus described by a Bundela chief:—"The soldiers of the army receive Rs. 3 a month of the kutchka coin, and even this paltry pay is not distributed regularly, arrears for a year being due at present. The musket balls are kept tied in a piece of cloth, while the soldiers fasten their shoes on their feet by means of a string. Quite different is the case with the Jagheerdar's army, which musters 5,000 strong. To this it was owing that in the battle which recently took place the Rajah lost 100 men and the Jagheerdar only a few."

AN INTERESTING MELA.—Major Clarke, Deputy Commissioner of Lakhimpore, in Assam, held a mela in January last at Sadia, at which were assembled Abors, Mishmis, Nagas, Singphos, and Kamptis. Pleasure, rather than business, seems to have been the object of the mela, for only one day was devoted to the bazaar, at which about five or six hundred rupees worth of commodities changed hands, whilst two days were devoted to foot-races, hunting greased pigs, climbing greasy poles and Aunt Sallies. The tribes seem to have regarded the sports in different aspects. "The Nagas were the keenest appreciators of the sport, and next to them the Digaroo Mishmees; a few Abors who came to look on held aloof, and did not seem inclined to join, though they looked on; the Singphos and the Kamptis only tried putting the stone, but it was nice to see them so orderly and well dressed with their very interesting looking chiefs; they added very much to the show." The only really important event was that the Chalikata Mishmis wished to be permitted to come down to visit the plains and be present at the mela, promising good behaviour in future. Major Clarke merely answered that he would think about it.—Englishman.

THE CROPS IN BENGAL AND BARMAH.—The district reports on the prospects of the crops in Bengal for the week ended the 24th of August inform us that in the Bardwan Division matters had much improved owing to good falls of rain, though more was still wanted. The price of rice had also fallen. Cholera had broken out in Bardwan and Bankura. In the Presidency Division more rain was wanted in the 24-Parganas, but in Naddia and Jessore the prospects are good. Rain is still wanted in the Rajshahi Division, especially in Bogra, where the crops "are looking ill." In Kuch Bihar, Dacca, and Chittagong, the prospects are generally favourable. In the Patna and Bhagalpur Divisions the crops have generally improved after the rain. In Orissa the rice crop in Kattak has been much damaged by insects, but in other parts the crops are progressing favourably, except on the Chilka Isthmus, where there is little hope of a crop. In Chota Nagpur more rain is wanted, and in Assam and the adjoining hills the prospects have improved since a heavy fall of rain. According to the official report on the crops in Barmah up to the 14th of August, they are generally backward, though the prospects are reported as fair. In Thayetmyoo the cultivators were much prostrated by dengue, and in Tonghoo there was disease amongst the cattle.

INDIAN TEAS.—Messrs. Balmer, Lawrie, and Co.'s Tea Report, season 1872-73, was re-issued at Calcutta, 31st August, 1872. It states that during the past fortnight the transactions in Tea have been of an important nature, some 10,000 chests having been catalogued, and nearly all sold. At the sale on the 19th instant prices were well sustained at about former rates; but by the 28th, on which date 7,000 chests were offered, the suspension of an old established firm in our city had engendered a certain amount of distrust, and buyers were intimidated; the sale therefore passed off with less animation, and prices were generally easier. A small invoice of Greensorts from Dehra Doon fetched Rs. 1-6 for Young Hyson, 1-3 for Hyson, and 1-1-6 for No. 1, and 15-9 for No. 2 Gunpowder. Assam: Advices from this district are of a generally encouraging nature; hot sun by day, and rain by night; in some parts the fall being heavy. The outturn is generally improving, and with the fair prospect of good flushes the month should show a good result in manufacture. Cachar: The weather during the early part of August was hardly so favourable for tea-making as might have been wished, and reports of blight having attacked several gardens are current. Darjeeling: We have to report a very favourable month among the hill gardens; but progress in the Terai, where cholera appears still to linger, was hardly so good. Kangra: The Tea season throughout the valley had been most favourable up to latest dates. The rains, as usual, had been very heavy; but a more than average amount of sunshine had intervened between the downpours. The local demand for Green Teas has been good, but the prices offered were hardly remunerative enough to tempt planters to incur the heavy expenses attendant on their manufacture. Kumaon: The weather has been all that could be desired; lots of rain by night, and fine sun by day, have forced the leaf out well, and planters are very busy.

AN EXTRAORDINARY HUNT BY THE POLICE AFTER A SUSPECTED PUNJABEE.—On Monday, Aug. 19, the police had an extraordinary hunt after a Punjabee, who was pointed out to one of the detectives at twelve o'clock as a very suspicious character, by the guardian of the Shrine of Mamahajane, which is not far from the Municipal Main Drain. Asking him who he was, he kept silent and continued eating his food. Having finished his meal he came out of the hut, and without saying a word picked up a bludgeon and aimed a blow at the havildar's head, which was ward off by another havildar, who thereupon struck out at the fellow. The Punjabee only got the benefit of half the blow, and then he jumped down the precipice, which is thirty feet high. The police followed, and he made for the sea and swam across to a solitary rock between the two land tongues at Breach-candy, whence he kept up a volley of abuse while swinging his stick frantically. About two P.M., Mr. Souter, Commissioner of Police, and Mr. Vincent, Acting Deputy Commissioner, arrived at the spot, and saw the man, and from inquiries they made they had suspicions that he was a noted thief. One thing very strange in a Mussulman was that he had shaved off his beard, and it was also known that he had melted gold and silver, and coupling all this with his escape it was thought he was worth catching, and means were adopted of getting hold of him. There he stood on the lonely rock, surrounded by the sea, 500 yards from the shore, shouting and shaking his stick at the police. No boats were to be had, and as it was high-water it was resolved to wait until five o'clock. Unluckily, while the two Commissioners went home, an impetuous superintendent constructed a raft and went out to catch him. When he approached, the fellow gathered a dozen big stones, and hurling them at the men on the raft managed to hit the superintendent and some others. He then struck out for the open sea. In the meantime Mr. Souter and Mr. Vincent had returned, and they got two boats and commenced the hunt in earnest, while another boat joined in the fun. For two hours the three boats hunted him, and three European constables swam after him, but the fellow was a very devil, and out among the outermost breakers evaded all the endeavours of the police to capture him. The police hunted till dark, and at last, being unable to catch the fellow, went home not a little crestfallen. They set a watch, however, over the place where he had taken up position. Hundreds of people witnessed the chase, and the excitement was intense. Once or twice the police nearly had him, but again and again he eluded their grasp. Altogether he was more than four hours in the water, swimming all the time, and the desperation of his endeavours to escape was remarkable. It was thought that he would be captured ere the night was over, but he escaped after all. It is supposed that he swam round the point, and landed at some lonely place far from the cordon of police who were set to watch on the beach.

DENGUE AT PALAVERAM.—King Dengue seems to have found his way into Palaveram, and we learn from that quarter that Captain Moore, the adjutant of the 13th Regiment N.L., stationed there, and about a dozen men of that corps, are suffering from the dreaded disease.

TIGERS.—A reward of Rs. 500 is offered by Government for the destruction of a man-eating tiger on the Suttiamungalum Hills, between Talamalla and Kongarapolliem, Coimbatore district. The Board of Revenue and Government have sanctioned a reward of Rs. 300 for each tiger killed on the Nallamalla Hills in the Kurnool district.

THE TINNEVELLY PEARL FISHERIES.—We are afraid that the attempt to rear pearl oysters off Tuticorin must be regarded as a failure. At least, that is the opinion of Mr. Puckle, the Collector of Tinnevely, who has been in the district since 1866, and who assures us that he has watched the experiment that has been made with great interest.—Madras Mail.

DEATH OF LIEUT. J. S. SMITH.—Lieut. J. S. Smith, 45th Regiment, died at Tonghoo, British Burmah, on the 10th August, of typhoid fever. The deceased officer, who was son of J. Smith, Esq., of Ladbroke, Warwickshire, entered the army as ensign by purchase, July 13, 1867, and became lieutenant without purchase, November 8, 1869. He served in the Abyssinian campaign of 1868, and was present at the storming and capture of Magdala (medal).

THE NEILGHERRY BRANCH RAILWAY.—A revised estimate for the works at the Poothanoor or present Coimbatore station on the Neilgherry branch of the Madras Railway has been sanctioned by the Government of India. The amount is Rs. 54,916. As, since the preparation of the estimate to which sanction is now accorded, the rate for the carriage of construction materials has been reduced four paces per ton per mile, Lieut. col. Shaw-Stewart will make the necessary alteration in the amount of the estimate.—Madras Mail.

THE IMPORTATION OF ARMS BY THE KING OF BURMAH.—It is not unusual for those who look upon the King of Burmah as an ill-used man to tax Major Sladen with having violated the terms of our treaty by refusing to allow his Majesty to import firearms for the defence of his kingdom. But, as the Rangoon Mail pertinently remarks, it should not be forgotten that the King's request was for a hundred rifled cannon. As the King of Burmah has no enemies to defend himself against, beyond dacoits and vermin of sorts, rifled cannon were (not entirely without reason) held to be hardly necessary for the safety of his Majesty.—Pioneer.

DENGUE AT BANGALORE.—Bangalore has been entered by dengue, which has appeared as yet chiefly among the natives. The local papers say it is informed on good authority that outrages in the native quarter of the cantonment are again becoming frequent, and respectable natives complain bitterly that they dare not stir out of doors after six, except at the risk of being robbed and beaten, with the most perfect impunity, as far as the police are concerned.

THE CURRENCY NOTE FORGERY.—The Acting Inspector-General of Police, Madras, has issued a circular requiring information regarding the forgery of certain Madras Government currency notes, to be given to Capt. T. Weldon, Royapettah Police Court, and the chief office of the Inspector-General of Police, Madras. The reward of Rs. 10,000 is still held out to any person or persons that will give information that may lead to the arrest and conviction of the party or parties concerned in the note forgery.—Madras Athenæum.

THE MADRAS BREAKWATER.—We understand that the local Government have received a reply from the Government of India regarding the breakwater scheme. The Madras Government proposed to raise the money, about a crore and thirty-one lakhs of rupees, by a loan. The Government of India, while approving of the proposal of the local Government, is said to have remarked that it cannot accord its sanction to so heavy an outlay, or to the loan of so large an amount, without first communicating with the Secretary of State on the subject, and obtaining his Grace's sanction to the scheme.—Madras Mail.

DENGUEPHOBIA.—Our worthy Chief Magistrate of Police is evidently afflicted with the complaint which heads this paragraph. On Tuesday last, while his Worship was administering justice in his Court, a poor native was called in to give his evidence in a case at the time under investigation. The poor witness while deposing gave every sign of his having an attack of dengue. The magistrate asked him whether he was one of the victims to that mysterious disease, and when the answer was in the affirmative, our worthy magistrate vociferated, "Out with him, put him out of Court, for he is likely to give us all the dengue." Upon this a strong-limbed peeler dragged the unfortunate witness out of Court.—Madras Standard.

IMPROVEMENTS AT MADRAS.—At the meeting of the Municipal Commissioners this morning it was resolved to adopt with some slight modifications the tramway scheme submitted by Messrs. Dymes and Co. on behalf of Sir James Anderson and others who are at the head of the Tramway Company in London. The Commissioners also resolved to ask the local Government for details of the arrangements in respect of the proposed removal of the Regimental lines from Vepery to Poodoopett, in order that the Commissioners might express their views on the subject. Mr. Coleman gave notice of his intention at the next meeting to move that the Commissioners should consider the necessity of undertaking the drainage of Madras on a systematic principle.—Madras Mail.

VELLORE.—The inhabitants of Vellore have applied for permission to rebuild and repair their houses that were destroyed or injured by the recent flood, and the Municipal Commissioners have complied with their request, although not without some hesitation, "various attempts having been made to induce them to abandon the site on account of its insalubrity and exposure to danger, and other ground having been offered to them, free, with a bonus, but they having refused to avail themselves of all such offers." The municipality will, however, supervise the rebuilding of the said suburb, and see the ground properly laid out in streets, &c., every one re-occupying his old site as far as can be done, without unduly encroaching on the ground required by the streets.—Madras Times.

ROAD COMMUNICATIONS IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—His Excellency the Governor in Council has had under consideration the subject of opening out communication with the lines of railway now under construction in this Presidency. In many cases engineering considerations have been sacrificed and additional outlay incurred with the object of serving certain supposed commercial centres, and it is clear that the subsidiary roads should be projected and taken in hand simultaneously with the line of railway they are intended to serve. The Governor, therefore, has resolved to call upon the President of the Local Fund Board of each district concerned, to forward, with as little delay as possible, for the information of Government, a report accompanied by a sketch illustrative of the measures that have been taken or may be proposed for opening out communication with the several proposed railway stations.—Madras Times.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL STEWART.—Our new Adjutant-General, Lieut. Colonel Robert Cross Stewart, half pay 2nd Queen's Regiment, was lately Military Secretary to General Rennie, Commander-in-Chief in Ceylon. Before that he held an appointment at the Horse Guards, where he was thought highly of. Colonel Stewart is an accomplished linguist, both in European and Oriental languages, and has seen a good deal of service in Bengal. He took part in the campaign of 1857-58, was present at the storm and capture of Meerut, and was D. A. General to Sir E. Lugard's Division. At the siege and capture of Lucknow in 1858 he was severely wounded. We are assured that the Colonel was hardly known to General Haines except by reputation, and that he has been selected to succeed Col. Roe solely on account of his good service and acknowledged ability ; and that, in fact, he may be emphatically regarded as the right man in the right place.—Madras Mail.

THE BREEKS MEMORIAL.—The form of the Breeks memorial has now, we may consider, been decided. At a meeting of the sub-committee to the memorial, held at Ootacamund some days ago, it was finally resolved to recommend the following proposal for the approval of the general committee:—"That a piece of ground in or near the market area be enclosed, and planted with ornamental trees, and that in the centre of the enclosure, an iron drinking fountain, with basin, be erected, and that on each side of the enclosure there be a stone trough for cattle, of some neat design, in keeping with the fountain, to be fed by water from the fountain." The honorary secretary was instructed to forward the letter of condolence to Mrs. Breeks, to which a hundred and sixty-six signatures had been affixed. A letter from Dr. Hunter was read, proposing to execute in marble a bust of the late Mr. Breeks, for Rs. 500, and to produce a copy in white Parian porcelain, for Rs. 100, to be forwarded to Mrs. Breeks. The sub-committee declined Dr. Hunter's proposal with thanks, as it did not fall within the resolution of the general committee.

THE FUTURE OF BANGALORE.—As years pass on and the young Rajah of Mysore approaches the time when his country will have to be restored to him, the question of whether Bangalore will be given up, too, causes anxiety to many. Of course, sooner or later the matter must engage the serious attention of Government ; but there can hardly be a doubt but that Bangalore will be continued to be held by the British. A few confident householders even foresee the time when Bangalore will become the seat of Government. I expect some sort of an arrangement by which Seringapatam, which is our property, and is now let to the Rajah at a rental of some Rs. 60,000 a year (I am not quite sure about the figures), will be given up to His Highness for the cantonment of Bangalore, will be made. Unless Bangalore is made the seat of Government, or all British troops in the Presidency quartered here, a question which is now being discussed, house property in Bangalore will deteriorate to a fearful extent. Under the impetus that was given to house building by the introduction of the railway every available spot of ground about the place was taken up for building purposes, and houses sprang up rapidly. Now there is no one to occupy them, and houses are for sale or to let on all sides.—Correspondent of Madras Times.

DR. LIVINGSTONE'S LETTER TO SIR SEYMOUR FITZGERALD.

UNYANYEMBE (EAST AFRICA), March 13.

To the Right Hon. Sir W. R. S. V. FITZGERALD.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,—Before starting on the expedition into Central Africa, in which I am now engaged, I received very great kindness and important service from the Bombay Government, then under Sir Bartle Frere. I have written to express my thankfulness, but my letters to and from the coast have all been destroyed, apparently because I was considered a spy on the slave trade, whose correspondence would do no good to the traffic. The search for the sources of the Nile they knew to be sham, and I was prevented from either getting supplies of goods or sending information coastwards. This letter, however, goes by Henry M. Stanley, the travelling correspondent of the New York Herald, sent at an expense of over £4,000 to obtain accurate information and afford assistance in my isolation. If I give you a short sketch of my progress thus far it may gratify the members of your Government, who cheerfully and cordially lent me their aid.

The first point of importance I ascertained was that the watershed of South Central Africa was a broad, tree-covered upland, between 10 deg. 12 min. south latitude. It is generally between 4,000 and 5,000 feet above the level of the sea, but mountains stand on it at various points, which are between 6,000 and 7,000 feet above the ocean level. These mountains are possibly what the geographer Ptolemy, for reasons now unknown, called the "Mountains of the Moon," because, from the watershed on which they stand, springs almost innumerable arise and unite into burns or brooks that never dry, and these again converge into streams of twenty, forty, sixty, or even eighty yards—and all running together from three great mains of drainage in a large, gradually sloping upland valley, which, beginning at the watershed, tends northward, and is probably the great valley of the Nile. The three great mains of drainage are large lacustrine rivers—extant specimens of what in pre historic times abounded in Africa, and which in the Bechwana country, in the south, still retain the name "Melapo," and in the north are called "Wadys;" both words meaning the same thing—river-beds in which no water even now flows. These great lacustrine rivers often take the name Lualaba, and require distinctive epithets, which I have ventured to supply. In the part of the great valley now explored there are, besides the great lacustrine rivers, five lakes of great extent, connected by the rivers into one system. The furthest south is called Bangweolo. It is between 140 and 150 miles long, and sixty or seventy broad, and I tried to cross and measure it accurately, but on reaching an island, twenty-four miles off, found that my mariners had stolen the canoe, and got into a flurry on learning that the real owners were in pursuit. They would come back for me—that they would certainly,—but I had nothing left to hire another but my coverlet, and it was very cold, being 4,000 feet above the sea. So I did not relish being a Robinson Crusoe on a small island, and an apparently shoreless sea for 183 degrees around, and came back. Bangweolo is not a source of the Nile, for no large river begins in a lake. It is fed by the river Chambeze and other streams, and these may be considered sources rising far south of anything that geographers had dreamed. Emerging from the lake it takes the name Luapula, and that flowing into Lake Moero escapes thence by a huge rent in the lofty mountains on the north-east, and on the country called Rua, and now assumes the name Lualaba, Webb's Lake river. It next enters Lake Kamolondo, and moves on, after that it has received in Kamolondo another large river, Bartle Frere's river, which far south is called Luffira, as the Webb's great Lualaba or Central Line of drainage. Altogether west by Kamolondo, Young's Lualaba flows through Lake Lincoln, and then as to the great lacustrine river Lomame, it too falls into the central main; and four days beyond this confluence a fifth great lake is founded, the discovery of which I was forced by Banian slaves sent to me, instead of men, to give up as the "Unknown Lake." Nothing is more surprising in this central region than the vast amount of water in lakes, rivers, and running rills. Webb's Lualaba, north of Kamolondo, is from one to three miles broad, and never can be waded at any point or at any time of the year. The Manyema country through which it flows is inhabited by cannibals, and no trader or traveller ever ventured there till two years ago. The elephants' tusks were left to rot in the interminable forests where the animals have been slain. The first adventurers I met had 18,000 lbs. of ivory carried in two relays, and I have seen others with 3,000 lbs. (sic. orig.) weight, bearing them in three relays of men. Bombay merchants will soon see these tusks in the market—some half rotten and pealed to conceal the effects of the tooth of time, others gnawed by a rodent animal to sharpen his teeth, as London rats do on leaden pipes. In the forests one sees the sun about midday by thin pencils of rays sent down through the gloom and in the clearances around villages. The Manyema, or as the Arabs shorten it Manyema, live in villages, and each headman is independent of and hates every other—there is no political cohesion, and no great king in the whole country. They know as little about the country as would-be geographers, who collected all their knowledge from slaves. At thirty miles distance they often had never heard of their own great river. It was therefore very difficult to explore and find out where the drainage went. I made four attempts in different directions, but the vegetation was so dense, no help could be obtained by a glimpse of the river; the mud was simply awful—plunging and plashing told severely on all. The ivory traders, in spite of their intense eagerness to please their Banian employers, had often to give in by irritable eating ulcers fastening on the feet. I was laid up by them for five months. It is impossible to describe the toil of wending one's way through forests so dense only elephants and buffaloes could penetrate, and often in mud from calf to thigh deep—these must be facsimiles of the great haunts frequented by megatheria and the great old uncomfortable beasts that geologists speak about. And then after all, as to the great river some five degrees of longitude, I could not for a long time be sure that it was not the Congo—and who would run the risk of being put into a cannibal Manyema pot, and be converted into black man for anything less than the grand old Nile? But at length Bartle Frere's river, and the Lomame river, the western lines of drainage, flowed into the central main, and report said it ran beyond the fifth or "Unknown lake" into large reedy marshes, possibly Petherick's or the western arm, in distinction from the eastern, which Speke, Grant, and Baker, believed to be the Nile. I do not speak positively yet; too many clever men have been mistaken for me to assume the dogmatic tone. Before leaving the watershed, I may add that four fountains are reported thereon, and each, at no great distance off, becomes a large river. Two are reported to flow south and two run north, the Liambai or Upper Zambesi, and the Kafu flow south. Bartle Frere River and the Lomame flow north to Egypt (?). I have presumed to give names to those fountains whose rivers I know, and my concluding trip is to rediscover these fountains, for I have the presumption to start the hypothesis in Central Africa, and without a single book of reference, that these are the fountains mentioned to Herodotus by the Secretary of Minerva in the city of Laïs, in Egypt. If they exist only in my imagination, from the dim recollection of reading the ancient historian in boyhood, then we shall see, and I shall tell you that I was mistaken; another point to be examined is the very extensive underground excavations, which seem to be ancient, for the natives all ascribe their formation to the deity, and all have running streams of water laid on, and are equal to the protection of the people of large districts in cases of invasion. Also very ancient and inexhaustible malachite copper mines at Katanga.

I have been much longer than I intended—six years instead of two, but I have lost two whole years in time, been burdened by 1,800 miles of useless tramp, and how much waste of money I cannot say—all through the matter of supplies and men being entrusted to our Banian Indian fellow-subjects, and they entrusted the whole thing to slaves, who lay and feasted on my stores for sixteen months, and then sold off all for slaves and ivory. The slave trade in all this region, and especially in Manyema, is carried on almost exclusively with arms, ammunition, and goods, advanced to Arab agents by Banians; their slaves needed no more than a hint, and all came and solemnly swore that they were told not to follow, but to force me back. They forced me back five hundred miles, and again I had to come three hundred miles to seize goods here sent by another lot of slaves; and my agent at Zanzibar believes all they tell him. It was stated in the House of Lords, on the authority he receives, that all my wants had been supplied, while I virtually got only what I myself sent to Ujiji in 1866. But I am all right and ready by Mr. Stanley's help, and will be off as soon as fifty men come from the coast.—I have, &c.,

Miscellaneous.

SIR AUGUSTUS SPENCER.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief intends proceeding to the hills immediately after the rains, but as the Governor will do the hot season in Matheran it is doubtful whether Sir Augustus will not accompany him, returning to Bombay in December. In the first week in January his Excellency will proceed on a tour of inspection through Rajpootana, returning from Nussersabad via Agra to Bombay, and then off to the hills so soon as his duties in connection with Council will allow him.—Deccan Herald.

THE ACTING DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.—The Bombay correspondent of the Gujarat Friend thus writes about Mr. Chatfield, Acting Director of Public Instruction:—"Mr. K. M. Chatfield shows in his new office rare power and capacity for administrative work. As a Director of Public Instruction he is, in my opinion, destined to achieve a renown equal to that of any of his predecessors. Without any pretensions to brilliancy Mr. Chatfield is a hard-working, bold, and patient man, and his selection to the most important post which he at present so worthily fills demonstrates the wisdom of Government." This paper, however, thinks it a defect in Mr. Chatfield that when once he forms an opinion he sticks to it.

BRITISH INDIAN ASSOCIATION.—The Bombay British Indian Association has again resolved to send a native gentleman to England to give evidence next session before the Indian Finance Committee. Considering that we have heard of native gentlemen going for this purpose to England ever since the Committee was appointed, we shall believe it when we hear of the gentleman making his appearance in the Committee-room.

THE LATE GENERAL GRIFFITH.—The Poona Observer announces the death of General Julius George Griffith, of the Royal (late Bombay) Artillery, on Wednesday last, at the age of eighty years. The late General Griffith obtained his first commission in the East India Company's service as first lieutenant in 1810, and was senior officer on the Bombay List, and was appointed Colonel Commandant of the 21st Brigade of the Royal Artillery in July, 1845. He served with the first troop of Horse Artillery throughout the Deccan campaign of 1814 to 1817, under the command of Brigadier General Sir Lionel Smith. For his services he received the thanks of the Government. His commissions bore date as follows:—First Lieut., May 27, 1810; Capt., Feb. 2, 1816; Major, Sept. 28, 1827; Lieut.-Col., May 6, 1833; Col., July 3, 1845; Major-Gen., June 20, 1854; Lieut.-Gen., Feb. 4, 1859; and Gen., Sept. 7, 1866.

SUPERSTITION.—A belief having somehow or other entered into the heads of many of our people of the lower order of society—and, we regret to say, of some of the upper classes too—that during three successive days and nights of the 13th, 14th and 15th instant total obscurity would in all parts of the country prevail, during which nobody would be able to eat or drink, a very large number of people provided themselves with cocoa-nut oil and candles blessed by the priests, to keep them burning in their houses, as a safeguard and preventive of any harm that might otherwise befall themselves or families. The feared crisis has passed away, with neither total nor partial obscurity, and everybody is safe and sound at home, some lamenting, of course, at the unnecessary expenses their superstition put them to, while others are indulging in laughter at their own arant stupidity! Can the force of superstition and ignorance further go?—Gazeta de Goa.

THE INDIAN RELIEFS.—The following are the proposed arrangements for furnishing the troops required for the Indian troop service on the homeward voyages from Bombay, 1872-73:—1st voyage, Bombay, Nov. 15, 1872.—20th Hussars, from Sirhind Division; 320 men, 29 women, 30 children; time-expired men, prisoners, and lunatics, 408 men, 80 women, and 103 children. 2nd voyage, Bombay, November 22, 1872.—D Battery, D Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, from Meerut Division, 134 men, 13 women, 28 children; from Madras, head-quarters A and B Batteries, D Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, 278 men, 38 women, 86 children; from Bombay, C and E Batteries, D Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, 284 men, 34 women, 44 children; time expired men, prisoners, and lunatics, 69 men, 13 women, and 15 children. 3rd voyage, Bombay, December 4, 1872.—105th Regiment as far as Aden, from Meerut Division, where the 3rd Battalion 60th Rifles will be embarked, 654 men, 40 women, and 69 children; time expired men, prisoners, and lunatics, 152 men, 34 women, and 31 children. 4th voyage, Bombay, December 11, 1872.—2nd Battalion, 24th Regiment, from Madras Presidency, 670 men, 32 women, and 42 children; time-expired men, prisoners, and lunatics, 180 men, 39 women, and 77 children. 5th voyage, Rangoon, January 8, 1873; Beyoor, January, 1873.—2nd Battalion, 10th Regiment, from Madras Presidency, 627 men, 79 women, and 144 children; time-expired men, prisoners, and lunatics, 125 men, 23 women, and 47 children. 6th voyage, Bombay, February 26, 1873, invalids, insanes, and time-expired, 808 men, 89 women, and 124 children. 7th voyage, Bombay, March 7, 1873—invalids and insanes, 790 men, 106 women, and 130 children. 8th voyage, Bombay, March 15, 1873.—2nd Battalion, 21st Regiment, from Madras, 738 men, 74 women, and 143 children; invalids and insanes, 184 men, 25 women, and 36 children. 9th voyage, Bombay, March 29, 1873 (via the Cape)—Invalids ordered to go via the Cape, 785 men, 118 women, and 67 children.

THE ATTACK ON THE "CASHMERE."—Col. Herbert, Political Agent in Turkish Arabia, dating from Bagdad 1st July, reports that every exertion continues to be made for the apprehension of the Cashmere pirates and recovery of the plunder. Some Rs. 10,000 have already been recovered. Raouf Pasha is giving every assistance to these ends. Six men now await trial at Busra, and one (a slave) at Mohomrah. The remainder with the loot were at Mohomrah under protection of the Governor's son, but are understood to have sought refuge in the Persian territory. By latest advices three more of the robbers had been apprehended, but one of the principals had been allowed to escape from custody at Bussorah! The Sublime Porte have issued stringent orders for the future protection of the shipping. The ship would appear to have been utterly unready for the assault. The pirates, on the other hand, were fully prepared for all events. After getting on board in the manner already known, they set guards at the doors of the officers' cabins, took off the after-hatch, and wrenched off the Chubb's padlock from the strong room with a belaying pin. The Europeans sought refuge on the poop deck, and thence had the pleasure of seeing the specie removed to the boats. They were in a state of total helplessness, the muskets being, not in the usual rack, but in a cupboard, inside a bathroom, and the ammunition in the chief mate's cabin, carefully guarded by the pirates. The pirates were about thirty-six in number, and it is surprising that the loud outcries of the passengers should not have attracted the attention of the Turkish guard-ship half a mile astern. Most of the scoundrels had been from time to time employed on board the B.I.S.N Co.'s steamers. Several of the captive robbers have made confession, and the chief difficulty will now be to obtain extradition of the remainder of the gang and the bulk of the treasure from Persian jurisdiction. It only remains to be said that as usual, when at a distance from Government head-quarters, there would appear to be a want of cordiality and rapport among our intelligent British officers, and the pirates who have escaped with their plunder possibly owe their luck to this characteristic vice of the service.

LIEUT. GIBSON, BENGAL STAFF CORPS.

At a General Court-martial assembled at Allahabad on Monday, the 15th day of July, 1872, Lieut. E. E. Gibson, Bengal staff corps, late boundary settlement officer for the native States of Bundelcund, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and gentleman, in having, at Sutna, in the month of July, 1871, corruptly applied to the Minister of the Maharajah of Rewah, Lal Rundimmon Sing, for a bribe of five thousand rupees as a pecuniary gratification for deciding in favour of the Maharajah a boundary dispute with the Chief of Sohawal.

Finding.—The Court finds that the prisoner, Lieut. E. E. Gibson, of the Bengal staff corps, late boundary settlement officer for the native States of Bundelcund, is not guilty of the charge.

J. Y. GOWAN, Lieut.-col., President.

Allahabad, Aug. 1, 1872.

Approved and confirmed,

NAPIER OF MAGDALA, General, C. in C. in India.

Headquarters, Simla, Aug. 15, 1872.

Remarks by H.E. the Commander in Chief.

Lieut. Gibson was much to blame for not reporting immediately to his official superior, Captain Goodfellow, when he believed an attempt was made to bribe him, instead of entering on the dangerous course which he adopted, in order to convict the Minister of the Maharaja of Rewah of corruption.

By his imprudence he laid himself open to a disgraceful imputation, of which he has been honourably acquitted, as announced in the letter of the President of the Court, but only after a long period of arrest and a trial by court-martial.

By order of the right hon. the C. in C.,

FRED. THESIGER, Colonel, Adjutant general.

VIZIANAGRAM SCHOLARSHIPS.

The following Resolution is published for general information:—
GENERAL DEPARTMENT—EDUCATION.

Calcutta, Aug. 2, 1872.

1. In April, 1872, his Highness the Maharajah of Vizianagram offered to place at the disposal of this Government a sum of Rs. 150 per mensem, to be spent in scholarships for the encouragement of engineering and surveying amongst the natives of these provinces. His Highness at the same time expressed a wish that his Honour the Lieutenant-governor should fix the number and amount of the scholarships as seemed to be expedient and proper.

2. The Lieutenant-governor, in thanking his Highness for his very liberal offer, stated that he then proposed to establish the scholarships to be called Vizianagram scholarships, tenable for two years by boys who should attend some recognised survey and engineering class at a Government zillah school or at any aided school of corresponding calibre, but that he would consult the educational authorities on the best mode of administering the endowment.

3. The Officiating Director of Public Instruction, on being consulted, suggested that the scholarships should be open to all boys qualified for either the minor or vernacular scholarships; that the candidates who showed the greatest knowledge of surveying should be chosen, provided they were placed in either the first or second divisions of the general list; and that the scholarships should be equally divided among the commissionerships of the Lower Provinces.

4. The Lieutenant-governor, after carefully considering the arguments urged in favour of making these scholarships open to candidates ignorant of English, has decided that as the object of the endowment is to bring forward boys capable of being ultimately educated as engineers, at least a knowledge of English should be required in Bengal, and his Honour has been pleased to sanction the following rules for the regulation of the scholarships:—

I. Ten scholarships in surveying and engineering of the value of Rs. 7.8 per mensem will be granted yearly.

II. These scholarships will be called the Vizianagram scholarships.

III. One scholarship will be allotted yearly to each of the following divisions:—Burdwan, the Presidency, Rajshahye, Dacca, Chittagong, Patna, Bhagulpore, Orissa, Chota Nagpore, and Assam (including Goalpara).

IV. In Burdwan, the Presidency, Rajshahye, Dacca, and Chittagong divisions, boys eligible for minor scholarships; and in Patna, Bhagulpore, Orissa, Chota Nagpore, and Assam divisions, boys eligible for either minor or vernacular scholarships, will be eligible to compete for the Vizianagram scholarships.

V. The scholarship for each division will be given to the candidate who shows the greatest knowledge of drawing and surveying, provided he also be placed in the first or second division of the general list, and provided in the five divisions of Bengal that he has a sufficient knowledge of English to enable him to continue his studies in that language in the higher classes of the zillah schools. The papers for surveying and drawing will be set in the vernacular.

VI. The Vizianagram scholarship may be held with any other scholarship.

VII. The scholarships may be held in any Government school where advanced instruction is given in drawing, surveying, &c.

VIII. The Vizianagram scholars shall be subject to the same rule concerning good conduct and adequate progress as Government scholars.

IX. Should no candidate be found competent to hold the scholarship allotted to a division for any year, it may be accorded at the discretion of the Director of Public Instruction to the unsuccessful candidate who in the examinations in the remaining divisions has shown the greatest knowledge of drawing and surveying, and who has at the same time fulfilled the other conditions required in the holders of these scholarships.

5. The object of the Vizianagram scholarship is so useful, the studies which they are meant to encourage are so important, and the liberality of the Maharajah so suggestive, that the Lieutenant-governor contemplates adding some Government technical scholarships for the encouragement of the above and other arts as soon as a scheme has been prepared for their allotment. He requests the Director, in communication with the Secretary to Government in this department, to prepare a scheme.

REPLY TO THE JUNIOR MEMBERS' CIVIL SERVICE MEMORIAL.

From E. C. Bayley, Esq., C.S.I., Secretary to the Government of India, to J. H. Fisher, Esq., Secretary to the Central Civilians' Committee, Allahabad, No. 5,803, dated Fort William, Dec. 30, 1871.

With reference to Mr. Under-Secretary Geoghegan's letter to your address, No. 2,892, dated June 10 last, I am directed now to reply to the memorial from certain members of the Bengal Civil Service, praying—

- (1) for the restoration of the rate of acting allowances to 30 per cent.;
- (2) for the restoration of the minimum furlough allowance of £500 per annum;
- (3) for employment in the Non-Regulation Provinces and in the Political Department;
- (4) for permission to take privilege leave three months instead of six months before furlough.

2. On the first point the Governor-general in Council feels satisfied that no change is necessary. So far as it has been possible to ascertain, it appears that, even with the reduction from 30 to 20 per cent., the junior civilians are drawing on the whole better, and not worse, pay than if the old rules had remained in force; and the protection afforded by the rule, that the acting allowance shall not be less than two-thirds of the difference between the pay of the appointment or grade and the pay of the officiating officer, ordinarily secures individuals against any but very trifling loss.

3. As regards the second point, I am to observe that, before the memorial was received, the question of the minimum furlough allowance was decided in favour of the service.

4. On the third point, I am to state that the Governor-general in Council can make no specific promises. Any relief that he could give to the service by appointments in his gift would be very small, while in every appointment the fitness of the individual must be more considered than the claims of the service at large, however urgent they may be. Still H.E. in Council would be glad to see members of the Covenanted Civil Service more extensively employed in the Non-Regulation Provinces, and in the Political and other Departments of the State; and I am to acquaint you that stringent orders were issued last year to the local Governments and Administrations in the Bengal Presidency to give effect to these views, so far as the Non-Regulation Provinces are concerned. H.E. in Council will further address the local Governments with a view to the employment in special departments of members of the Civil Service who possess the necessary qualifications, so far as this can be done without injustice to the claims of gentlemen already employed in such departments.

It is understood, however, that the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces has on more than one occasion recently bestowed on covenanted civilians appointments not reserved exclusively to the service; and, with reference to the present admitted stagnation of promotion, the Governor-General in Council hopes that his Honour will be able to find other similar opportunities.

5. As to the last point, the Governor-General in Council has determined to accede to the prayer of the memorialists. This concession will be of course of general application, and will be notified in the financial department.

From Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India to the Government of India.—No. 33, dated India-office, London, April 18.

The despatch of the Acting Governor-General of India in Council, dated the 21st of February, No. 8 of 1872, forwarding a copy of a memorial from certain members of the Bengal Civil Service, and of the reply of the Government, has been considered by me in Council.

2. I approve of the reply returned by the Government of India to the memorialists, and regard the concessions which have been made as judicious and liberal.

H. L. DAMPIER, Officiating Secretary to the Government of India.

Home.

MR. COWAN AND MR. FORSYTH.

The following is part of a letter addressed by Mr. Cowan to the Times:—

In April last, when I was on a visit to Mussouree, I received a letter from the Government of India, informing me that Mr. Forsyth, in a confidential narrative of the Kooka outbreak which had been laid before the Viceroy, had stated that I must have received his orders to keep my prisoners for trial some time before I executed any. The Viceroy remarked that this statement was not only opposed to my distinct assertion in the official correspondence, which assertion was corroborated by Colonel Perkins in his diary relating to the same event, but that it was also opposed to the spirit of Mr. Forsyth's own account of the same transaction in the official correspondence, and we were all called on for explanations.

My reply was a distinct denial of the fact, and I related fully all the occurrences of the day of the executions. My papers were all at Loodiana, but, as my recollection of all that occurred at Mulair Kotelah was very distinct, I did not wait for their arrival to reply to the Government letter. In the concluding portion of my reply I mentioned that Mr. Forsyth had, after receiving my official report of the execution of the forty-nine rebels, addressed the following note to me:—

"My dear Cowan,—I fully approve and confirm all you have done. You have acted admirably. I am coming out.—Yours sincerely,

"Jan. 17, 1872."

I had not submitted a copy of this note sooner to Government, as I believed I had Mr. Forsyth's full support and approval. I now learnt that Mr. Forsyth had, in a letter addressed to the Government, stated that he "deplored and deprecated" my irregular action, and I deemed it necessary, in my own defence, to submit to Government the letter I received from him after he had received my report of the executions. As stated above, the above quoted note was written from recollection. Some time after, on my return to Loodiana, and on a further reference, I discovered that I had made a mistake in the copy, and that Mr. Forsyth's letter was as follows:—

"My dear Cowan,—I write a line to say that I fully approve and confirm all you have done. You have acted with energy and promptitude. I am coming out.—Yours sincerely,

A corrected copy was at once submitted by me to Government. Mr. William Forsyth adds that the above note was written by his brother before he knew that his orders to keep the prisoners for trial had been disobeyed. I have only to state that Mr. William Forsyth's brother has fully admitted that this note was written after he received my report of the executions; and it is incredible that Mr. William Forsyth should not have been acquainted with this fact. Mr. William Forsyth has not hesitated to characterise an error of mine, of no material import, as a "pure invention." I will leave you, Sir, to characterise his assertion that his brother's note of the 17th of January, above quoted, was written before Mr. Forsyth knew that his orders had been disobeyed.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

LAMBART COWAN.

Mussouree, India, Aug. 20.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-COLONEL SOADY, R.A.—Lieutenant-Colonel F. J. Soady, R.A., author of "Lessons of War" (published by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co.), and several other military works of standard value, died on the 13th instant at Weston-super-Mare.

THE SISTERS OF THE LATE LIEUT. WAGHORN.—The British public is asked to contribute small sums to comfort the old age of three venerable ladies—the sisters of Lieutenant Waghorn. These ladies, at a very advanced period of life, are unfortunately in straitened circumstances. The eldest, Ann Munday, is a widow, aged seventy-four years, residing at Melbourne, and is quite infirm and unfitted for any exertion.

EXPORT OF SILVER.—The annual export of silver to the East from all parts of Europe amounts to a considerable sum. This export, in which England, the principal intermediary of Asiatic commerce, shares the largest part, has shown, since the commencement of the present year, a remarkable increase. The total exported from Southampton alone this year up to the end of August amounts to £4,361,763, while the whole export of 1871 did not exceed £3,712,473. This has been caused by the great deficiency of the American cotton crop of last year, which has augmented our demand for that material in the East. The total American crop of 1870 was 4,352,317 bales, whereas the crop of 1871 was but 2,974,315 bales, showing a falling-off of 1,377,966 bales.

DEATH OF COLONEL F. J. NELSON, INDIAN ARMY.—Col. F. J. Nelson, commandant of the 7th Bengal N.I., died at Brockhall Lodge, near Dartmouth, on the 12th inst. Col. Nelson entered the service Aug. 21, 1840; lieutenant, June 21, 1843; brevet-captain, Aug. 21, 1855; captain, June 14, 1857; major, Feb. 18, 1861; lieutenant-colonel, Aug. 21, 1866; and brevet-colonel, Aug. 21, 1871. He served with the force in South China in 1858-60 (medal).

ACCIDENT TO LORD STRATHNAIRN.—Lord Strathnairn had an ugly "purl" from his horse whilst taking a fence, at the other side of which lay a morass, and his faithful aides are said to have followed their chief and got into difficulties of a soft character. The gallant officer and his staff were treated with marked consideration in Berlin. Captain Russell has arrived in England already. General Sherman would, no doubt, have had no reason to think he was not well received by Count von Moltke if he had waited on him in uniform. Generals in multi are monstrosities in Germany.

COLONEL ROE.—The question as to the succession to Colonel Roe, 3rd Battalion 60th Rifles, as Deputy Adjutant-General of the Madras Army, appears to have been set at rest, as Lieutenant-Colonel R. C. Stewart, half-pay, late 2nd Foot, who for the last two years has been filling the post of Assistant Military Secretary in Ceylon, is reported to have arrived in Madras, and taken up the appointment. This officer was, prior to proceeding to Ceylon, Deputy Assistant-Adjutant-General at the Horse Guards. He is said to be an accomplished linguist, both in European and Oriental languages, and has seen a good deal of service in India. He took part in the campaign of 1857-58, was present at the storm and capture of Meangunge, and was Deputy Assistant-Adjutant-General to Sir E. Lugard's division. At the siege and capture of Lucknow in 1858 he was severely wounded (brevet of major and medal with three clasps).—Broad Arrow.

DEATH OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL J. S. FRITH.—The death is announced by telegram from India of Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Frith, C Brigade, R.H.A. (late Bengal), as having occurred at Meerut on the 20th inst. Colonel Frith, who was forty-four years of age, obtained his commission June 14, 1845, became first lieutenant March 25, 1849; second captain August 27, 1858; brevet-major August 28, 1858; first captain October 1, 1861; major, July 5, 1872; and lieutenant-colonel August 1, 1872. He served in the Punjab campaign in 1848-49 (medal). Served as brigade-major of Artillery in the Indian Mutiny in 1857-58, including the actions of the Hindu, siege and capture of Delhi, siege and capture of Lucknow, three times mentioned in despatches, brevet of major, medal with two clasps. This death will most probably promote Major C. McW. Mercer, 19th Brigade, Captain H. Smithett, F Brigade, R.H.A., and Lieutenant H. L. Mackenzie, 16th Brigade.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL BRAY.—Exception has been taken by some of our Indian contemporaries to the selection of Lieutenant-Colonel Bray, 96th Regiment, for the post of Deputy Adjutant-General of the Bombay Army. It has to be remembered that Colonel Bray has seen long service in the East; was for a considerable term of years in the Bombay Command, and, besides, performed valuable work as Assistant Adjutant-General of the 2nd Division of the expedition despatched from Bombay Presidency to Abyssinia at the close of 1867. Far from being an "outsider," we (Army and Navy Gazette) consider Colonel Bray, despite the fact that he has been for the past year or two in charge of his regiment in Bengal, had claims upon Sir Augustus Spencer. We do not quite see how the Presidency boundaries can always be strictly observed. It is wise of the respective chiefs to select the best men they can, whether they be quartered in Bengal, Madras, or Bombay; and if they succeed in obtaining their services, all the better for the Army to whose staff they are called. The home officers might have well complain that men whose regiments are in Ireland are occasionally given employment on the staff in England, and vice versa. If it is felt that the Bombay Army has been wronged in this instance, what would these journals have said had General Spencer adopted the tactics of his colleague the Commander-in-Chief of Madras, and looked out for an officer from some small colony near at hand? We could have appreciated their annoyance in that case; but we cannot see, so long as a man is quartered in India, that it matters much at what station or in which command he may be serving.

ARMY MEDICAL SERVICE.—Rumours reach us (Lancet) from time to time that the discussions on the subject of the amalgamation of the British and Indian medical services are being renewed. The much-talked-of new Warrant has, we suppose, been again pigeon-holed—to the great satisfaction, probably, of many a regimental medical officer. The prospects of the medical service have in no respect improved. The senior assistant-surgeons remain exactly where they were. The stagnation of promotion in the department bears, too, very hardly on those senior assistant-surgeons whose lot is cast in India, debarred as they are by the regulations from any employment other than the subordinate and monotonous duties of their rank, while they have the mortification of seeing other officers appointed to lucrative staff or civil duties. The Royal Warrant of 1867, improving the pay of medical officers, remains up to the present time a dead letter in India. The increase of pay granted to senior assistant-surgeons is withheld in India, the pay being issued to them by the rules established in 1864, by which an assistant-surgeon of fifteen years' service is paid at the rate of 13s. a day only, with the Indian allowances of his rank—that of captain—instead of the higher rate. The Royal Warrant of December, 1871, relating to Sub Lieutenant and Lieutenant has already been promulgated in India, and rumour says that it is to carry back pay from the 1st January, 1872. Surely the same principles should apply to the Army Medical Department Warrant of 1867. By this date the time, one would think, had arrived for putting the provisions of that Warrant in practice. Even round the Cape there is time for it to have reached India in 1872!

SUEZ CANAL DUES.—At the meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce last week at Southampton, an interesting discussion was held on the subject of the Suez Canal dues. The Newcastle Chamber proposed the following resolution:—"That, as it appears that the Law Officers of the Crown are of opinion that the words, 'tonneau de capacite des navires' in the act of concession to the Suez Canal Company may be fairly construed to mean 'the gross tonnage of the vessels after deduction has been made of space for the engines and coal bunkers,' this Association do earnestly urge on her Majesty's Government the desirability and great importance to the shipping and commerce of this country of their taking all possible measures to secure the adoption of this construction of the act of concession." On a division, 11 voted for the motion and 28 against it, the majority of the delegates giving preference to the Kendal proposition, which was then put, and carried unanimously:—"That the Association memorialise the Government on the necessity of taking steps to secure to British shipping the treaty rate of tolls for the use of the Suez Canal, and for securing, if possible, its neutralisation." On the motion of Shoreham, it was resolved "That this Association urge upon her Majesty's Government the necessity of obtaining a more free navigation of the Black Sea, and especially of obtaining redress against the vexatious delays occasioned by the Turkish Government to ships that have cleared from Russian ports, where disease may be prevalent, from passing into the Mediterranean and continuing their voyages." Huddersfield proposed, "That the Association memorialise her Majesty's Government to complete the survey from Rangoon to Kiang-Hung, and carry out the best route for facilitating commerce with South-west China," which was carried.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—The directors, in now furnishing the shareholders with a statement of the bank's affairs for the half-year ended June 30 last, beg to report that the net profits earned during that period amounted to £43,269. 9s. 4d., and that a sum of £4,867, previously treated as a loss, has become a good asset. These amounts extinguish the deficiency which was shown at Dec. 31 last, and leave at the credit of profit and loss account on June 30 a balance of £19,361. 1s. 7d. Under these circumstances the directors would have been justified in recommending an interim dividend for the past half-year, but for a loss which has since been incurred through the failure of Messrs. Gledstones and Co., and their correspondents in India, upon whose several estates the bank may have to claim for £28,000. This sum may possibly be lessened by certain securities, the right to which has yet to be legally established; but, in any case, the directors see no reason to anticipate an eventual loss exceeding the above amount at credit of profit and loss. This information the directors hope will tend to remove the misconception which apparently exists with regard to the position of the bank, as evinced by the present undue depreciation in the market value of its shares. They are able to state that the general business of the bank is progressing satisfactorily. Since the last annual meeting, Mr. Emile Levita, of Messrs. Levita and Hudson, of London and Manchester, has consented to join the direction. The election of this gentleman, whose services will be a valuable acquisition to the board, will be proposed to the shareholders at the earliest date permitted by the bank's deed of settlement. Mr. Frederick William Heilgers has been provisionally elected a director, in place of Mr. James Fraser, deceased. To confirm that appointment, as well as for the election of Mr. William Paterson as a director, an extraordinary general meeting of shareholders will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 9 next, notice of which has already been given in the usual manner.

VICTORIA CROSS.—The Army and Navy Gazette notices the following announcement which appeared in Friday night's Gazette:—"War Office, September 27, 1872.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officer, whose claim to the same has been submitted for her Majesty's approval, for an act of bravery performed by him when serving with the Loshai Expeditionary Force, as recorded against his name, viz.:—Major (now Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel) Donald Macintyre, Bengal Staff Corps, for his gallant conduct at the storming of the stockaded village of Lalnoora on January 4, 1872. Colonel Macpherson, C.B., V.C., commanding the 2nd Goorkha Regiment, in which Lieutenant-Colonel Macintyre was serving at the time as second in command, reports that this officer, who led the assault, was the first to reach the stockade (on this side from eight to nine feet high); and that to climb over and disappear among the flames and smoke of the burning village was the work of a very short time. The stockade, he adds, was successfully stormed by this officer under fire, the heaviest the Loshais delivered that day." Our contemporary makes the subjoined remarks on the gift of the Cross to the above officer:—"We do not undervalue Lieutenant-Colonel Macintyre's gallantry; nor do we mean to insinuate that, as compared with many v.c.'s, he is less deserving; but we maintain that "an act of bravery" and "gallant conduct" such as those described were not exceptionally brilliant, and do not, according to the original intent in creating the much-coveted distinction, entitle the performer to the Cross. To be first to reach a stockade is not an extraordinary act on the part of the leader of a storming column, and there is a bathos about the "disappearance" in the smoke and flames of the burning village inside the 9ft. stockade, which Colonel Macintyre climbed as "the work of a very short time," which may be owing to the inability to describe an action which produced an impression on those who witnessed it. Certainly we do not remember that the "storming of Lalghoora" was attended by any considerable casualties; but Colonel Macpherson, v.c., must be a good judge of the actions which should entitle Lieutenant-Colonel Macintyre to put the honourable letters after his name."

BANQUET TO THE JAPANESE AMBASSADOR.—On Sept. 20 the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress entertained the principal members of the Japanese Embassy now in this country, and about two hundred other guests, at a banquet in the Egyptian Hall of the Mansion House, which was served with all the customary splendour. The whole of the Embassy were present. In attendance upon the Embassy were Sir Harry Parkes, the British Ambassador in Japan, General Alexander, C.B., and Mr. G. Aston, the interpreter to her Britannic Majesty's Legation. During dinner the band of the Goldstream Guards, under Mr. F. Godfrey, played a fine selection of airs. The vocalists were Miss Jane Wells, Miss Julia Elton, Mr. Lawler, Mr. Coates, and Mr. De Lacey, and the accompanist Mr. J. G. Callcott. The Lord Mayor, having proposed the usual loyal and constitutional toasts, said he had paid most marked attention to everything that had occurred in Japan during the last three or four years, and he could only say, in common with most people probably who had interested themselves on the subject, that the advancement which had been made by the Japanese people in that time was perfectly surprising. They were, first of all, entirely unselfish, seeing that all the great men in the country had abandoned privileges, power, and revenue, and had given in their adhesion to a system of government more consonant, as they believed, with the existing state of things in that enormously populated country. He had as his guest that evening the Ambassador Extraordinary from Japan, a man of great intelligence, as he was given to understand, and his Excellency was accompanied by those who were well able to assist him in making reports to his own country as to the way in which Government was conducted here. His Excellency might be assured that we were well disposed to afford every facility in our power to encourage trade between his country and ours. The works of art especially, and the products of Japan, had been long and highly appreciated and admired in England. Our intercourse ought to be perfectly reciprocal with Japan, and they and we might be convinced that the more intimate the acquaintance, the greater would be the prosperity of the two countries. He had the greatest pleasure in proposing the health of the Japanese Ambassador, and in expressing to his Excellency his belief that in the City of London, and among the English community generally, there was an earnest desire to cultivate good offices with his country. He trusted his Excellency would be enabled to form right opinions of the English people during his stay, and that they and we would be friends for ages to come. The Ambassador, through an interpreter, expressed his high sense of the complimentary and flattering address of his lordship, and of the goodwill which he had evinced towards his country; adding that those expressions of amity would be the most welcome tokens he could take home to his Sovereign. His country would be much gratified by their splendid reception in the City of London. Some other toasts were given, and the company then separated.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

TRADE WITH YUNAN.

The Times remarks that the Panthays form a link, and a very important link, in a chain of international traffic which it may one day be in our power, as it will always be our interest, to weld together. The trade between the hundreds of millions of Chinese and the manufacturing industries of Europe ought, some time or other, to find a more direct course than it now finds through the few open ports on the Eastern and Southern Coasts of China. But, in addition to this, the export trade from China to Further and Hither India might become an immensely important traffic conducted mainly by English agencies. Before the insurrection of the Panthays in 1855 a considerable trade, valued at half a million sterling annually, was carried on between Burmah and China, and the Panthays themselves were among the most eager participators in this traffic. Bhamo, a town situated upon the Irrawaddy, near the North-Eastern frontier of Burmah, became the entrepôt of this trade. But when the Panthays revolted from the Chinese rule, the stream of traffic from China to Burmah was stopped at once, and from the internecine character of the struggle between the Chinese and the Panthays it is to be feared that the circulation of commerce upon this line will not be easily renewed. This consideration affords some reason for doubting whether the schemes for establishing a regular line of trading connection with Yunan are likely to result in any substantial advantage either to English commerce or to the welfare of our Indian dominions. It is very easy to talk of the re-opening of the trade with Western China; but, were we even to overcome the jealousy of Burmah and the natural difficulties of a country still in part unexplored, we have little ground for hoping that, either by Captain Sladen's route up the Irrawaddy to Bhamo or by the wilder project of a railway from Rangoon to the Panthay frontier, we should, in effect, "tap," as the Manchester merchants assert, the trade of China at all. We should merely, as it seems, open up traffic with the Panthays, whose dominion in Yunan is now as completely separated from the Chinese Empire as it is possible for two contiguous countries to be. We ought, therefore, to be cautious before committing ourselves to any of those ambitious projects of commercial advance by the costly conquests of the railway and the telegraph to which Manchester is so anxious to pledge the Indian Government. At the same time this is no reason for declining to make friends with the Panthays. The commercial possibilities of overland traffic between India and China are almost boundlessly magnificent, and some day or other the break-up of the Chinese Empire, or the separation from it of the South-Western Provinces, may realise what is now accounted by statesmen a vision of Utopia.

CHOLERA AND WATER SUPPLY.

The Times points out that when the poison of cholera, or of typhoid fever, or perhaps of some other malady, is added to the water, whether this was previously pure or impure, then, and then only, is the specific malady reproduced among those who drink it. The obvious corollary is that water for human consumption should not only be obtained from the best accessible source, but that it should be secured on its way to the consumer against the possibility of receiving contamination from sick persons. The necessary security can only be afforded by the use of closed pipes as the channels of conveyance, and wherever closed pipes are not employed the water-course is liable to become a highway for the current contagions of the locality. It is this simple proposition which many Indian health officers seem unable to understand, or which they neglect, while they are writing about "theories" and compiling voluminous reports. Dr. Muir, in the document to which we have already referred, states that the water for the troops at Meen Meer is obtained from an adjoining canal, and proceeds to declare that much has been accomplished of late to increase the purity of the supply. He admits that a good deal still remains to be done, "such as the covering in of wells, the provision of pumps, the substitution of suitable vessels for the objectionable mussacks, and improvements in the mode of distribution; but he appears to regard all these as comparatively unimportant matters of detail, and not to see that, with the habits and customs of the natives, the open canal, the open well, and the filthy dipping vessel, are so many totally unguarded inlets through which cholera, or any other epidemic disease, may at any time enter and be diffused abroad among the garrison. Mr. Commissioner Cornish, in his admirable report on the outbreak of cholera among the 18th Hussars at Secunderabad, says:—"The wells are all open-mouthed and unprovided with the simplest appliances for raising water. They are crowded all day long by people from the neighbouring bazaar, who bring their own ropes and chatties to draw and carry water. The chatties are constantly washed at the well, and any foul matter adhering to the outside of them would be pretty certain to find its way into the well waters. It is quite possible that chatties from an infected house, soiled with cholera, matter might have been washed at the wells." To this account it might be added that several of the wells are approached by flights of steps which lead down below the surface of the water, and that those who go to dip constantly immerse their feet and legs in doing so. In all these wells the need for protection from choleraic discharges may be said to be totally neglected in practice; and it is further asserted that in more than one instance foul water has been strained through filters made from sand which had itself been exposed to choleraic contagion. Such are the conditions against which we have to guard in the East; and they render the quality of the original source of water supply a matter of less importance than the intercepting of accidental pollution between the source and the consumer. Water which was hard, or turbid, or brackish, or in other respects of bad quality, might, indeed, be unwholesome, but it would not be a cause of cholera; and no degree of original purity or excellence would avail if the supposed good water had been contaminated by cholera matter on its way. The protection against cholera which may be gained from closed channels and reservoirs is not, therefore, in any sense a matter of hypothesis. It is a matter of fact, like the protection against rain which is afforded by an umbrella. Like that protection, also, it is possibly incomplete, and may leave some channels of access unguarded. But we do not discard umbrellas on the ground that they fail to keep the feet dry; and we have no right to neglect precautions which would be to a great extent effectual on the ground that further precautions might be required in addition to them. So long as the Indian authorities leave wells and watercourses exposed to innumerable chances of pollution, so long will they retain one efficient channel of cholera in their midst.

THE RHEA-FIBRE MACHINES.—We stated some time since that the trial of the rhea-fibre machines, submitted to compete for the Government reward of Rs. 50,000, was about to come off at Saharunpore; and we now learn from the Englishman the results of the trial so far as they are at present known. These are, to a certain extent, disappointing; for, out of thirty-two machines entered, only two were actually brought forward, and one of these was withdrawn. The remaining machine, belonging to Mr. J. Greig, jun., of Edinburgh, was worked during a period of three weeks before Colonel Hyde, the judge, in the presence of the owner, who had brought it to Saharunpore in person. The experiments which were conducted with great tact and patience, and to the perfect satisfaction of the patentee, show, in the opinion of several practical men by whom the working was watched, that the machine is a highly meritorious one, and a move in the right direction, though, pending the report from home on the outturn, it is impossible to say how far it has fulfilled the conditions laid down by the Government. These conditions, it will be remembered, were that the machine should turn out a ton of fibre at an expense not exceeding £15, including all items, such as interest, wear and tear, &c., and that the prepared fibre should be equal in value to at least £50 per ton in the English market. The machine, which is a very handsome one, is valued at £200.—Bombay Gazette.

PROFESSIONAL OPINIONS

SUPPORTING AND RECOMMENDING THIS SYSTEM.

March, 1871.

I have much pleasure in bearing my unqualified testimony to the admirable system of military exercises as given in Sergeant-major B. Browne's book. I can speak confidently of it, having had personal experience of its value. I am in the habit of recommending it to all those under my care, who require this additional mode of treatment for developing their frame.

C. M. MILLER, M.D.,
Assistant-surgeon, London Rifle Brigade.

Mr. Browne.—Nothing can be more true, in my opinion, than all you say in favour of training all our boys to military exercises. Its usefulness cannot be over-rated, either to the boys themselves or to the nation, which would thus find, in a short time, and without any inconvenience or effort, the best part of its educated population prepared to take part in the defence of the country, almost without training, and should their services in this way happily never be required, the country would still have the satisfaction of seeing its young male population immensely benefited in health, strength, appearance, and general manliness. If carried out at all schools, it would become the favourite pastime of the boys.

H. EVES, Lieutenant-general.

Birkbeck Schools, Kingsland, N., March 7, 1871.

For some years past all the boys and girls of these schools have been put through a course of systematic drill, such as that laid down in Sergeant-major Browne's book. The results have been in the highest degree satisfactory. Not only is the physical condition of the children greatly improved, but the discipline of the drill-ground produces habits of obedience and attention, which, carried into the school-room, conduce greatly to the mental progress of the children, as well as materially aid in maintaining order. Until the time shall come when the Government shall wisely insist upon every child being efficiently drilled, schoolmasters who have not yet tried the experiment will do well to do so without delay.

Of course it is of the utmost importance that the drill-instructor should not be a mere martinet. He must be able to convey his instructions clearly and pleasantly; have an unlimited supply of patience, and show that he really takes an interest in his work.

It has been our good fortune for some years to have secured the services of Sergeant-major Browne, the author of this little book ("Setting-up Drill," &c.), who is not only assiduous in performing his duties, but who is fond of his work, and shows it, and therefore, succeeds admirably.

JAMES RENTZ, Head Master.

Kingsland Middle Class Schools, Sandringham-road, March 7, 1871.

Physical exercise is undoubtedly one of the requisites of youth, and if such exercise be conducted with a purpose, it is not only productive of health to the body, but also induces habits of order and energy. In our schools the system of drill instruction has been adopted with the best results, and I am quite convinced that any school would be the better for its introduction. Of course a great deal depends upon the drill-instructor; but if such an one as ours (Sergeant-major Browne, who is thoroughly fond of the work, and at the same time a strict disciplinarian and a perfect gentleman), be obtained, the result will be all that can be desired.

ROBERT LANE, Head Master.

Southgate-road Middle Class School, De Beauvoir-town, N., March 6, 1871.

It is fortunate in the present day there is but little need for insisting upon this physical training of youth, as its importance is so generally recognised. To insure success, however, it is indispensable that it should be conducted by well-qualified instructors, such as are apt to teach, of gentlemanly manners and good disciplinarians. From my observations of Sergeant-major Browne, I am able to testify to his possession of these qualifications, and have very great pleasure in recommending his system of drill to those who may be desirous of introducing physical exercises into their schools.

THOMAS WILSON, F.R.G.S., Head Master.

Finishing Establishment for Young Ladies, Benyon-house, 32, Cullford-road, De Beauvoir-town, N., March 6, 1871.

Mrs. Aldam has great pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficiency of Sergeant-major Browne's method of drilling, and as possessing not only great patience, but also consideration for the strength of the pupils, that no undue fatigue is occasioned, no too sudden a strain upon the muscles of growing children, eager, perhaps, to outdo their schoolfellows, a point too frequently overlooked, when a large number are being drilled.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.
 It is admitted by everyone who has personally tried these noble remedies for any eruptions, sores, ulcers, bad legs, &c., or who have witnessed their purifying and healing effects on others suffering from such maladies, that these medicaments possess every property which the invalid could desire. The Ointment reduces the swollen muscles, diminishes the inflammation, assuages pain, and even alleviates dangerous maladies which may have lasted for months, or even years. Holloway's excellent preparations are effective, simple, resistance in combination, and have been recommended by grateful patients to be resorted to as alternatives when all other means of regaining health have failed. Their action is temperate, not violent or hazardous.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, September 13; Agra and Madras, September 11; Calcutta, September 10.

LORD NORTHBROOK's stay at Simla comes to an end on the 14th of this month, when he will go down the hill to Ambála. At that place, according to the programme, he will hold a darbar on the 16th, at which Sir John Strachey and the Begam of Bhopál will be invested with the Order of the Star of India. From thence the Viceroy will go by Ferozpúr to Amritsar, Lahore, and Multán. There his Lordship will take steamer about the 26th for Kasoor, whence he will turn aside to visit Jacobabad and Shaikarpúr. Returning to Sakkar, he will go thence down the Indus to Kotri, looking in at Haidrabad across the river, and taking the rail from Kotri to Karáchi. By the middle of November his Lordship will reach Bombay, and there meet his Legislative Council. A visit to Puna and Kirki will be followed by a railway trip to Nagpúr, whence his Lordship will take the road to Jabalpúr. After his return to Calcutta, in the first or second week of December, he will receive a visit from the Governor of Madras.

In the beginning of September the cholera was still raging in and about Jalandhar. On the third there were six deaths out of sixteen seizures, and on the next day nine more died out of seventeen under treatment. Of the 54th Foot only four men had then been attacked. The disease had spread in a mild form to Philor and Kartarpur. In the week ending August 17 the deaths from cholera in the Punjab had risen from 270, the total for the previous week, to 428. Of these 112 occurred in Lahore, 183 at Ludiana, and sixty-seven at Jhiliam. The disease has abated in Kashmir, but broken out fiercely at Bhoosawal, on the great Indian Peninsular Railway; between thirty and forty natives and Portuguese dying there daily up to the 7th September. At Lucknow the Artillery Brigade, which had gone into camp, have now returned to their barracks. There is said to have been great mismanagement in the matter of the married camp sent out from Mianmír to Shalimár. Neither tents nor common necessities were supplied, and the women and children had to sleep on the marble floors of the pretty summer houses in those pleasant gardens; an arrangement more picturesque than conducive to health in the rainy season. Cholera soon reappeared among them, and the camp had again to be moved.

On the 5th September the Supreme Legislative Council sat again at Simla, to pass Mr. Hobhouse's Bill for defining the jurisdiction of the Bombay High Court in Sind, and General Norman's Bill for admitting Sepoy lunatics into asylums. Sir J. Strachey's Bill concerning Irrigation and Drainage in Northern India was referred to a Select Committee, and one or two minor Bills were introduced by Mr. Bayley.

THE papers contain brief accounts of what happened to a small detachment of Jacob's Rifles sent out from Jacobabad under Captain Humfrey to succour the English Resident at Khelat, whose unruly ruler has broken through his engagements with regard to his refractory Sirdars. The fearful heat of the march across the desert struck down no fewer than thirty men; and to add to their discomforts bullets were nightly dropped into their tents by ill-conditioned natives prowling about the neighbourhood. Little harm however was done by these latter visitants. Since then the detachment seems to have escorted the Resident back from Khelat; his withdrawal having been provoked by the Khan's misconduct. Here is a knot which Lord Northbrook will have to untie after his meeting with Sir W. Merewether.

COLONEL A. T. ETHERIDGE, for many years on the Inam Commission in the Dakhan, is mentioned as likely to become President of the Bhayád Court about to be established in Katiwar. Mr. Forbes is likely to be made Commissioner of Allahabad, in the room of the late Mr. F. Mayne, whose distinguished merits have been further acknowledged in a telegram from Lord Northbrook.

WE note with pleasure a sensible move lately made by the Indian Government with regard to the issue of blankets to the European troops. Among the soldiers at Pesháwar exposure to cold seems to have brought on fresh attacks of fever in the case of those who had already suffered from that complaint. It is now ruled however that during unseasonably cold weather extra blankets will be issued by the commissariat, to be returned into store when no longer needed, provided the commanding officer and the chief medical officer at the station agree in recommending such extra issue.

MR. GEORGE CAMPBELL has been scolding the civil authorities at Murshidabad for not coming to meet him in due form when he lately paid that city a visit. "It seems never to have occurred"—he writes—"to the Magistrate of the District, to whom the Lieutenant-Governor himself mentioned his intentions, that it was any business of his to meet the Lieutenant-Governor, and show him the city and offices." Neither the head of the district police nor the inspector in charge of the city was to be seen or heard of, and the chief sub-inspector was also wanting at the proper moment. His Honour however must surely have found some comfort in the opportunity thus given him for a side-blow at the police of Murshidabad, whose absence enabled him to see "in its natural guise one of the most slovenly police posts that he has ever had the pain of seeing in any part of India." If a visit of inspection is to be anything but a farce, his Honour should have been grateful for such a chance of seeing things in their natural guise instead of their official disguise.

THE Pioneer understands that a definite scheme for amending the present relations between the Royal and Indian Medical Services is now under the consideration of the Government, whose final decision may soon be expected. The main improvement proposed is the establishment of a well-organised Civil Medical Service, and the question of its recruitment is one of the problems that has to be solved. It is also stated that the rule forbidding surgeons in the Indian Service from taking charge of European troops will be set aside. This regulation has always seemed a great hardship to the Indian Medical Officers, and in the interests of all concerned its abrogation is greatly to be desired.

THE prospects of Indian opium are still remarkably encouraging. It appears that the results of the five sales already held this season give an average yield of Rs. 1,428 per chest. Compared with Sir R. Temple's Budget estimate of Rs. 1,200 a chest, the actual yield for the whole year, if these prices are kept up, ought to leave a large balance on the right side of the account—little short indeed of a million upon the Bengal opium alone. It is possible of course that the present rates may fall before the year's end; but in view of the quantity now coming monthly into the market, and of a reduction in the supply proposed for next year, there is little reason to apprehend a serious fall.

ACCORDING to latest telegrams from India, we are glad to hear that cholera is fast disappearing both in India and across the frontier. Already however the loss of life among our European troops alone has been very serious. No fewer than 750 soldiers, women and children have been attacked with cholera since the beginning of the outbreak, of whom 480 have died; a proportion of more than 70 per cent. of deaths to seizures. After all our efforts to combat the disease, these numbers are not encouraging.

WE learn by telegram that the export trade in Calcutta is very dull, and that the indigo crop in the North-West Provinces, though still a good one, is a little deteriorated, owing we suppose to the heavy rains.

WE are glad to hear that Sir Arthur Phayre's scheme for utilising the old monastic schools in British Burmah has found a hearty advocate in Mr. Eden, the Chief Commissioner for that province. It is to be hoped that the "able paper" which, according to a Times telegram, he has written on the subject, will carry due weight with the Supreme Government. In respect of primary instruction the Buddhist schools in Burmah were far ahead of any school-system in British India.

ANOTHER telegram informs us that the Bank of Bengal has raised its rate of discount one per cent.

A REMARKABLE instance of the extent to which Indian rivers are apt to change their courses is furnished by the history of the Brahmaputra during the last ninety years. In 1785 that river flowed far to the east of Dacca, receiving in its course the rivers of Silhet, which joined with it to form the Meghna, at that time the direct outlet for all the drainage of the Assam and Cachar vallies. Since then however the Brahmaputra has shifted its main channel nearly two hundred miles westward, consigning many an ancient city to ruin, and giving birth to new centres of trade and population. All this seems to have happened in the space of twenty years, the process having been pretty nearly completed by 1830. The Jheels or swamps of Silhet, deprived of the vast supply of silt which the Brahmaputra used to wash down from the hills and higher vallies, lost their chance of an early transformation into cultivable land. The influx of the Brahmaputra into the Gangetic river-system tended to develop the process of land-making in the Gangetic delta, by forcing the Gangetic rivers to spread their silt over a wider area than before. While Sonargaong, the old capital of Bengal, deserted by the river to which it owed its prosperity, is now a mean village surrounded by heaps of brick and jungle, the great trading-mart of Serájganj, where so much jute was damaged by the late cyclone, has sprung up like a gourd on the new channel of the Brahmaputra. The trade of Dacca itself is even now threatened by the same disturbing cause. Similar changes appear to be going on in the Ganges, one of which we lately mentioned as tending to undermine a part of the railway between Colgong and Bhāgalpūr. It is not unlikely, as the Englishman suggests, that these changes may have something to do with the prevalence of endemic diseases, like the Bardwān fever, in the districts affected by them. The matter at any rate is one that calls for and would doubtless repay careful enquiry.

TAKING a medical view of the Euphrates Valley Railway the Lancet points out a serious, if not fatal, objection to one at least of the proposed routes, that, namely, which, according to the suggestions of Captain Felix Jones, would pass by the famous pilgrim cities of Kerbela, or Meshed Hussein, and Nedjif, or Meshed Ali. These, as their modern names import, are the burial places of Ali and his son Hussein, the patron saints of the Shiah Mohammedans, who flock by thousands yearly to their tombs from Persia and India. As these pilgrims often carry with them the seeds of cholera, which needs small encouragement to travel thence into Europe by way of Turkey, it is easy to understand the fresh facilities which a Mesopotamian railway might offer to that end. At the same time there is no particular necessity for carrying the railway too near these places, nor, even if there were such, would the consequent danger prove a sufficient bar to such an undertaking. If the spread of disease by means of railways were the chief thing to consider, the development of our Indian railway system should be regarded in the light of a curse rather than the blessing it is generally supposed to be. In fact, the same objection might be advanced against all modes of facilitating intercourse between different places and countries. We must be content to take the drawbacks with the advantages of modern civilisation.

THE death of Sir Charles Mills, senior partner in the bank, of Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, and Co., has removed another interesting relic of the old East Indian Company's rule. A leading member of the old Court of Directors for many years before its political extinction in 1858, Sir Charles was afterwards senior director of the Company as still existing in its purely commercial form. He died at the age of eighty years.

ANOTHER relic of old Indian days has just disappeared in the shape of Lieutenant-General Sir Isaac Coffin, who died at Blackheath very suddenly on the 1st of this month, in his seventy-second year. Born in 1801, he entered the Madras Army at an early age, and became a major-general in 1857. During the Mutiny he commanded the Hyderabad Contingent. From 1859 to 1864 he commanded a division of the Madras Army. In 1866 he obtained a Knight Commandership of the Star of India, and not long before his death he rose to the rank of Lieutenant-General.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL FRITH, of the Bengal Artillery, whose death has lately been announced by telegram, entered the service in 1845. He served in the Punjab campaign of 1848-49. As Brigade-Major of Artillery during the Indian Mutiny campaigns, he was present at the battles on the Hindan, at the siege and storming of Delhi, and at the siege and capture of Lucknow, for which services he was thrice honourably mentioned in the despatches and obtained his brevet majority. He became a Lieutenant-Colonel in August 1872.

ONE of the greatest and most honoured of old Indian generals passed away from among us on Sunday morning, at the ripe age of eighty-six. The son of a sadler at Charing-cross, Sir George Pollock was the youngest of three brothers, all of whom rose to high distinction; the eldest as an Indian Judge, the second as Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer Court, and George himself, the last survivor, as an English Field Marshal, a Baronet, and Constable of the Tower. Born in 1786, the last-named went out to India in 1802 as a lieutenant in the Bengal Artillery. His services in the field began the following year, when Lake and Wellesley entered on those brilliant campaigns which were to break in pieces the formidable Marátha power on both sides of the Narbadda. In the movements which resulted in Holkar's signal defeat at Deig, and the storming of that stronghold towards the end of 1804, young Pollock's battery bore its part. In 1805 he saw hard fighting in Lake's unsuccessful assaults on Bhurtpure. During Lake's subsequent pursuit of Holkar, Pollock commanded the guns which accompanied the flying column under Colonel Ball. His next term of active service was during the Nepalese War of 1815, when he commanded the artillery of General Wood's column. After serving for some years on the Staff as Brigade-Major and Assistant Adjutant-General, Lieutenant-Colonel Pollock was placed in command of the Bengal Artillery attached to the force with which, in 1824-5, Sir A. Campbell captured Rangoon and gave the Burmese their final beating at Prome. For these last services Pollock was made a C.B. About seventeen years later, when Elphinstone's troops had set out on their fatal retreat from Kabul, and Wille's Sepoys had failed in their attempt to relieve Jellalabad, Major-General Pollock was selected by Sir Jasper Nicholls with the general approval as the fittest officer to lead the army which eventually forced the Khaibar, and with Lord Ellenborough's unwilling assent marched on to plant the British standard once more on the Bala Hissar. It was no easy task to restore to health, discipline, and confidence the half-mutinuous, sickly, disordered sepoy regiments at Peshawar, and to impress upon our Sikh allies the need of helping him in his efforts to retrieve our tarnished honour. But Pollock's patience, tact, and resolute will, aided by the unflagging energies of such Politicals as Clark, Mackeson, and Lawrence, overcame all hindrances. Fresh troops came up from Ferozpoor. In April 1842 Pollock forced the Khaibar, and clasped hands with Sale at Jellalabad. On the 20th August he renewed his march upon Kabul, driving the Afghans before him at Jagdalak and Tazin, recovering our captive countryfolk, and reaching Kabul a day before the arrival of his bold comrade Nott from Kandahar. On his triumphant return from Kabul, Pollock was fitly rewarded with a Grand Cross of the Bath, and a formal vote of both Houses acknowledged England's debt to the "intrepidity, skill, and perseverance" which had carried him through one of the hardest enterprises of modern days. Among other honours showered upon him by a grateful country was a life-pension of a thousand a-year settled upon him by the East India Company. Next year Sir George Pollock was appointed Resident at Lucknow, and in 1844 he was promoted to a seat in the Supreme Council of India. After his return to England he entered the Court of Directors as a nominee of the Crown, when the Court was remodelled in 1853. This post he retained until the formation of the Indian Council on the final transfer of British India from the Company to the Crown in 1858. Since then he lived in comparative retirement at Clapham. But his past services were not forgotten. During the last few years of his life he was made a Baronet, a Field-Marshal, and finally the Constable of the Tower. He was also among the first to be honoured with a Knighthood of the Star of India.

ANOTHER old Indian General, Sir Patrick Montgomerie, K.C.B., has just died at the age of 79 years. Sir Patrick entered the Madras Artillery in 1810. During the Maratha War of 1817-18, he was present at the battle of Nagpur and the siege and storming of Chandap. He took part as a Captain in the Burmese War of 1824-25, and commanded the Artillery in the China War of 1840-41. For his services in the latter war he was made an Aide-de-Camp to the Queen. In 1847 he received the further honour of a C.B., and a Knighthood of the Bath in 1865, on account of his long and distinguished services. A Lieutenant-General of 1859, he became a full General in 1868. He was also Colonel Commandant of the Royal Artillery.

A HARSH PROCEEDING.

ACCORDING to the Friend of India a kind of strike has occurred among the "mild Bengalis" in consequence of a seemingly unfair demand on the part of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. It appears that the Civil Surgeon of Bardwan indented for an increased supply of native Sub-assistant Surgeons, to aid him in grappling with the endemic fever of that province. The only way of meeting his requirements in full was to obtain recruits from among the students in the Medical College who had not quite completed their college course. Instead of offering them the Rs. 100 a-month hitherto paid to sub-assistant surgeons, Mr. Campbell sought, it seems, to force these young men to take Rs. 50 only for the privilege of going as supernumeraries into the fever-stricken districts. The young men naturally refused to become food for fever at that low rate. For this, according to the Hindoo Patriot, they are now threatened with the pains and penalties of the Penal Code as guilty of breach of contract. If so, it is possible that they may have put themselves technically in the wrong, by volunteering first and disputing the terms afterwards. We would fain hope however that Mr. Campbell will see betimes the essential injustice of calling them to account for resistance to a bargain in itself unjust. It is surely unreasonable to ask men to volunteer for a very dangerous service on far worse terms than their predecessors had always got, merely because they happen to be a little younger. A hundred rupees a month cannot be too much to offer anyone willing to apply his best skill as a medical officer to a case of special emergency, under conditions peculiarly dangerous to himself.

We venture by the way to dispute our contemporary's assertion that this is the first strike ever recorded in Bengal. How long ago was it that the coolies or palky-bearers of Calcutta, or some such class of men, struck for higher wages? If the Editor of the Friend would look back to the copies of his own or some other journal published about ten years ago, we think he would most likely discover his mistake.

THE PROPOSED ROUTE TO WESTERN CHINA.

THE main obstacles to any scheme for establishing an overland route from India to Western or South-Western China appear to be the ill-will of the Burman Government, the protracted warfare between the Panthays and Chinese, and the uncertainty of securing, under the most favourable conditions, a steadily and lucrative flow of traffic between Yunnan and Eastern India. Unless Major Sladen laboured under a gross delusion, it seems clear that his efforts in 1868 to reach Talifu, the Panchay capital, from Bhamo by way of Momein were successfully thwarted by agents and officers of the Burman Government. For one reason or another, each perhaps connected with mistrust of our ulterior purposes or else with a spirit of commercial jealousy not confined to Eastern races, all kinds of hindrances were thrown in Major Sladen's way, to such effect that he failed to pierce beyond Momein. Thus a mission undertaken with the seeming countenance of our Burmese neighbours ended in comparative failure, embittered by a lasting estrangement between the King of Burmah and his "good friend Sladen." How much of the ill-will so plainly shown by the former on that occasion may still be working against us, it is very hard to say in view of the widely opposing statements made by Englishmen who profess to know something of Burman politics. We would fain hope that his Majesty has begun to see the advantage of opening up trade-routes which must anyhow pass through his dominions, and that he may even be trying to believe in the friendly intentions of his English neighbours. Still his conversion to sound commercial and political views must be sorely hindered by the frequent recurrence of such a cry as that to which Mr. T. Cooper referred in his recent appeal to the English Chambers of Commerce. So long as English writers and speakers in India continue to demand the absorption of all Burmah into British India, his Majesty must be excused for overlooking the wants of English commerce and turning a deaf ear to the assurances of English statesmen. It is not easy for a native ruler to distinguish between the utterances of single critics and the real policy of the Government that puts up with their plain-speaking on the most delicate themes. It is to be hoped however that some good may be attained in this direction by means of the Burmese Embassy, whose intercourse with our statesmen and the great commercial cities of this country should convince them of our peaceful intentions with regard to all foreign states.

As for the continued warfare between the Panthays and the Chinese, that by itself need offer no serious hindrance to any well-considered scheme for opening up a practicable trade-route from India to Western China through the Panthay country. The new Mohammedan power on the frontier has pretty well succeeded in establishing itself within certain limits, and there is small reason to foresee its final defeat in the struggle it has so long successfully maintained. To all appearance the efforts of the Chinese to recover their lost ground are growing gradually weaker, and in all likelihood will soon cease altogether. That the Panthays themselves are eager for our friendship and willing to further our commercial views, may be gathered, not only from their cordial reception of Major Sladen at Momein, but still more from the embassy which is on the point of returning home from England. Their goodwill, seconded by any approach to a friendly understanding with Burmah, would alone suffice to re-establish the old trade-route to Yunnan through Bhamo and Momein. It would remain of course to see how much of the old trade would return to its former channels, and to what extent it might be capable of expansion. On these points we may continue for some time to be in the dark; but the journey which that unwearied explorer, Mr. Cooper, is about to undertake, should enable us to see our way more clearly than we do now. His account of the present trade and capabilities of Yunnan may not be very encouraging; but further researches may lead him to take more hopeful views, and Rangoon may yet become an important outlet for much of the traffic that now finds its way to Eastern China and Siam. There is no need at any rate either for assuming the futility of any scheme like that supported by Major Sladen, or for committing the Indian Government to any premature undertakings on behalf of his or any other particular route. We can well afford to await the result of Mr. Cooper's renewed enquiries, before pronouncing one way or the other on the merits of a problem which has yet to be solved.

A DISCLAIMER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In an article entitled "Urdu Grammar," published in your most valuable journal of Sept. 30, I am quite astonished to read that De Sacy called the Urdu an idiome méprisable.

It is impossible that the late Silvestre de Sacy, the most eminent of the French Orientalists, had ever either written or uttered such nonsense, in so much that he induced me to apply myself to the study of that beautiful and important language; and being Administrator of the then "Royal School for the Living Oriental Languages," he asked and obtained a professorship of the same for me, his pupil and friend.

There is certainly some mistake about the name of the French gentleman who used the ridiculous expression quoted by your correspondent.—I remain, Sir, sincerely yours,

Paris, Oct. 2, 1872. GARCIN DE TASSY.

INDIAN SANITATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Indulgent Nature! O dissolve this gloom!
Bind in eternal adamant the winds
That drown or wither.—ARMSTRONG.

SIR,—I learn from the Indian correspondent of the Times of the 23rd ult. that "Lord Northbrook has offered a gold medal to the Bengal Medical College for the best essay on the causes of the fever that has so long prevailed in the Burdwan districts, and almost devastated vast portions of it."

This is certainly a step in the right direction, and places India under deep obligation to his Lordship for having at last ventilated an important, but too long neglected subject. As a native of India, and one who has had unusually favourable opportunities of examining the towns, villages and private dwellings of India, and comparing them with those of Europe, I venture to submit for the consideration of those interested in the matter the views which my own experience has suggested, and shall feel obliged by your giving them publicity in your paper.

The houses of an Indian town are generally situated in enclosures which present towards the street or alley a dead wall of sun-dried bricks, stone or mud; a small doorway being the only opening seen. On entering this doorway the visitor finds a yard from ten feet to twelve feet square, on the sides of which are a number of dark rooms or cells with an open verandah before them in which the people live. The rooms are, for the most part, very badly ventilated, and are lighted by an aperture about a foot square. The yard often communicates with others of the same kind, forming a labyrinthine succession of such courts. Some houses are visited by Mehtars (sweepers) at stated intervals, but the poorer classes perform the office for themselves; of drainage there is absolutely none at all. There are vile and offensive receptacles in nearly every enclosure, and these diffuse an abominable and poisonous effluvia around. In some dwellings the occupants do not even take the trouble to provide a vessel to receive the filth, but throw it carelessly behind a thin partition wall upon the bare ground, which thus becomes completely saturated with putrescent organic matter. The foul waste water of houses abutting on the street is discharged into a side gutter, and is there allowed to evaporate. Where no such gutter exists, an unglazed earthen jar is sunk at the side of the lane or street, and a pipe passing through the wall discharges the baneful liquid into it. When full the jar is supposed to be carried away and emptied on the nearest ghura (or dunghill), which is to be found opposite nearly every native gentleman's house; as it forms a convenient receptacle for the offal and refuse of the neighbourhood, and as the manure thus collected is looked upon as valuable property by its owner, he continually places a veto upon its removal.

Instead of the porous jar, cesspools of masonry are constructed inside some of the wealthier houses; when these become full the contents are baled or thrown out indiscriminately over the neighbouring thoroughfares, there to be absorbed or to evaporate. Many families merely dig a hole at the side of the street for the reception of the liquid refuse; this is the most pernicious kind of cesspit, for the absorbent nature of the soil causes longer time to elapse before it is actually filled. From the fact that it gives so little trouble, too, it is unfortunately the form most frequently adopted in poor neighbourhoods. When its removal at last becomes imperatively necessary the fetid abomination accumulated in it is scattered broadcast over the neighbourhood. Were it not for the carrion crows, the swine, and other creatures which perform the office of scavengers, and for the extreme dryness of the air, human life could scarcely be maintained under these pestilent conditions.

Again, the fields and maidans are covered with all sorts of offensive objects, and dead cattle are everywhere exposed beneath the burning sky. Not unfrequently, too, when an elephant or horse dies it is buried within the town. The graves of the Mussulmans are never dug to a sufficient depth, and the bodies are consequently at night exhumed by wild animals. The poor classes of Hindoos, on the other hand, are compelled by want of means to perform in a partial and inefficient manner the ceremony of cremation, after which they throw the half consumed corpse into any convenient place which they can find.

These abuses which I have described are the very mainsprings and sources of fever and cholera, diseases from which India is never free. The nature and management of the water supply is moreover a lamentably active cause of disease throughout India. Tanks and wells are dug by private individuals; no care is taken to ascertain that the source is pure, or that the water does not percolate through soil impregnated with sewage, and still fewer precautions are used to prevent the filthy dried excreta, which everywhere covers the surface of the ground from blowing into them. Sometimes lazy women intentionally shoot dirt into the reservoirs, and it is no uncommon thing to see people washing themselves and their water jars in the very water which they are drawing for drinking purposes. As water necessarily enters largely into the consumption of every family, it is impossible to calculate the amount of disease which is produced or disseminated by this wilful and culpable pollution of the sources from which it is drawn. Undoubtedly the immediate cause of fever in the Burdwan districts is to be sought for in the dirt, poverty and overcrowded condition of the villages and towns, the filthy and ill-ventilated state of the dwellings, the close confined air of the dense jungles, and, in the rainy season, the presence of large quantities of stagnant water and decaying vegetable matter. But these are causes which the engineer's skill and the proper application of labour and funds can ameliorate and, in some instances, altogether remove.

To define, however, the remoter causes of the fever that has so long prevailed in this part of the country, or, indeed, of any pestilence, is a matter of extreme difficulty, nor can I pretend to dissipate the obscurity in which the question is involved. The great and sudden changes of temperature to which the inhabitants are exposed (the days being inordinately hot and the nights excessively cold); the heavy dews—which have to be encountered with insufficient clothing—these have all been supposed adequate exciting causes of fever, and with these it is difficult to deal. Easterly winds, also, have been generally traced as a powerful agent in propagating fever, as well as cholera; and a remarkable tendency of the disease to follow the course of rivers has been in more than one instance observed.

The greater number of epidemics which have raged in India can easily be traced to the religious Hindoo festivals and fairs annually held upon the banks of the sacred rivers. I have myself more than once assisted at the great annual gatherings of Hindoo devotees at Bhaira Ghât, on the Nerbudda. The ceremony of purification in the "holy" rivers is strictly enjoined upon every Hindoo, and is the ostensible pretext for holding the fairs. The native Hindoo population of the country, from the summit of the Himalaya Mountains to Cape Comorin, is thus congregated at least once every year at various places, and in masses of from half-a-million to a million of people. These enormous numbers of human beings have no accommodation but the open maidan, or the river banks. I need not say what a seething mass of corruption and disease is here generated and carried over India, not only by the dispersing pilgrims, but by the streams themselves.

The vicinity of a river is, at the best, a dangerous spot in a hot climate. The low sedgy banks, and the miasmatic influence of the sun upon the beds of slime and festering vegetation are bad enough; but when to these fertile causes of disease is added the accumulated refuse left by vast multitudes of human beings, and purposely introduced into the running water, it would be strange indeed if fevers and zymotic diseases were not generated. The causes of fever and similar epidemics throughout India it is, therefore, not difficult to ascertain. In considering the best means for protecting individuals against the attacks of fever and cholera, it is essential to bear in mind the class of persons who have hitherto been most subject to these epidemics. We have seen that these are generally the poor famished and half-clothed children of misery; and from them the disease is propagated amongst Europeans and the better class of natives.

Persons of sober and regular habits avoiding sudden changes of temperature and unnecessary exposure to the miasmatic fogs and vapours have enjoyed a special immunity from the fever. Fatigue, exhaustion, whether arising from debauchery or insufficient nourishment, alternate exposure to the heat of the sun and the chills of the night, must necessarily render persons particularly susceptible of the disease. If the inhabitants of tropical climates would exercise a careful supervision over their domestic arrangements, and keep a strict watch upon the habits of their servants, they would do much to lessen the violence of these epidemics, and might even by this means eradicate them altogether. Free ventilation, scrupulous cleanliness, wholesome food, proper clothing, and abundant fuel are matters which cannot be too strictly attended to. The daily use of warm baths and the wearing of flannel are safeguards against fever, the employment of which should on no account be neglected. Medical theory, as well as practical experience, proves that the too free use of alcoholic stimulants with an insane view of supporting the system in hot climates against the shock of an epidemic is not only useless as a preventive, but is absolutely an exciting cause of the malady. It stands to reason that as stimulants tend to increase the heat of the system and seriously derange the biliary secretions they must of necessity predispose to febrile attacks. The use, perhaps, of sharbat made from Falsa Bihidana and other mild aromatics combined with lemon or rose water may be beneficially employed as a vegetable tonic, and will be found to answer all the purposes which stronger stimulants are supposed to serve, and they are to be found in abundance in all parts of India. Another most important rule of diet is the avoidance of all raw, crude, stale, and indigestible food. I reiterate that the greatest care should always be taken to procure pure, sweet water, and that it should never be used without passing it through a filter.

The lower and poorer classes of natives, who eat bad rice, dahi (coagulated milk), melons, or unripe and rotten mangoes, and who drink indiscriminately from every muddy puddle, fall victims by thousands to the epidemic in consequence of their imprudent conduct. The eminent and experienced physician, Dr. Leith, mentions fifty different measures which have been recommended for the sanitary improvement of the towns, the prevention (as far as may be) of the pollution of the air, and the preservation of the purity of the drinking water. Surely some of these might be put into practice in every part of India.

I lay no claim whatever to medical knowledge, and offer these suggestions, the result of much personal observation and practical experience, with great diffidence, and merely in the hope of calling attention to the best means of preventing the periodical return of those deadly epidemics which devastate India.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

SYED ABDULLAH.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

"This fellow might be in time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognisances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries; is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt?"—Hamlet, Act 5, Scene 1.

SIR,—The Attorney-General has recently pointed out some of the defects in the administration of justice in England, and the Times newspaper has devoted more than one article to the same subject; but it is seldom that we hear of anyone raising his voice against the evils which make our administration of civil justice in India a constantly recurring source of anxiety and misery to the people, and of danger to the stability of the British Government.

If the substantive civil law in England be imperfect, though founded on statutes enacted by Parliament, and on the decisions of judges of the greatest ability, what shall we say of the civil law, in India, which, though nominally founded on the laws and local customs of the Hindoos and Mahomedans, has been twisted and altered in accordance with the fancies and hobbies of successive statesmen, most of whom have displayed conspicuous ignorance of the principles on which the laws and customs both of Hindoos and Mahomedans have been based? The abolition of the law of entail in Oudh, which has been in force for generations past, and the aiding and abetting the alienation of ancestral real property by will or other deed, are instances of ignorance of what is required for the welfare of the agricultural community; our bankruptcy laws have led to the ruin of the credit of many native bankers and merchants.

What can we say of our tinkering and sudden changes of law regarding landed tenures? One statesman is for conferring all rights on Talookdars; another for conferring those very rights on tenants; others advocate a compromise giving some rights to the barons, and some to the village communities; while two distinguished statesmen have argued that after having conferred rights on Talookdars, we are at liberty to interfere with them, if the consequence of our excessive munificence should be a row (see Page 901 of the Blue-book of 1867, Minute dated 14th May, 1866).

The present generation has seen no legislator equal to Jonathan Duncan or Holt Mackenzie. Fifty years after the former had left the Benares Division his name was a household word among the natives, who pointed to his masterly judgments as the charter of their rights.

Nowadays, no sooner has an Act been passed than it is found to require amendment, owing to its being ill-adapted to the manners, customs and feelings of the native community. Public opinion among natives, instead of being brought to bear sometimes on legislation, oozes out after the laws have been passed, and the legislature is thus brought into discredit. It is wonderful to look through the volumes of laws which have been repealed or amended.

Mr. R. H. Elliot, in his book "Experiences of a Planter," pages 188 to 205, has shown how the multiplication of legislative Acts has increased instead of stopping bribery and corruption. The most able of our High Court Judges in India has complained that laws are enacted faster than barristers can learn them. If the Bar cannot learn new laws fast enough, how can the ignorant populace do so? Corrupt Mooktyars have it all their own way; no one would be safe if the maxim "Ignorantia legis non excusat" were to be enforced. Whenever the administration of the law becomes complex and uncertain, the expenses caused by fear of litigation as well as by litigation itself rapidly increase.—Your obedient servant, T.

IRRIGATION AND ITS DANGERS.

The Englishman is inclined to think that there is extreme and imminent danger in irrigation. The stimulus furnished to the plant leads it to take more from the soil than it otherwise would, and the yield is consequently much greater for a time. But the amount of fertilising material deposited in the soil by the artificial water-supply is not equivalent to that which the plant thus stimulated takes from it. The result, unless a remedy is supplied, must be progressive deterioration. By-and-by the produce of the irrigated will fall to the level of that of unirrigated lands, and ultimately the crop will cease to pay the cost of cultivation. This result is, it will be observed, altogether independent of the tendency to cause reh, at least from an economic point of view, though physically it is probably associated with it, the plant withdrawing from the soil an excess of those substances which tended to prevent the chemical separation of the salt. The remedy is doubtless abundant manure. Irrigation, if not to end in making the state of the land worse than before, must be accompanied by manuring. Every crop drawn from the soil by an artificial supply of water, without the application of sufficient animal manure to replace the waste, is an injury to posterity. Where manure is used, we firmly believe that reh will be obviated, and irrigation may go on with the greatest advantage for ever. Where its use cannot be secured, it is a serious question whether irrigation should be encouraged.

DELAYS OF JUSTICE IN MADRAS.

The Madras Times remarks that when a plaintiff in a Civil Suit in any of our Small Cause Courts, or High Court, has consulted with his attorneys, drawn up his plaint (heavily stamped with Court Fees), had it accepted by the Court, and got his order for the appearance of the defendant on a certain date to answer the claim, the summons to the defendant is entrusted for service to a Sheriff's officer, and the process of "catching the hare" begins. Too often, however, it happens that day after day, week after week, slips by, and to all the anxious enquiries of the plaintiff the same unvarying answer is returned. "The Sheriff's officer has not been able to serve the summons on the defendant." Time passes on. Possibly at length, after infinite delay and annoyance, and loss of valuable time to the unfortunate suitor, the summons is served, the parties are confronted before the judgment seat, and all ends well; but we speak within bounds when we say that occasionally the suitor, fairly wearied out, withdraws from the unequal strife, and abandons all hope of legal protection. We appeal to the solicitors and barristers of Madras to say whether the records of their offices do not fully corroborate all we have written: whether their experience does not comprise many such cases as we have indicated, in which suitors have suffered from grievous delay, and even from total failure to serve summons on a defendant. What is the cause of this—there is no use in mincing words—miscarriage of justice? Why is it that our costly and elaborate machinery for the protection of civil rights is too often rendered practically unavailable, or at best available only after long delay, to those who resort to it? There can be but one answer. The weak link is the system now employed for securing the attendance of the debtor. In the Mofussil, the summonses are served by the Court peons, and so far as we can learn the system works well. In England the summonses are served by the plaintiff's attorney. It is naturally his interest that the case should come on for hearing expeditiously, and as is usually the case where men's own interests are concerned, he takes care that the men he employs do their duty. In Madras the summons is served, not by the servants of the court, nor by the plaintiff's attorney, but by the officers of an independent functionary—the sheriff. Men paid monthly to deliver certain papers to certain people, if they can find them, but with no earthly interest in the matter; and practically beyond the power of any effectual pressure to hurry them in their work, practically exempt from any efficient check or supervision to make certain that when out of their master's presence they take the slightest trouble to search for a man who may wish to evade the acceptance of a summons. The result is that the suitors, attorneys, barristers, judges, ay, and even the credit of our administration of justice in the land we have undertaken to govern, are often practically at the mercy of some half-civilised, uneducated native bailiff, whose intelligence, integrity, and energy are considered sufficiently remunerated by the munificent monthly stipend of ten rupees.

NATIVE ASPIRATIONS.

The Madras Times deems it most necessary that those charged with the administration of the country should obtain the assistance of really first-rate natives. How otherwise are they to ascertain the real wants of the country? Personal intercourse between the two races has diminished rather than increased, and with the spurious civilisation of which we have been speaking has arisen a distrust that may lead to bad results. The only class who can give effective expression to their opinions are especially distrusted, as they are nearly all place-hunters, with interests to serve entirely apart from those of the great mass of their countrymen. Under these circumstances, it seems to us that a native member of Government might do excellent service in the way of making his colleagues acquainted with the real wishes and interests of the people. Of course everything would depend upon the selection of the man. It would be absolutely necessary that he should be, not only a man of ability and moral fibre, but undoubtedly loyal towards the British power. We do not doubt that such a man could be found, though if any large number with such a combination of qualities were required, the search might be a difficult one. As one native member of Government would possess only a fifth part of the voting power of the Council, there would be no fear of the native element interfering materially with the policy of Government, and practically he would have only a consultative voice in its decisions. It would be for him to play the part—in all questions in which the European view differed from the native one—of the intelligent minority which can do nothing against the voting power of the majority, but which can compel a fuller and more careful discussion of questions. We do not at present see that anything but good could result from the introduction of such an element into the Government. These arguments apply with perhaps greater force to the native aspiration to have a member in the Board of Revenue. That Board has often more to do than Government itself with questions involving the welfare of the native population; and it seems to us that their decisions would be more likely to be just and expedient if one of their number possessed an intimate personal knowledge of the interests affected. In this case also, care would have to be taken that the native element were sufficiently overbalanced by the European, for assuredly we have no intention that the supremacy of the British influence should be in any degree lost. We need hardly discuss the demand that a native should be appointed to a seat on the bench of the High Court. That demand is already conceded in principle. We expect that the earliest opportunity will see a native judge appointed to the High Court, and we think that the bench will be strengthened by the appointment of such a man as Mutaswamy Iyer, when he has had sufficient judicial experience.

STATION TALK.

AGRA, Aug. 31.—Heavy rain with strong tempestuous breezes have been the meteorological characteristics of the week, which has closed with bright sunshiny, hot sultry weather. Cholera has made its appearance once more amongst the men of the 65th, and I hear the regiment is to be sent out into camp at once. Dengue continues to spread like wildfire; the bank, the treasury, all the colleges, and nearly all the courts have had to close, for dengue attacks impartially judge, plaintiff and defendant, lawyers and witnesses, students and professors. One ceases to wonder at the rapidity with which dengue and other fevers spread in this city, when one views the pools of stagnant putrid water in every street, and at every corner of the city, and I would impress on our municipality with all force and earnestness, the urgent necessity which exists that these sources of malaria should be drained off. All the houses in the city stand high, at a considerable level above the river, and with such a fall it should be an easy matter to effectually drain the city. There are also deserted spots amongst ruins of old houses at the southern end of the city, where vegetation has been permitted to grow rank, which should be cleared and levelled. Till then, and not till then, can we expect to be delivered from these plagues—cholera, dengue, and malarious fever. Owing to the number of hands laid up with this plague of dengue, the Postmaster has issued a circular to residents to send for their own letters to the post-office, as it is difficult to obtain delivery peons who are acquainted with the residents' names and locality to supply the places of those who are now placed hors de combat.—Pioneer Correspondent.

SIMLA, Aug. 27.—Lord Northbrook walked out on the Mall yesterday evening with one companion, and apparently no guards of any sort. His Excellency looked very well after his fatiguing trip to China, and it is possible the amount of pig-skin he wore out on that occasion may have given a relish to the walk. Landslips still continue. An entire range of out-houses gave way last evening, injuring several jampanies and others who were squatted about. A chetah was killed yesterday at the back of Kennedy House, and not a hundred yards from the Mall. The handsome corpse was taken to the cutcherry for interment—and reward. Another animal who seems to be considered equally obnoxious was deported from the station—I mean the British loafer—of whose presence we were so enamoured within the memory of man, say about fifteen years ago. You must excuse this pitiless letter. I had plotted out a number of visits this morning, but was imprisoned by an immense downpour of rain, which lasted without intermission for some hours.

Aug. 28.—We would seem to have been very near losing delightful "Benmore" the other day by a landslip. A tremendous mass of stone and rubbish was hurled down, carrying a stiff stone fence with it, and making room for a torrent of water that threatened to make that pleasant home of the arts a desolation and a thing for passers by to point fingers at. The proprietor was quickly on the spot, and, by borrowing mallies and jampanies from his aristocratic neighbours, quickly made all safe, and the Monday evening concert was as usual a thrilling fact. I scarcely like writing about cholera, it makes some readers shudder and otherwise feel uncomfortable, but it cannot well be allowed to escape a brief notice. In Cashmere the mortality has been very scarce. At Sealkote it has chiefly been confined to the bazars, the troops, thanks to good management and plenty of open air sports, being generally healthy. At Lahore the improvement is gradual but sure. It continues bad at Kussowlee. That most indescribably filthy city, Umritsur, enjoys an inexplicable immunity. The Jullundhur people have at last cheerfully acquiesced in the quarantine arrangements. Nearly all the jails are camped out. Would it not be well to grant free pardon to as many of the prisoners as can be called good conduct men, and whose time may be nearly out? Lastly, Capua itself is in danger. At a village called Kashala, rather a large place, about a thousand yards down the khud by the lower road, four cases of cholera have been reported to-day. Two of them ended fatally. This place is six miles from St. Crofton's Church, four from Peterhoff, and two from the toll bar. Every attention is being paid to its sanitation, and a strong cordon of police prevents all egress. The chief Court is on vacation. Messrs. Goulnois and Campbell are in Simla, Mr. Lindsay, in Cashmere. Mr. Campbell returns to Lahore in October. Mr. Melville, Acting Judge, will, it is believed, revert to his substantive appointment as Commissioner of Jullundhur. The Oorgunj envoy is expected to-morrow. It is desired that his stay may be a very short one, and as an indirect means of attaining that object the Foreign Department have secured him quarters at a native hotel. If he can stand that for more than a week he must be as phlegmatic as a Briton. When speaking of cholera I quite forgot to say that the Maharajah of Puttiala's little son and heir, the Tica Maharaj, I think he is called, was seized on the morning of the 26th, and for some hours the gravest fears were entertained. Dr. Bateson of Umballa was sent for post haste, and a telegram received to-day reports the dear little man out of danger. The good Puttiala has escaped a great grief. Long as this letter is, I cannot finish without noticing a ludicrous, though pardonable, mistake of an Allahabad correspondent, who gravely informs his readers (if he have any) that a body of Kookas had passed through that station under a police escort, from Bengal. What in the name of goodness should guileless brawny Kookas do in that land of chicanery, usury, perjury, and fraud? These men on the contrary are of a class corresponding in nearly all respects with the vulgar gipsy. They are called Kokhamis, and had given much trouble in the Central Provinces, bullying and pilfering in the crowded bazaar and the lonely village alike, with an impunity that could not be allowed to last for ever. Their punishment is a severe one—at least a canny Scot would think it so—they are being taken back forcibly to the land of their birth.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DR. LEITNER.—The Lahore paper regrets to learn that continued ill-health, caused chiefly by overwork, forces Dr. Leitner to proceed for a lengthened period to Europe.

PESHAWAR.—The quarantine camp at Peshawar has been removed to the other side of the general parade-ground, and is now fully half-a-mile distant from the station. A quarantine has been established at Attock, with reference to travellers going to Peshawar.

PRIZES FOR SHOOTING.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has signified his intention of giving three prizes for rifle shooting amongst the British troops serving in the Bengal Presidency. The cavalry prize is a sword, of the value of £10, and those for the infantry a cup and a watch, valued at £70 and £20 respectively.

BIKANIR.—On the 11th August the Maharaja Srooman Sri Doon-gur Singhee Bahadoor was installed in the gudlee of the late Maharaja Srooman Sri Sirdar Singhee Bahadoor, of Bikanir, among the rejoicings of his subjects. The new Maharaja attained the age of nineteen on the day of his installation.

STREET TRAMWAYS IN CALCUTTA.—We see that a large quantity of iron rails for street-tramways are deposited along the whole length of Bau-bazaar-street. Surveys have already been made, and the brick-layers are at work at the head of Lal-bazaar-street with the open surface drain alongside the southern footpath. The tramway will, it is said, be laid alongside this footpath.—Englishman.

CAPTURE OF A SHARK IN THE HOOGHLY.—A young shark, measuring from the nose to the tip of the tail about six feet, was on Friday afternoon (Sept. 6) caught in the river near Fort Point by some fishermen, who obtained a bullock cart and brought it down to the police compound. The fishermen were rewarded with Rs. 5.—Indian Daily News.

EXTRAORDINARY SUPERSTITION.—We see it stated that in consequence of a report current in Rampore Beaulah that a snake 150 hands long had been drowned in the Gangs, and that, the water being thereby poisoned, Government had forbidden all persons to drink or use in any way the water of the river, the people of that town abstained for three days from using Ganges water.

"THE SIMLA COMMITTEE."—The Committee to consider the possibility of reducing the cost of the Simla migration meet again early next week. It will probably be found that the only way of effecting the desired reduction is to reduce the number of officers and clerks with the Government and Army Head Quarters' establishments.—Civil and Military Gazette.

CAWNPORE.—To those interested in the completion of All Souls' Memorial Church at Cawnpore, an appeal for funds has been put forth by Colonel Mowbray Thompson. The appeal of the chaplain of Cawnpore has not been very fruitful in results, the amount collected being much smaller than was anticipated, and subscribed chiefly by relatives of the sufferers.

AJMEER.—It is understood that instructions have been issued to treat Zorawar Singh, during his residence at Ajmere, with all courtesy. He is not to be subjected to any humiliating surveillance, and is to be allowed to live in whatever part of the city he may choose. On the other hand, should it become manifest that Zorawar Singh was renewing any intrigues against his father, it will become necessary for the Agent of the Governor-General in Rajpootna to consider what measures he should adopt in consequence.

CHOLERA IN THE PUNJAB.—Cholera is still at work in the Punjab. At Kohat a fresh outbreak is reported, at the rate of from sixteen to eighteen cases each day. It has made its appearance in Meerut, in consequence of which one troop of the 4th Hussars and the most of the 105th Regiment have moved out into camp. In Goojranwalla, a day or two ago, above twenty cases occurred in one day, of which more than half were fatal.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—The announcement by the Delhi Gazette of the serious illness at Dacca of the Bishop of Calcutta is, we have good reason to hope, incorrect. At any rate letters were received yesterday in Allahabad announcing his lordship's approach. The Bishop is expected to pass through Allahabad on Monday next en route for Jubbulpore. At Jubbulpore his lordship hopes to meet his new chaplain, the Rev. E. Jacob, who was a passenger by the Surat, the last mail steamer.—Pioneer, Sept. 10.

CIVIL.—The Indian Daily News is sorry to learn that Mr. George Graham, officiating magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs, has been advised by his medical adviser to proceed to England without delay, owing to failing health, caused, it is said, by excessive work in having to attend to the supervision of forty divisional police stations, under the new rules passed by the Government of Bengal, besides having to perform the onerous duties of the collectorate.

FOOD FOR HINDOOS.—There is a sort of a vegetable beef-steak (a fungus) which resembles a great red tongue, which protrudes from tree-stems—generally old oaks. When cut, broken, or bruised, it disills a copious red juice like beef gravy. When grilled, it is scarcely to be distinguished from broiled meat. It has a great resemblance to steak or tongue. Would any of the Hindus who are not beef-eaters like to have a taste of these “vegetable beef-steaks?”—Indian Mirror.

THE KUKA EXECUTIONS.—The Simla journal says:—“We understand that Lord Northbrook has called on the Punjab Government for any and all papers in connection with the Kuka executions, if such there be, which have not yet been submitted to the Supreme Government,—from which we are led to the conclusion that his Lordship is determined to make himself fully acquainted with the whole case, and form his own opinion of its merits; with the view, we have no doubt, of satisfying himself that strict and impartial justice has been done.”

DEATH OF MR. A. DICK.—The Indian Daily News announces the death of W. A. T. Dick, Assistant Conservator of Forests, on the 2nd of August, at Deyrah, of cholera, after a few hours illness. The deceased was the third son of General A. Dick, Bengal Army, and had only turned his twenty-eighth year. This promising young man was in Paris during the siege of 1870, and joined the American ambulance, for his services in connection with which he received from the French Government a medal. He leaves a large circle of friends to lament his loss.

RE-ORGANISATION OF THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT OF THE MYSORE COMMISSION.—A contemporary says that a scheme for the re-organisation of the Judicial Staff, and more efficient and satisfactory working of the judicial system, in the Mysore Commission, has just been proposed by Mr. Mangles, the Judicial Commissioner, and recommended by Colonel Meade, the Chief Commissioner, for the sanction of the Government of India; and that, in anticipation of the approval of the Supreme Government, the scheme is likely to be brought into operation as soon as possible.

THE COLLEGE AT AJMEER.—The building of the College at Ajmeer, to which the Princes of Rajpootana subscribed six lacs of rupees, at the suggestion of the late Lord Mayo, and which is to be called the Mayo College, does not make any progress. The sum of Rs. 500 appears to have been spent in quarrying stones, and much disputing has taken place over the designs, whilst Rs. 50,000 have been spent in establishment charges, for which there is nothing to show, but rejected designs and a heap of stones. The P.W.D. disclaim all responsibility, but surely Lord Northbrook will not permit such a work to be neglected? And what provision has been made for the education of the Princes of Rajpootana?

CACHAR NEWS.—The weather is not so favourable in this district as it was some week or two ago. The sun appears now and then, but the general rule is rain, and when the sky clears a little the heat is described as all but unbearable. This season's outturn will in all probability be short of last year's, but the deficiency will be almost, if not quite, made up by the prices Cachar teas are fetching generally. The sales lately have been most satisfactory, one garden in particular averages over one rupee all round, and there is every prospect of its continuing to keep up this high price. There has been a low fever prevalent amongst the planters, for which the best remedy appears to be change of air, as the doctors invariably recommend it.—Bengal Times, Sept. 4.

INDIGO.—As the indigo season draws to a close it becomes evident that it will be hereafter in many districts remembered as a bumper. Lower Bengal has been especially favoured with good manufacturing weather, and is now likely to close with an out-turn of about 43,000 mds., or say fully 50 per cent. higher than that of last year. The three districts of Tirhoot, Chuprah and Chumparun promise to give 50,000 mds., and although the crop of the Benares and Doab districts is still somewhat uncertain, the total result of the season is not likely to be under 1,25,000 mds. We understand that so far there have been no sales “to arrive,” and that the auctions are expected to open at prices considerably under last year's.—Friend of India.

A NEW MISSIONARY.—Another philanthropic lady is coming out to India to take part in the work of native female education. Though neither a Christian nor a Theist, Miss Annette Akroyd is possessed of broad sympathies, and is drawn to this distant country by the highest impulses of benevolence and a sincere regard for the moral and social interests of her Indian sisters. She is not the agent of any society in England, nor is she coming to serve Government or any educational institution in India. She has ample means to meet her requirements, and is perfectly free and unfettered, so as to be able to adopt any line of duty she may propose to herself on her arrival here. We are told that she will leave England in the course of the present month, and will come direct to Calcutta, either in the latter part of October or the beginning of November.—Indian Mirror.

OLD AGE BROUGHT ON BY MISCONDUCT.—A singular and very amusing instance of official obtuseness was brought to our notice a few days ago. A Post-office peon who had been forty-five years in Government service was sent to the civil surgeon of the station for a certificate, preparatory to an application for retirement on pension, and the following certificate was granted:—“Certified that I have examined —, peon of — Post-office, and consider him an old, worn-out man, quite unfit for any active service.” In due time a docket from the office of the Post-Master General reached the civil surgeon, calling his attention to the fact that he had omitted to state “whether the disease was permanent, and whether it had been contracted by his own misconduct.” If Post-Masters General know of any way of curing old age, they should, in the interests of humanity, make it known to a suffering public.—Lucknow Witness.

THE OCTROI DUTIES AND THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—It appears that the officiating secretary to the Financial Commission of the Punjab has published a note on the alleged injury to the traffic on the East Indian Railway by octroi assuming the form of transit duty, contradicting, as far as Delhi is concerned, the statement of the N.W. Provinces Committee that the octroi injures the railway traffic. It is stated that “goods merely passing through Delhi are not taxed. No goods of any kind are subjected to octroi, unless they leave the railway station. No goods going direct to the railway station are taxed. Goods while in the Railway Company's premises are certainly not molested. The railway station at Delhi, although it is within municipal limits, is practically a bonded warehouse. Goods coming from outside and going to the railway station are not subjected to octroi. Goods for places beyond Delhi, which are despatched from the railway station, are not liable to octroi.” So far as Delhi is concerned this seems conclusive enough.

THE VICEREGAL TOUR.—Just before going to press we received a telegram from our Simla correspondent, giving the route as finally arranged to be taken by the Viceroy on his journey from Simla to Bombay and eastward. The route, as officially promulgated, tallies with that intimated by us as being the probable one some two months since, and then published in our columns, but we are now enabled to give it in detail. The Viceroy will leave Simla on October 14th, and hold a durbar at Umballa on the 16th, for the investiture of the Hon. Sir John Strachey and H.H. the Begum of Bhopal with the insignia of K.C.S.I. From Umballa the Viceroy will proceed to Ferozepore, Umritsur, Lahore, and Mooltan, embarking on the Indus about the 26th for Kusmoor, and riding thence to Jacobabad, visiting Shikarpore and Sukkur. From thence he will proceed by river to Kotree, visiting Hyderabad and then proceeding by rail to Kurra-chee, arriving in Bombay about the 14th November. A Supreme Legislative Council will be held here on the 16th, after which Poona and Kirkee will be visited. From the latter place the Viceroy will proceed by rail to Nagpore, and from thence to Jubbulpore by dak, reaching Calcutta on 7th December. H. E. Lord Hobart, Governor of Madras, will visit the Viceroy on his return to Calcutta.—Times of India, Sept. 13.

MILITARY.—The following changes are announced as likely to take place in the Indian brigades of Royal Horse Artillery, consequent upon the late retirements and promotions:—Colonel Fuller to C brigade, v. Smyth; Colonel Gaye to F brigade, v. Money; Colonel Bruce to C brigade, v. Cox; Lieut.-Colonel Cookes to C brigade, v. Wintle; Lieut.-Colonel G. R. Brown to F brigade, v. Bruce; Lieut.-Colonel W. Officers posted to C brigade now in India will await the arrival of that brigade in this country, and those posted to D brigade who are at home will join on the arrival of that brigade in England—such are the orders for our mounted Artillerymen.

Madras.

DENGUE IN MADRAS.—Dengue is said to be at present very hard on the Madras doctors. Quite one-half of them are down with the fever themselves, just at the time when the whole force would find themselves overworked. If this state of things continues, doctors will have to be imported into the Presidency town.

WOMEN SIGNALLERS.—A European signaller in the Telegraph Department of Madras has applied to the authorities to entertain his wife as a signaller also. In a despatch in 1871 the Director-General of Telegraphs remarked that he saw no reason why the wives and grown-up daughters of signallers "should not also be signallers," and the Madras employe in question has not forgotten the remark.

MAIL DELIVERY.—"Besides the aggravation of a late mail," says the Bombay Gazette, "the Madras people have something else to complain of. The packets intended for the Madras Presidency received by the English mail on Saturday morning were despatched to the Boree Bunder station, but were returned, as the train had left a few minutes before! The packets were despatched yesterday (Sunday), but were thus twenty-four hours later than they ought to have been."

BANGALORE.—At Bangalore a heavy fall of rain took place last week, which was the cause of a considerable amount of damage to household and other property. Many substantial buildings suffered injury from the effects of the downpour, while less substantial houses belonging to native inhabitants fell in. The storm, it is believed, is the wind up of the season, and the last of the South-West-Monsoon.—Madras Athenæum, Sept. 11.

JAIL OUTBREAK AT MOULMEIN.—An outbreak has recently occurred in the jail at Moulmein, which terminated disastrously for some of the convicts. It appears that during the outbreak twelve prisoners managed to effect their escape. They were, however, hotly pursued by the police, who were determined, at all risks, to capture them. This they eventually succeeded in doing, but not until a warm resistance had been offered on the part of the convicts, two of whom were shot by the police during the melee, the remaining ten being more or less seriously wounded.

HAIDARABAD.—The following changes and appointments are reported in his Highness the Nizam's service:—Mr. Theodore Cooke, Principal of the Poona College, has been appointed Director of Public Instruction in the Nizam's dominions; Mr. Wilkinson, Principal of the Nizam's Civil Engineering College, has been appointed Secretary to Government in his Highness's Public Works Department; Mr. Haskoll returns to his old post of Superintending Engineer, and a Mr. Parnell has arrived from England as private tutor to the young Nizam, in place of Mr. Willis, deceased.

RAILWAYS.—From a report recently submitted to Government by the Consulting Engineer for railways we learn that the extension of the Great Southern of India Railway to Dindigul, Madura and Tuticorin is making satisfactory progress. The whole extension is divided into a number of districts, on the first eight of which active operations are going on. Tuticorin is the great cotton shipping port of Southern India, and when through railway communication with it is effected its trade and importance will, no doubt, be greatly enhanced.

THE BEACH AT MADRAS.—The Madras Athenæum devotes a lead-column to the appearance of Madras beach, which at the present moment is said to present a deplorable spectacle, although the cyclone took place four months ago. "Ships and fragments of ships still present themselves to the view. The spars and planks of vessels still lie in great heaps on the sand. The black ribs of broken vessels protrude from the white foam of the surf. The whole scene from Royapuram to the Fort is a scene of confusion, disorder, decay, and filth."

PREVALENCE OF PERJURY.—The Madras Mail, alluding to the paragraph lately published containing remarks made by Mr. Justice Bayley on the subject of the prevalence of perjury in India, says it is glad that so high an authority has called attention to the evil. "But in the meanwhile," it writes, "we are strongly of opinion that the prevalence of this crime is due, not so much to defects in the law about the proof and punishment of perjury, as to other causes. One of these is undoubtedly the light estimation in which truth generally is held in this country, and the very small amount of social reprobation which attaches to the liar. And this is a cause which no legislation, and no enforcement of penalties, can remove."

MR. ELLIS.—The Madras Times says—"We are glad to hear that Mr. Ellis is now in a fair way of recovery from his recent sharp attack of illness. He succeeds Mr. Arbuthnot in Council next month, and after that it is not improbable that he will take leave of absence to Europe. It would be very unfortunate for him were he obliged to do so before Mr. Arbuthnot's departure, as he would thereby lose the nomination to Council which he had so long expected. It is understood that Mr. Huddleston succeeds to the Chief Secretaryship, as Mr. Robinson is not likely to seek the post; but how Mr. Huddleston's present appointment of Secretary to Government will be filled up is matter for conjecture. Mr. Carmichael is generally looked upon as the right man for the place; but he seems to have fallen into disfavour with the Government about the time the cyclone report reached that august body."

MYSORE.—An extraordinary letter has been addressed by a Mysore native official, in the columns of the Bangalore Herald, to his fellows in the Mysore Commission. The following paragraph gives the pith of the entire communication:—"Native deputy superintendents, as you are well aware, get over Rs. 1000 a month, while the pay of native assistants ranges from Rs. 300 to 600 a month, and amildars get four times as much as they used to in former days. And why have the Government raised our salaries but to place us above the reach of temptation and make it impossible for us to oppress the common people? Has this, however, produced the effect the Government are so anxious it should? I am sorry to say not in the least. The very fact of that Government giving us enhanced magisterial powers, and the very fact of their placing the Penal Code in our hands to administer it as we will, has given us opportunities of doing the most serious mischief, and I could name many examples, as I have said before, in which native officials of position have most grossly abused their power and are even doing so to this very day, though of course I refrain from naming them individually. I write from what I have known and seen, and, though a native official myself, I aver that in the majority of cases the Government are doing most unwise thing in investing us with such immense power. I ask those of you with a just perception of what is right, whether this is the case or not? Nay, am I not further right when I say that the people earnestly wish that Europeans should rule them in preference to natives? I challenge any native official whatever to deny the truth of this assertion, and I am quite ready to be convinced to the contrary. Let us learn, then, to be honourable, upright, honest and painstaking in the performance of our official duties from those European officers who are in the Mysore Commission, and the good that will then follow will be incalculable. Their high principles their undeviating rectitude, the severe punishments they invariably inflict on those who take bribes and oppress the poor, together with the scorn they show for such meanness and duplicity—all point out to us a bright example we should do our best to follow. Europeans, foreigners, strangers, see how eager they are to protect our interests, to promote our well-being and prosperity. But you, my countrymen, dare you deny it, act from different and most unworthy motives altogether."

STATION TALK.

DEOLALEE, Aug. 31.—This dull station is showing signs of life just now. Both the Barrack and the P.W.D. are busy repairing and getting everything ready for the troops that are expected here from up country and England. There will not be much doing this season, judging from the list published some time ago. How is it the Bombay troops don't have a Camp of Exercise? all the country round Deolalee is well fitted for such a gathering. There are rivers, hills, valleys, and plains on which twenty thousand troops might be exercised, plenty of water, forage, good climate, and on the line of the G.I.P. Railway and the old Bombay road, which is about two miles from the depot barracks. We expect some visitors here next month. As soon as they make their appearance I will let you know who and what they are, and the nature of their business. In my next I will endeavour to give some news on the supplies of this place; for the present, the food supplied to the troops here is not of the quality or which Government pays so well. We are having delightful weather. This is a first-rate place for invalids.

DEOLALEE, Sept. 3.—I promised to give you some particulars regarding the food supplied to the troops at this station. The bread is not at all first sort. It looks heavy, and when broken has a strange musty smell, enough to give one dyspepsia: I hope I am right in spelling this word, as I do not belong to the mystic order of M.D.'s. The beef is wretched, and sometimes diseased. On one occasion, a few days ago, the doctor of the station, when inspecting the meat, found tape-worms deeply imbedded in the muscles of the carcase. He took home some specimens of it, and placed it under a microscope, which revealed this parasite in its different stages. Such is the state of matters here. Had proper supervision been kept, this never would have occurred. The merchants and contractors do just as they like. They supply, and charge what they think fit. The new hospital is steadily progressing, on an excellent site, and when finished it will add to the beauty of the station, but it will be very inconvenient for the invalids, as it is nearly a mile from the railway platform. The bazaar, as it now stands, is a disgrace to a large military station like Deolalee: there have been about a dozen plans made out during these two years or more, and nothing definite has been decided on as to where and when a new piece of ground will be given to these people to build upon. We are having some excellent showers of rain, and the country, for miles around, looks beautiful and green, with healthy cultivation. We must have registered about three inches of rain since Saturday last.

SATTARA, Sept. 2.—The weather is very delightful here. We have had some few cases of fever in the detachment of the 83rd "County Dublin" every day, but we have no sickness to speak of. It has been rumoured that the 83rd stationed here are likely to leave us to go to some bad station because they enjoy good health, and some other regiment is to be sent which has been nine months in a bad station, or where many of them have been ill; but if a station is not good for one regiment, it surely can't be good for another. Would it not be better to do away, if possible, with places that are unhealthy, and send troops to healthy stations? What about Mander Deo? Would not some of the good 83rd do well for that place without taking them away from the Marathi country? They are very highly respected by all who know them, and we hope they will not be moved until they have put in their proper period among us. They get every encouragement to take plenty of exercise here, which must be very conducive to health.

BHOSAWUL, Sept. 2.—We have almost got rid of "cholera," but are now troubled with "fever," which is brought on by so much rank vegetation growing about the station, and the slight showers we have had being dried up by the heat of the sun almost as soon as they fell. We now feel as if we were in a vapour bath, only a great deal more uncomfortable. Fortunately there have been no cases of dengue, but a great number of people are laid up with an eye complaint, which is almost as bad and painful during the time it lasts, about ten or twelve days. The first four or five days are the most painful. The disease seems to start first in the outer corner of the eye, and after a short time the whole eye gets most painful, smarting and scalds as if it had been exposed to a dust-storm. The eyeball becomes bloodred, and then a discharge commences which is attended with great pain, while it is impossible to keep a fixed gaze on any thing for two seconds. The disease is very infectious, and is almost certain to go through a house in which any member has been affected by it. So you see, we are almost as badly off as though we had the more popular malady, dengue.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

PALITANA.—The Bombay Government has decided the suit between the Palitana Chief and his brother, who claimed from him a landed State as his own portion of the legacy left by the late Chief. Palitana wished only to give him a certain annuity, but to this the claimant objected, as being contrary to his natural rights and to the custom observed in Kattiawar. The Chief contended that it would be fatal for the consolidation of his State to give away villages to an indefinite number of claimants, and Government, adopting the same view, have decided in favour of the Chief.

MUSKAT.—A news report from Muskat, dated 28th August, informs us that during the previous fortnight Seyyid Salim bin Thoweynee had been making serious endeavours to renew civil war in Oman. With assistance from the Sheikh Saleh a few hundred men of the Hinawee tribes were got together, and Seyyid Salim moved westward with the avowed intention of marching on Muskat. The movement, however, was signally unsuccessful, and Seyyid Salim, being soon deserted by his followers, returned almost unattended to Bideeyah. His Highness the Sultan moved out to Falaj to cover Muttrah in case of attack, but had returned to Muskat.

HORSE SHOW AT POONAH.—One of the most pleasing events of the season will be the forthcoming grand horse show at Poonah; and much good, in various ways, cannot but result from it. The finest country bred horses on this side of India are those from Kattywar, and not the least interesting feature of the show will be the magnificent stud of Kattywar horses and mares collected by Captain Lowther Nutt, the acting Second Political Agent in that land of Bhayads and Grassias. Horseflesh is nearly as warmly worshipped by the Princes of Kattywar as by Arab chiefs, and Captain Nutt has been firing their enthusiasm so successfully that they are sending him their best animals. In all probability Captain Nutt will be able to secure for the exhibition about twenty splendid specimens of the famous horses of Kattywar.—Times of India.

THE NEW ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL.—Lieutenant Colonel T. M. Harris (late Bombay) is appointed Assistant Adjutant-General of Artillery in the Bombay Presidency, vice Colonel D. G. Anderson, (late Bombay) retired. Colonel Harris entered the service June 11, 1847, and became Lieutenant Colonel August 1, 1872. He served in the Persian Expedition of 1856-57, including the storm and capture of Reshire, surrender of Bushire, and bombardment of Mohumrah (medal with clasp); served in the suppression of the Indian Mutiny, at the siege and capture of Kotah and pursuit, second taking of Chundaree, action of Kotah-keserai and pursuit, taking of Gwalior—when he was mentioned in despatches—bombardment and capture of Pourée, actions of Sindwaho and Kurai, surprise and pursuit of the rebels at Koondrye—where he was severely wounded—(medal with clasp).

JACOBABAD.—Our Jacobabad correspondent informs us that Major Harrison has been ordered to leave Khelat, and has moved three stages from the capital. The Wuzzeer is with him. We are also informed that it is believed that Lord Northbrook will on his cold weather tour visit Jacobabad, with the object of personally seeing to Khelat affairs. Sir William Merewether is expected at Jacobabad about the middle of October, and will meet Lord Northbrook at Kusmore about 5th November. The Commissioner will then accompany the Viceroy on his visit to the Frontier Districts. Some time ago, our Jacobabad correspondent informed us, a small expedition started from Jacobabad, under the command of Captain Humfrey, for Khelat. The troops composing it (a detachment of Jacob's Rifles) marched across the desert in the most intense heat, no less than thirty men having been knocked down by the sun. The object of the expedition was to protect the person of our Resident in Khelat, who has since been recalled. The troops seem to be having a bad time of it, as, with their usual inhospitable ideas, the natives of the place treat our men nightly to a few bullets among their tents, and one man was wounded the night before the last letter left.—Bombay Gazette.

MAYO MEMORIAL.—CIVIL SERVICE FUND.—We (Civil Service Gazette) are informed by Mr. Hawker, the hon. treasurer, that he has received the following subscription since last publication:—General Post-office, Edinburgh, £35. 9s. 6d.

EAST INDIES.—NAVAL.—The service generally will be pleased (says the Army and Navy Gazette) to find that Captain Malcolm, who lost his last command by what is termed on shore "a fluke," has been appointed to the command of H.M.'s corvette Druid, on the East India station, vice Jago, invalidated.

MR. G. FORREST, B.A.—Mr. G. Forrest, B.A., appointed Head Master of the School at Surat, Bombay, will leave this country early in November next. Allowing him to be eminently fit, says the Civil Service Gazette, the son of Captain Forrest, of the Delhi Magazine, had some claim on the Government at home and abroad.

AGRA BANK.—The report of the Agra Bank for the past half-year shows a net profit equal to 8 per cent. per annum, and states that it was intended to divide 5 per cent. per annum, but the company holds £67,500 of Messrs. Gledstan's paper, and, therefore, no dividend is recommended. With this exception the business of the bank is reported to be satisfactorily increasing.

WILL OF THE LATE ARCHDEACON OF CALCUTTA.—The Will and codicil of the Venerable John Henry Pratt, Archdeacon of Calcutta, was proved at the principal registry on Sept. 20th, by the Rev. Josiah Pratt, the brother of the deceased, the executor for England. After payment of his debts and funeral expenses, the testator bequeaths the residue of his property in equal portions between his brother and sisters.

DEATH OF SIR PATRICK MONTGOMERIE, K.C.B.—The decease of this officer took place on the 5th inst., at his residence, 10, Elvaston-place, Queen's-gate. He was born in 1777; entered the Madras Artillery of the East India Company in 1810; served in the Mahratta and Burmese wars; and commanded the Artillery in China in 1840. He received a medal and two clasps for Nagpoor and Ava, and a medal for China. He attained the rank of General in 1868.

ARMY CHAPLAINS.—It is rumoured that the Chaplains' Department of the Army is to be allowed to die out. But (says the United Service Gazette), for our own part, we should be sorry to see the department abolished. There is not a quarter of the globe in which its officers have not worked hard and ably in their good cause; they are not over-paid; and in no community where clergy of all persuasions meet in a common field do they pull so well together as in the Army Chaplains' Department.

THE STAFF COLLEGE.—The following will be the subjects of examination in military history and geography, at the examination for admission to the Staff College, to be held in July, 1873:—1. "The Campaign of 1866 in Bohemia, up to and inclusive of the Battle of Königgratz." Candidates will be expected to have a general knowledge of the geography of the country. 2. "The General Principles of War." Text-books—Jomini, "L'Art de la Guerre;" Hamley, "Operations of War."

MESSRS. LEGGATT AND CO.—At a meeting of the creditors of Messrs. Leggatt and Co., of Bombay and London, held on Monday afternoon, the 30th ult., a resolution was passed to liquidate the affairs of the firm by arrangement, and not in bankruptcy; and Mr. William Hurlbatt (a partner in the firm of Harding, Whinney, and Co.) was appointed trustee. From the statement of affairs submitted to the meeting, it appeared that the stoppage of the house was due entirely to the failure of Messrs. Gledstan and Co., acceptances of that firm for £104,395, which had been covered by consignments by Leggatt and Co., having been dishonoured.

DEATH OF GENERAL COFFIN.—A well known Indian officer, Lieut. Gen. Sir Isaac Campbell Coffin, K.C.S.I., died very suddenly at Blackheath on Oct. 1, at the age of seventy-one. He was the son of the late Admiral F. H. Coffin, and was born in the year 1801. He entered the Madras Army at an early age, and rose to the rank of Major-General in 1857. It will be remembered that during the Indian mutiny he was in command of the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, and also commanded a division of the Madras Army from 1859 to 1864. He was nominated a Knight Commander of the Order of the Star of India in 1866, and had recently attained the rank of Lieutenant-General.

ANGLO-INDIAN TEA COMPANY.—The directors of the Anglo-Indian Tea Company have issued their first annual report. They state that the operations of the year have been satisfactory. Out of the profits they have written £500 off the preliminary expenses and £500 off the goodwill expenses account, and they recommend a dividend for the year ending the 23rd August, 1872, at the rate of 10 per cent., leaving £982. 4s. 9d. to be carried forward for future dividends or contingencies. With the object of extending the business, it has been deemed desirable to increase the company's resources by the issue of 2,000 additional shares of £10 each. These are offered at par to existing shareholders.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £650,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £422,600; to Bombay, £220,000; and to Madras, £7,400. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 12 per cent., and on Bombay at that price about 59 per cent.; above on all Presidencies in full. The average rate on Calcutta was 1s. 10-776d., on Bombay 1s. 10-75d., and on Madras 1s. 10-8d.

FUTURE INDIAN RELIEFS.—The roster of regiments in India for relief, after the 1872-73 changes have been effected, will (the Army and Navy Gazette calculates) be as follows:—105th and 106th Light Infantry, 107th, 108th and 109th Regiments, brought on to the Imperial Establishment in 1862. 96th Regiment, 2nd battalion, 25th Regiment, 36th Regiment, 2nd battalion 19th Regiment, 76th and 55th Regiments, went out in 1863. 1st battalion 11th Regiment, 2nd battalion 12th Regiment, 58th and 45th Regiments, went out in 1864. 41st, 26th and 49th Regiments, went out in 1865. 1st battalion 8th Regiment, 1st battalion 2nd Queen's, 37th Regiment, 1st battalion 3rd Buffs, 2nd battalion 1st Royals, 1st battalion 5th Fusiliers, went out in 1866. The remainder of the new Line regiments will no doubt be relieved year by year, commencing with 1873-74, when it is proposed to withdraw the 105th from Lord Napier's command.

MESSRS. GLEDSTANES AND CO.—In the Bankruptcy Court on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., before Mr. Registrar Brougham, an adjourned application was made for registration of the resolutions passed in the case of Messrs. Gledstan and Co., the well-known East India merchants, that their affairs should be liquidated by arrangement, not in bankruptcy. Mr. Rawlins appeared in support of the application, and read an affidavit setting forth the notices which had been given to certain of the creditors. Messrs. Travers, Smith, and Co. represented the debtors. Mr. Penn (from the Registration Office) pointed out that there were no proceedings under the separate estates. Mr. Rawlins explained that he only asked for registration of the resolutions passed by the joint creditors. No resolutions had been come to with regard to any of the separate estates, in consequence of the non-attendance of a quorum of separate creditors. His honour made an order for registration, subject to a formal report being furnished showing that the proceedings were regular with regard to the separate estates. It is stated that, in consequence of the magnitude of the case, the stamp duty payable on registration is £200, being the maximum amount which can be charged against an estate.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—At an extraordinary meeting on Thursday, the 3rd inst., of the Eastern Telegraph Company, held for the purpose of receiving a report as to the progress of the arrangements for the amalgamation of the Anglo-Mediterranean, Marseilles, Algiers, and Malta, Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta, and British Indian Submarine Telegraph Companies, the Chairman (Sir James Anderson) said there were certain formalities to go through, but the amalgamation was practically accomplished. The receipts still continued to increase over those of the same period of last year. It was proposed in future to hold half-yearly meetings, and to publish traffic receipts every month. This would have been done before, but the directors did not wish it to be known what each particular section of the line to India was doing; now they were one, of course there could be no objection. The different sections of the line continued in perfect order. The next half-yearly meeting would be held in December, and the dividends would be payable quarterly. There was a proposition to duplicate that part of the line from Falmouth to Lisbon, but no further duplication was contemplated nor would be carried out without the consent of the shareholders. The report was adopted. It is also announced that the traffic receipts of the Eastern Telegraph Company for the six months ending 30th September last amounted to £177,366, against £149,050 during the corresponding period of 1871, being an increase of £28,316.

BAGGAGE ON INDIAN TRANSPORT SHIPS.—New regulations as to the baggage, &c., have been promulgated from the War Office, and are to be observed by all officers embarking in Indian ships, whether proceeding alone or in charge of troops. No baggage in excess of the regulated allowance, either by cubic measurement or weight, is to be embarked. The heavy baggage intended for the baggage-room should be labelled in large letters on a white ground, "Baggage-room." This baggage cannot be got at during the whole of the voyage. Baggage intended for present use, baggage-room, should be marked green ground, "Present use, Baggage-room," and can be got at every day between eleven A.M. and noon. This baggage-room is intended only for ladies' baggage. Each officer or lady will be allowed two medium-sized portmanteaux as cabin baggage, which should be marked on a yellow ground, "Cabin." Regulation size for trunks, &c., thirty-six inches long, fifteen inches wide, fourteen inches deep. It is recommended to all officers and ladies on the outward voyage to have their light clothing for use in the Red Sea, and on the homeward voyage their thick clothing, packed in separate boxes labelled with a white label crossed with a green one; these boxes will be stowed near the door of the baggage-room, and will be got up soon after leaving Suez or Port Said. There are other regulations of a minor character, and amongst them one limiting the number of dogs to be carried with officers and troops.

THE KOOKA EXECUTIONS.—To the Editor of the Times.—Sir,—I have only to-day seen in the Times of the 24th ult. the letter of Mr. Cowan, referring to my letter published in the Times some time previously, in which I pointed out the mistake which had been made in attributing to my brother, Mr. Douglas Forsyth, the words "You have acted admirably," in the letter written by him to Mr. Cowan on the 17th of January. Mr. Cowan admits the mistake, but he says that "Mr. William Forsyth was surely cognizant of the cause of the error he points out." I beg to state most positively that I was not cognizant of the cause of the error, and now know it for the first time from Mr. Cowan's own letter. With reference also to my statement that my brother's note was written before he knew that his orders to keep the prisoners for trial had been disobeyed, Mr. Cowan adds that "it is incredible that Mr. William Forsyth should not have been acquainted with the fact" that the note was written by my brother after he had received Mr. Cowan's report of the executions. I beg again to state most positively that I was not acquainted with the fact; and I fully believed, from documents in my possession (not here, but in England), that my brother's note to Mr. Cowan was written before he knew that his orders to keep the prisoners for trial had been disobeyed. I shall feel obliged to you if you will publish this letter, as I should be very sorry to have it supposed by anyone (although I think that those who know me will deem my answer unnecessary) that I had in the slightest degree misrepresented facts so far as I was acquainted with them.—Your obedient servant, WILLIAM FORSYTH.—Naples, Oct. 2.

MILITARY ITEMS.—Major-General W. R. A. Freeman, Madras Infantry, becomes a Lieut.-General, vice Lieut.-Gen. Sir I. Coffin, Madras Infantry deceased. It is said Major-General M'Murdo will shortly retire from his command in India.—The 67th Regiment being about to embark for Burmah, Captain Cardew has been called upon to relinquish his appointment as Brigade-Major at Dublin, and rejoin his corps for duty. Captain Cardew will be relieved on the 1st proximo, on which day his regiment sails from Portsmouth, by Brevet-Major C. K. Johnson, 50th Regiment, who completed a course at the Staff College in December last.—During the year 1873-74, six regiments will leave England, two for the colonies, four for India, and six will be brought home. The regiments to go out to India, so far as we can learn at present, are the 97th, 1st Battalion 20th, 34th, and 57th, and to be brought home from thence, the 105th, 64th, 96th, 2nd Battalion 25th. The new system of linking is to be so arranged that each battalion shall have six years of home service.—Another Paymastership, that of the 61st Foot, has fallen vacant by the transfer of Captain Mylius to the 43rd Foot for duty in India. We doubt (observes the Broad Arrow) if it will be filled up just at present, for, as we some time ago hinted, the War Office appears desirous of seeing how the Paymasters of the new depots centres may serve the necessities of regiments within their districts. Regiments embarking for India and the colonies will, however, continue to have Paymasters as heretofore.—The following staff medical officers who had been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to proceed to India embarked in her Majesty's ship Serapis, at Queenstown on the 5th instant, viz., Staff Assistant-Surgeon O'Donnell, Staff Assistant-Surgeon Swaine, and Staff Assistant-Surgeon Donovan.

NEW EXAMINATION IN "TACTICS."—The following Syllabus of the Examination in the "Elements of Tactics," to be passed by Lieutenants of Cavalry and of Infantry before promotion to the rank of Captain, Indian officers will be interested in:—1. Definition of Tactics. 2. Tactical units of each of the three arms. Principles which regulate their strength. 3. General functions of the three arms:—(a) Infantry—the battalion:—its organisation for tactical purposes; its arm; rate of marching; principles and objects of its formations and evolutions, viz.:—line; column; echelon; square; skirmishing; changes of front; changes of position; space occupied in line, columns, and column of route. (b) Cavalry—the regiment:—its organisation for tactical purposes; rate of marching; space occupied in line, in column of squadrons, and column of route; the charge, and the rules to be observed in charging. (c) Artillery—the battery:—its organisation for tactical purposes; rate of marching; space occupied in line and column of route; projectiles used at various ranges and against different objects. 4. Principles of the employment of the three arms in action:—in commencing the action; in the attack; in the pursuit or retreat. 5. Disposition of the three arms for attack, or defence, according to the above principles. 6. Disposition of the three arms on the line of march:—as an advanced guard; as a main body; as a rear guard. 7. Principles of attack and defence of tactical points, namely, houses; villages; woods; defiles. 8. The passage of streams. 9. The measures by which armies obtain information and security, viz.:—principles of the conduct of reconnaissances; outpost duty. 10. Principles which regulate the organisation of armies for tactical purposes, namely:—the proportion of the three arms; formation of brigades, divisions, and Army corps.

INDIAN ARTILLERY.—The following letter has appeared in the Broad Arrow.—Sir, by the last "Army List" it will be seen that the remaining subalterns of the Bombay Artillery were promoted on the 1st August; since that a captain on that list has retired, and a subaltern of the old Royal List has been promoted to fill the vacancy. This is most unjust, whilst there are twelve subalterns of Bengal and one of Madras all senior to him. There is not the shade of a shadow of reason in promoting one of the old "Royal List," if the senior subaltern in the amalgamated Royal Artillery is not to be promoted, then the man entitled is the senior of the real amalgamated list, whose commission dates April, 1861, or thereabouts, and who, had the amalgamation not taken place, might have been on the Bombay List. The whole question of the treatment of the Indian Artillery since amalgamation might be ventilated. 1. Their lieutenant-colonels were refused employment as inspectors of the Reserve Artillery,—these appointments carried promotion to juniors. 2. C Brigade is sent out to India before B Brigade. 3. When the Indian Government resolved to dispense with some of the Royal Artillery in India the reduction fell entirely on the old Indian Artillery. 4. The scheme for relieving this block in the promotion of the old Royal Artillery list was acted upon some months before that for the Indian Artillery. 5. The latter would have gone far to make amends for past partiality shown to the old Royal Artillery; but the promises of the circular were never fulfilled. The promise was, that for every two vacancies caused directly or indirectly, one promotion would be given; look at the Gazette of the 6th August and see how far this was carried out, especially as regards captain and subaltern, and those subalterns who ought to have been promoted in that Gazette are now superseded by Lieutenant Ireland, promoted to fill a Bombay vacancy. I suggest a circular should be issued by the Horse Guards defining "Amalgamation."—Your obedient servant, F. P.—1st September, 1872.

DEATH OF SIR GEORGE POLLOCK.—The death is announced of the new Constable of the Tower, Field-Marshal Sir George Pollock. The death took place suddenly at Walmer on Sunday. He had been in excellent health and spirits a few days before, and his demise was quite unexpected. Sir George Pollock was brother of the late Sir Frederick Pollock, Bart., Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and was born in London in 1786. Entering the service of the East India Company in 1802, he joined the Bengal Artillery, in which he rose by successive steps, attaining the rank of captain in 1805, of major in 1819, of colonel in 1829, and of general in 1859. Shortly after proceeding to India he joined the army under General S. Wood against the Nepaulese; and having held some staff appointments, he was appointed, in 1821, to the command of the army sent to Burmah under Sir Archibald Campbell, where he gained great credit, and for his services in the Burmese war was made a C.B. In 1841 he was selected to command the armies on the west of the Indus, when, after forcing the Khyber Pass by a series of skilful and brilliant operations, he marched to the relief of Sir Robert Sale at Jellalabad. Having defeated the Afghan troops in three successive encounters, he took Cabul on the 15th of September in that year, effected the release of the prisoners, was joined by General Nott on the 17th of September, and led the army through the formidable passes back to India in October. For these services he was presented with a splendid sword by the Government of India, created a G.C.B., and received the thanks of both Houses of Parliament. In 1843 he was appointed British Envoy at Oude; in 1844 a member of the Supreme Council of India; in 1846 he received the thanks of the Court of Common Council of London for his distinguished services in Afghanistan, and the freedom of the City in a gold box; also the freedom of the Merchant Taylors' Company; in 1847 was voted a pension of £1,000 per annum by the East India Company; received in 1850 a medal for general services, with four clasps for the battle and the siege of Deeg, the Nepal war, and Burmese war; and in 1858 was nominated by the Crown one of the directors of the East India Company, which post he held for two years. Sir George was appointed Hon. Colonel 1st battalion Surrey Rifle Volunteers in 1861; nominated a Grand Commander of the Star of India; gazetted to the brevet rank of Field Marshal in June, 1870; and formally installed as Constable of the Tower of London, in succession to the late Sir John Burgoyne, Dec. 23, 1871. He was created a baronet in March, 1872. Sir George Pollock was twice married—firstly, in 1810, to Miss Frances W. Barclay, and secondly, in 1852, to Henrietta, daughter of the late Mr. George Hyde Wollaston.

THE COST OF INDIAN RAILWAYS.—In a report recently published, and just presented to the India Council by Mr. A. M. Rendel, on the working expenses of the Indian railways (some statistics of which were published in the Mail of the 23rd ult.), attention is called to the anomalous results exhibited in this respect on comparing the accounts of the several lines. Mr. Rendel observes that if one line can carry goods at four-tenths of a penny per ton per mile, it is clear that a penny ought not to be spent on the same work on another line. If one line can carry a passenger a mile for less than two-tenths of a penny, the cost on another ought not to be upwards of four-tenths of a penny. If one line runs its trains at 2s. 9½d. a mile, other lines ought not to spend from 3s. 8d. up to 6s. 11d. per mile. It cannot be said that the cost of carriage must necessarily be less on the lines which have a comparatively large traffic—as, for instance, on the East Indian—than on those which have a small traffic, for the line which is worked most cheaply is the Madras, which has the least traffic of any. In Mr. Rendel's view one principal cause of the high cost of working Indian lines is the insufficient loading of the trains and the consequent unnecessary mileage run. Apart from savings to be effected by the substitution of natives for Europeans in many employments, it would seem, therefore, that the best hope of reducing the cost of CHOLERA BY RAIL.

The Lancet observes that the projected Euphrates Valley Railway has been discussed from various points of view. It has been considered in its political, its commercial, its social, and even in its æsthetic aspects. It would traverse, as Mr. Clement Markham told the British Association for the Advancement of Science at the Brighton meeting, "the most ancient and interesting countries in the world;" and if, as Captain Felix Jones suggested, the railway should pass by way of Kerbela (Meshed Hussein) and Nedjef (Meshed Ali), it would open out to the ordinary tourist the two most interesting and least familiarly known of the cities venerated by Mahomedans of the Shiite sect. We can conceive with what pleased anticipations easy-going every-day tourists, jaded with the experience of European travel, must have listened to the projects of Mr. Clement Markham and Captain Felix Jones. Here was a prospect of new districts brimming with interest, and which knew not Murray, being placed within ready reach of them, and of their being able to feast their eyes upon the gorgeous mosque of Meshed Ali, hardly less sacred to the Shiite Mahomedans than the great mosque at Mecca. We can conceive also that when the discussion at Brighton arising out of the re-awakened interest in the projected Euphrates Valley line became known in the East, something like horror must, in the Levant, have mingled with any notions which might be entertained there of the commercial and social advantages professed to be obtained by the railway; for there is a sanitary aspect of the question which would hold a foremost place in the Levantine mind, and which, if the railway ever passed beyond the stage of project, would probably first enlist the attention of the great European Powers, but which appears altogether to have escaped the notice of the geographers at Brighton. Meshed Hussein and Meshed Ali are probably the most important foster places of cholera in Asia Minor. They are the burial places of Ali, the founder of the Shiite sect, and of Hussein, his second son, the two most venerated saints among the Shiite Mahomedans. To the shrines of Ali and Hussein flock annually, in the month of Moharrem, no less than 60,000 pilgrims from Persia and India, the former bringing with them many hundred corpses, in all stages of decomposition, for interment in the sacred soil of the holy cities. Again and again the congregation of pilgrims in the cities during the pilgrimage has been the occasion of grave outbreaks of cholera, the disease having been introduced there either by the Persian or the Indian pilgrims. Cholera has frequently accompanied the Persian pilgrims in their movements from Persia to Meshed Hussein and Meshed Ali, and been carried by them into the Ottoman dominions. Frequently also the disease, fostered by the unwholesome conditions which prevail in the two sacred cities during the pilgrimage, has attached itself to the pilgrims returning homewards or passing elsewhere, and been by them widely disseminated in the districts they have traversed. In the epidemic which has hardly yet ceased, Southern Europe narrowly escaped invasion from this source; for, during the last year's pilgrimage to Meshed Hussein and Meshed Ali, cholera was rife in the two cities, and the contingent of pilgrims who proceeded to the further pilgrimage at Mecca by the northern route across Arabia carried the disease with them, and introduced it successively into Hayell, in the Jebel Shammar, and Khaiber. From Khaiber the disease was communicated to Medina, and thence it passed to Mecca. Happily, the prevalence of the disease at Mecca did not coincide with the period of the sacrifices, when the greatest accumulation of pilgrims occurs; and to this circumstance, together with the active hygienic measures adopted by the Ottoman Government in the sacred city, the escape of Egypt and of Southern Europe from an extension of the disease similar as to that which occurred in 1865 is mainly due. The danger to the Ottoman Empire and Europe generally, in respect to cholera, from the pilgrimage to Meshed Hussein and Meshed Ali was fully recognised by the International Sanitary Conference in 1866, and the measures of quarantine and of hygiene required to ward off or limit this danger were carefully discussed by the Conference. The Euphrates Valley Railway, by opening a swift and direct communication with the dangerous localities, would expose Europe perhaps to even greater peril from cholera than that arising from the extension of railway communication in Transcaucasia, to which attention has recently been directed, in reference to the existing epidemic in Europe, by Mr. Netten Radcliffe. The consideration here advanced ought not to be regarded as an objection to the establishment of the Euphrates Valley Railway, but it should receive attention from the great Powers of Europe, and particularly from the Ottoman and English Governments, if that project should ever be carried out. For the formation of the railway would permit, on the part of the Ottoman and Persian Governments, and would justify the great Powers of Europe in requiring from them, such a regulation of the pilgrimage to Meshed Ali and Meshed Hussein, and of the sanitary state of the two cities, as would prove a more effectual bar to the development of cholera there, and more protective against its dissemination, than the most carefully devised system of quarantine.

SIR GEORGE POLLOCK.

The Times holds that if a General less prudent and determined than Sir George Pollock had commanded the British forces in the Punjab, the English arms might have been fatally discredited in Northern India, Sir Robert Sale and his gallant companions might have been compelled to surrender at Jellalabad, and the "Army of Vengeance" might never have redressed the balance of English power beyond the Himalayas. At that time the Sikh power was still unbroken, and the effect of a check to the power of England beyond the Khyber would have been most indisputably a fanatical rising against the English in the Punjab. The late Field Marshal's calm, firm, and vigorous policy set aside those possibilities of insurrections and of wars. The forcing of the Khyber Pass, the relief of Jellalabad, the defeat of the Afghans, the capture of Cabul, impressed the Indian imagination with a sense of the indomitable energy of the English. Since that time the Afghans have ceased to be formidable, and the Sikh wars might have had a very different issue if Sir George Pollock had turned aside from his task of relieving General Sale, or had failed in accomplishing it. The death of such a man as Sir George Pollock should not, therefore, pass without notice. His life was a link between the old order and the new, between the period when England held her own in India solely by the point of her sword and the modern phase of polity in which she governs mainly by evenhanded justice. But for Sir George Pollock and men like him, we should never have had the opportunity of testing and carrying out this modern system of Anglo-Indian Government. If the Afghans had succeeded in inflicting upon us an unrepaired humiliation, if we had never passed the Khyber as conquerors, if we had succumbed in North Western India to the violence and fanaticisms of the Native Powers, we should have been compelled to face the ordeal of the mutiny with vastly inferior forces to those which we gathered around us in 1857. We should, if we had turned back defeated from Afghanistan, have been obliged to endeavour to temporize with the Sikhs instead of subduing them, and we should very probably have failed. The struggle which resulted in our acquisition of the Punjab would have been fought out under far less favourable circumstances, and perhaps our army would have even been driven back discredited and vanquished into Bengal. In such an event would the population and the native troops of Bengal have held to their allegiance? Is it at least possible that they would not have done so, but that they would have thrown off, as some of them did a few years later, every vestige of loyalty and have rushed into open and savage rebellion? The English power in India was never so weak, the English fame was never so low. If the revolt of 1857 had happened ten or twelve years before, the whole course of Anglo-Indian history might have been changed; and it is in great part due to Sir George Pollock's coolness and persistence that the revolt of 1857 was not possible a decade earlier. The late Constable of the Tower was one of an illustrious fraternity, but the legal and scientific learning of his distinguished brother, the late Chief Baron, will hardly be remembered so long as the exploits of the gallant soldier who carried the English flag in triumph to the capital of Afghanistan, and taught the unruly tribes of Central Asia how far the arm of England could reach.

PRINCIPAL—MR. ROBERT CRASKE.

PROSPECTUS.

Mr. CRASKE desires to receive Boys at an early age—as soon as they can read well—in order that he may have charge of their Education from the very commencement of their studies.

Great care is taken that the elementary subjects are first thoroughly mastered, and that each Boy writes a good legible hand.

The next two or three years are devoted to Classical* and Mathematical work; and Mr. CRASKE is confident that the best of his Boys will be found able, at the age of Thirteen, to compete successfully for the various Scholarships now open to competition at Eton, Harrow, Winchester, and other great Public Schools.

The Classical and English Department is under the direction of AUSTIN R. WHITEWAY, Esq., Graduate in Classical Honours of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Mr. CRASKE himself takes charge of Arithmetic, Euclid, Algebra, and the higher Mathematics. Each Boy, in these subjects, is under his own personal instruction.

The French and German Languages are taught by competent Masters.

TERMS:

For each Boarder ... 60 Guineas.
Those who remain after Thirteen Years of Age ... 80 Guineas.
Day Boys and Weekly Boarders by Special Agreement.

These Terms include Drawing and Drilling. The charge for Laundress is also included. The only extra subject is German, the charge for which is Two Guineas per Quarter.

Mr. CRASKE considers it an essential part of a Boy's Education that he should be taught to Swim. He has, therefore, constructed a Bath twenty-five feet in length, with warming apparatus, to carry out this object effectually.

There are three Vacations in the year—a fortnight at Easter, seven weeks at Midsummer, and five weeks at Christmas.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

For those who faintly remember the old times and shudder at the recollection of agonies needlessly endured by their ancestors, these remedies present a cause for sincere and lasting gratification. Sores, skin diseases, contraction of the sinews through rheumatism or violence, deformed and painful joints, bad legs, &c., which had previously resisted every kind of treatment, have over and over again been cured by Holloway's remarkable remedies. The most signal proofs of the efficiency of his Ointment and Pills have been kindly sent to the Professor from all parts of the world, with the expressed hope that such testimony may induce other sufferers to try means which are represented to have well nigh worked miracles.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 12, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—“Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed.”

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—“Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not ‘supply a want and fill a place.’”

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—“So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases.”

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words “Dr. J. Collis Browne” on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES & COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA,

As Originally Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, M.A., M.D., F.R.A.S.,

Reporter on the Products of India.

Folio, half-morocco, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

This work—by affording a Key to the Fashions of the People, and to the Cotton, Silk, and Wool Textiles in actual use in India—is of special interest to Manufacturers, Merchants, and Agents; as also to the student and lover of ornamental art.

“We congratulate Dr. Forbes Watson on having produced so useful and so practical a work, and on having diffused knowledge upon all material points connected with the clothing of the people of India, which heretofore had been unobtainable. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costume and portion of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere description. The colours, too, of the various fabrics are given from the articles themselves, and we would in particular invite attention to the plates at page 119, all or most being figures of respectable Mohammedans in Upper India, in rich dresses, as conveying excellent impressions of colour and effect in Native Indian costume.”—Times.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, September 20; Agra and Madras, September 18; Calcutta, September 17.

THE Bombay papers give further details in correction of previous announcements regarding Lord Northbrook's intended tour. The first part of the programme has been revised, on account, it is thought, of the prevalence of cholera in Upper India. There will be no grand Darbar at Ambála; but the Viceroy, leaving Simla on the 14th October, will proceed at once to Amritsar and Lahore, taking Ferozpúr on his way down to Multán, where he will hold a levée and Darbar after his meeting with the Commander-in-Chief. The rest of the programme remains unaltered, except that the grand Darbar and Investiture originally fixed for Ambála will take place at Bombay on the 16th November. After a few weeks' stay in Calcutta, the Viceroy will probably meet Sir W. Muir at Agra and hold a Darbar there some time in January next.

At the meeting of the Viceroy's Legislative Council on the 12th September, Mr. Hobhouse's Bill to amend the law concerning the recovery of rent as laid down in the Bengal Rent Act of 1859, was passed. Mr. Egerton's Bill to amend the existing rules for the appointment of Municipal Committees in the Punjab was referred to a Select Committee. Several other measures having been advanced a stage, the Council adjourned to Sept. 26.

According to the Madras papers, Lord Hobart was to leave Utakamand for Madras about the middle of this month. It is said that his plan of a tour through the Presidency has for the present been postponed.

Another rumour gives out that Lord Napier is anxious to make the Central Provinces over to the Bombay Army, and to reserve the Southern Maráha country for the Madras troops. Will his Lordship also press upon the Government the costly absurdity of keeping up three Commanders-in-Chief with their establishments in India? One would surely be enough for the whole Peninsula. If two are needed, let us have two armies, one for each side of the Narbadda.

THE Bombay Municipal Bill is being discussed in Council clause by clause; but the weight of the Government seems to overbear all serious resistance. According to the Times of India the proposed measure "is most cordially detested by all ranks and classes of the people. It has not a single friend in the city, saving the member of Council to whom it owes its paternity. The Bench of Justices, at a special meeting called to consider the Bill, condemned it unanimously. The Bombay Association has petitioned against it. The Chamber of Commerce has protested against one of its clauses imposing a transit duty on cotton. And the general feeling seems to be that if the Bill becomes law, the people will decline to serve under it." It is feared that the Bill will have become law before next January, unless some higher power intervenes. Meanwhile the ratepayers of Bombay are about to hold a large public meeting, with a view to get up a petition praying the Viceroy to veto the obnoxious measure.

WE regret to hear that cholera has broken out both at Lucknow and Faizabad. Two medical officers have been despatched from Allahabad to Lucknow in consequence.

THE Indigo crop in Bengal has been most plentiful. In Kemaon it is reckoned that the yield of tea for this season will be half as large again as it was last year. Throughout the country indeed the crops for the season generally promise well, except in Upper Sind, where floods and locusts have done harm, in some parts of the Dakhan, Bombay, and Bengal, where more rain was wanted, and in Oudh and part of the Central Provinces, which have had too much rain. The locusts have slightly injured the crops in Rajputana. We may note by the way a tremendous rainfall at Bombay of eleven inches in seven hours. More than seven inches fell between 10 p.m. and midnight of the 12th September.

MR. ROBERT HARDIE has succeeded Mr. Dickson as Secretary and Treasurer to the Bank of Bengal.

DR. FAIRWEATHER, the Sanitary Commissioner of the Punjab, is on a tour of inspection to the places attacked by cholera in the Punjab. He is about to proceed to Peshawur and Kohat.

WE are glad to hear that Government has decided on constructing a road from Cachar through the Lushai country to Chittagong; also that no more two-storied barracks are to be erected at Mhow or any other station in India.

In spite of loud complaints from many quarters touching the supposed decay of trade in Calcutta, the total tonnage of the ships that came into port last year greatly exceeded that of any former year. In 1861-62 there were 89 steamers and 808 sailing-ships that arrived off Calcutta, with an aggregate tonnage of 668,311 tons. In 1864-65 the aggregate tonnage of 187 steamers and 1,019 sailing-ships amounted to 997,756 tons. This was the largest aggregate for any year until the last, when 300 steamers and 655 sailing-ships entered the port, with an aggregate tonnage of 1,121,185. Of the steamers that reached Calcutta the year before last 51 came through the Suez Canal, their total tonnage being 79,874, or 1,698 tons apiece. Last year the number that passed through the Canal rose to 87, whose aggregate tonnage came to 156,583, or 1,799 tons per vessel.

THE results of the latest Indian Census, the first indeed which fairly deserves to be called a Census, will enable Englishmen to realise the enormous numbers of the people whom a century of conquest has added to our rule in the East. It has long been generally supposed that Bengal and its outlying provinces contained about forty millions of inhabitants, a population equal to that of the new German Empire. But the late census seems to have established the fact that Mr. George Campbell's rule embraces at least sixty-six millions of native subjects; or not much less than the whole population of the Russian Empire. In particular districts the difference between former estimates and the present returns is very great. According to the Blue-book for 1865 Midnapur for instance was supposed to contain fewer than 700,000 souls. It is now found to contain a population of two and a-half millions. The 24-Pergunnahs, including Calcutta, were then set down at 701,182 souls. They are now rated at two millions. Jessore and Naddia were then supposed to number respectively 381,744 and 298,376 inhabitants, while the late census fixes the numbers at 2,000,000 and 1,800,000. These latest estimates seem to bear out the correctness of those taken just seventy years ago, when our district officers reckoned the population of the 24-Pergunnahs at 1,625,000, and that of Midnapur at a million and a-half. For the perfect accuracy of the late Census it is of course impossible to vouch, in view of the many known difficulties in the way of accurate returns for most parts of the country; but the census was taken everywhere with the utmost possible care, and for all practical purposes the results may be deemed fairly trustworthy. When the report which Mr. Beverley is drawing up from the mass of materials thus carefully gathered shall have been completed, a mine of new and valuable information will be laid open to the public. Meanwhile the existence of these vast numbers in one Indian province need not surprise us, when we consider the circumstances under which the people of Bengal have been free to increase and multiply during the last hundred years. In a country where everybody marries young, where life can be supported on next to nothing in the shape of food and money, where the climate and the national customs are equally favourable to the existence and propagation of the race, where young children thrive as easily as weeds, and no wars or internal troubles keep down the population, it is easy, in spite of Orissa famines and Bardwan fevers, to account for the figures which the late census brings so authoritatively under our notice.

THE census returns for Calcutta show a population of 447,600 souls, of whom only 147,744 are females, or about one female to every two males. The disproportion is least among Hindus and Christians; the former numbering 189,422 males to 101,722 females, the latter 12,917 to 8,439. Of the Mohammedans on the other hand there are 96,260 males to only 36,871 females, or about one female to two-and-two-thirds males. The rest of the population is made up of 896 Buddhists and rather more than a thousand Jews, Armenians, Parsees, and so forth. Of Hindu males who can read and write the proportion is about one to three; of Mohammedan males only one in seven. Of females able to read and write the proportion among the Hindus is one in 23; among the Mussulmans one in 41. If these figures be near the mark, it is evident that the Hindus in Bengal have a keener thirst for knowledge, from whatever cause arising, than the followers of the Prophet.

OUR correspondent "Delta" complains with some reason of the want of trustworthy and regular reports on the progress of Indian irrigation works. On a subject at least as important as that of Indian railways, it is a pity that inquiring readers should be kept comparatively in the dark. At the same time we cannot agree with Delta's assumption that the needful information has been withheld owing to the fact that the works in question have proved "utter failures." That the Ganges Canal for instance did nothing to prevent the famine of 1860, may be a true statement of a literal fact. But Colonel Chesney, in his evidence before the Finance Committee, declares that the Canal was not really completed even in 1860, nor did it begin its work of irrigation before 1858, although it was formally opened three years earlier. Not till 1861 did it first begin to "pay a sensible revenue." It is a mistake at any rate to suppose that it failed to alleviate the famine of 1860, for one well-known advantage derived that year from the Canal was the wide extent of country, more than a million acres, which it saved from the terrible results of drought. As a pecuniary investment, the Canal may not yet have covered all the expenses of its construction; but already it pays a net revenue of $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., after all deductions for yearly charges, and more than once it has saved the Government from having to make large remissions of land-revenue on account of bad seasons. The two canals from the Jumna are at this moment yielding a net return of 17 or 18 per cent. on the capital outlay. These canals, which have been nearly forty years in working order, paid 5 per cent. almost from the beginning, so that they can now be regarded as failures. The Punjab canals already return a revenue of nearly £200,000, an amount which is likely to be very much increased, when the means of thoroughly irrigating the barren tracts of the Manjha have been fully supplied. In the course of a few years, says Sir R. Montgomery, an enormous breadth of country in the Punjab will be irrigated. It is fair also to assume that such irrigation will add largely to the land-revenue in future assessments. Of the Orissa canals it is yet too early to pronounce a positive opinion; but Mr. Hunter, in his work on Orissa, shows that even the unfinished works lately purchased from a private company afford "a four times better safeguard against famine in Orissa than all the costly efforts of Government after the scarcity has once set in." Some of the Orissa canals moreover will form cheap roads between Bengal and Orissa, tapping the river systems of both provinces, and thus making up for the difficulty of throwing food into Orissa in times of dearth by way of the sea-coast. With regard again to the irrigation works in Madras, not only have they yielded very large returns in water rent, but, according to Colonel Chesney, they have caused an immense increase in the land revenue of the province. He considers them indeed the most remunerative works which exist in India, producing "very great results with a very small expenditure." One special benefit may anyhow be claimed for them; they have already made famines impossible in the districts which they water. It must also be remembered that the canals in Upper India have enormously increased the cultivation of irrigated crops, such as sugar-cane, besides encouraging the growth and facilitating the export of cotton thence to Calcutta.

ENGLISH journalists are not expected to know much about Indian history or geography; and so, when one of them talks of Sir G. Pollock as having served under both Lake and Wellesley—not the Marquis—in the same campaign, and another misdates by two years the Nepalese War, we have no right to be surprised. Dates are always tiresome things to remember, and few readers of a large daily paper were perhaps aware that Lake and Wellesley were fighting in widely different parts of India. But a weekly contemporary which furnishes its readers mainly with Indian news might surely have remembered that Jalandhar was not exactly Jellalabad, when it referred to Pollock's "triumphant release of Sir Robert Sale and the British garrison at Jalandhar." We were willing at first to assume in this case a clerical error, a mere slip of the pen, such as the most careful writer may sometimes commit. But it sounds odd to read a few lines further on how "Jalandhar was relieved, the Afghans were subdued," &c., as if Jalandhar were really somewhere in Afghanistan, and not in the Punjab. There is something hazy also in the reference to "the eminent services fifty years ago of a few generals of whom Sir George Pollock was the principal living type." To what campaign or campaigns does our contemporary refer? Sir George appears to have seen no fighting between 1815 and 1824, and India was virtually won by Lake and Wellesley ten years before the earlier date.

SIR GEORGE POLLOCK's death appears to have been very sudden in spite of his great age. Not many days before that event he was well enough, we believe, to attend a wedding, and up to the time of his leaving home for Walmer he gave no signs of failing health and very few of failing strength, mental or bodily. On the very last morning of his life he got up at six o'clock to light his own fire, according to his wont, but was found an hour or two later breathing heavily in his chair. His funeral is to take place at Westminster Abbey, and his friends are invited to meet for that purpose at noon exactly on Wednesday next, at the Westminster Palace Hotel. It is hoped that military officers will all attend in uniform, if they can do so conveniently. That will at least ensure the success of the ceremony as a spectacle.

THE writer of an article in the British Quarterly dwells with undoubted justice on "the long list of splendid services done by our Indian Politicals, from the days of Wellesley, Munro, and Malcolm, to those of Edwardes, Nicholson, Legrand Jacob, and Willoughby Osborne." Few persons, we think, will differ much from his estimate of the part played by such men as Macgregor at Jellalabad, Leech at Khelat-i-Gilzai, or Clerk, Mackeson and Lawrence in the Punjab. We may even admit with the writer and Sir H. Edwardes that Nott at Kandahar owed much to Major, now Sir Henry Rawlinson. If our information however be quite correct, no part of the last-named debt was connected with Nott's advance on Kabul. For that bold move the hero of Kandahar was alone responsible, undertaken as it was in defiance of the strongly expressed opinions of his political adviser. Nott was never the man to take counsel of others in respect of things military; and, happily for India, no general of his day was better qualified to dispense with such counsel under the most trying circumstances. In this very instance the issue proved that he knew his own business better even than an officer of Rawlinson's undoubted worth.

THE writer of the same article asserts, we believe with truth, that it was not Lord Gough, but Sir Colin Campbell, who on the evening after Chilianwalla proposed to withdraw our troops five or six miles from the field they had so hardly won. The question who contested the proposal, he is for deciding in favour of Lord Gough, while Sir Henry Lawrence's biographers give the credit of the resistance to Sir Henry himself. We are inclined to believe that both are wrong to a certain extent. Sir Colin's chief opponent on that occasion was Sir Walter Gilbert, who commanded the infantry of the right division, and who specially urged the need of holding the ground already won, in order to protect the wounded and secure the captured guns. Unfortunately the army fell back far enough to enable the Sikhs to cut up the wounded and carry off most of their guns.

WE are sorry to see that the newly promoted Majors of Artillery and Engineers in India are not to receive the full benefit of their late promotion. According to a General Order of August 15, their Indian pay and allowances will be "the exact amount now drawn by first captains of those corps," with the addition of horse allowance according to existing rules. The same rates are laid down for Ordnance Corps Majors on Staff employ. In other words, while a Major of Infantry draws about Rs. 819 a month, a Major of Artillery is to get no more than Rs. 463 a month if he belongs to a Garrison Brigade, or Rs. 523 if he belongs to a Field Brigade. If he also happens to command a battery, he may screw out of his contracts about Rs. 150 a month besides. If this is not very hard lines for officers of the scientific corps, our notions of the difference between justice and injustice need much revising.

THE following items of news have just come to hand in a Times telegram:—

The Camp of Exercise is postponed until the 1st January, in consequence of cholera at Peshawar.

There has been a sharp outbreak of cholera among the sailors in Calcutta. Elsewhere the disease continues to subside.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has announced a new scheme for imposing vernacular education on the municipalities, the Government assigning £40,000 for the purpose, the sum to be expended within two years in graduated amounts. Mr. Campbell expects by this plan to establish 7,000 schools.

The Bengal Municipalities Bill, now under consideration of the Viceroy, is strongly opposed by the natives.

The Khan of Khelat has submitted to the Government of India.

INDIAN TAXATION.

MR. GRANT DUFF's speech on the Indian Budget for the current year has given birth to a good deal of sharp criticism from the Indian press. Its tone on the one hand towards Professor Fawcett, and its several statements and deductions on the other with regard to India's financial and general prospects, have been unsparingly condemned by one journal after another. It has in short been nearly pulled to pieces by critics of the most opposite creeds and colours. Mr. Fawcett's speech on the other hand has been hailed with general approval as an honest effort to understand and bring out the weak points of our rule in India. On the whole it must be admitted that much of the criticism was fairly provoked by the character of the speech itself as well as the personal bearing of the speaker. Nothing for instance could have been more misleading than to argue that India could not be discontented because she is not now taxed so heavily as under the Moghals, or that the Income-tax has ceased to be widely unpopular since the rate was lowered to one per cent. On such patent sophistries the sharp eyes of Indian journalists would naturally fasten. Any one of average intellect or knowledge of the world must know that the incidence and the modes of raising public taxation are of far more significance than the actual amount raised; also that no foreign government can venture to tax its subjects so heavily or undiscerningly as a native one. Neither could any impartial student of Indian opinion have failed to see that the outcry against the Income-tax came from all quarters and classes, was amply warranted by known facts and likelihoods, and has not ceased with the reduction of the rate. In plain truth it is hated throughout India as a source of untold oppression as well as an impost foreign to all native usages and feelings. The mere fact of its reduction from $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on incomes of Rs. 500 and upwards to one per cent. on incomes of Rs. 1,000 has failed to lessen the ill-will caused by the continuance of an impost which was understood to have been levied once in a way for a quite exceptional purpose.

Mr. Grant Duff's notion that the alleged approval of the tax by one particular native paper argued its general approval by the native public seems to have been founded on a double fallacy. In the first place, it is absurd to infer the drift of native opinion from any one journal, even of the high character of the Shom Prokash; no native journal having a circulation wide enough to justify our accepting it as a genuine mouth-piece of popular feeling. In the next place, it appears that no such opinion was ever expressed by the Shom Prokash. On the contrary, its editor has indignantly denied the flattering impeachment for which Sir R. Temple was first responsible. Sir Richard's error consisted in confounding the Shom Prokash with a much smaller newspaper, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, the only native journal on the Bengal side which had anything to say in favour of the tax. The mistake was pointed out at the time in the former journal; but Sir Richard seems to have let it pass uncorrected, and Mr. Grant Duff can hardly perhaps be blamed for knowing nothing about the correction. On another point however, the Under-Secretary for State seems to have been less excusable. For his own purposes it may have been a happy thought to ascribe to Lord Mayo a change of opinion consequent on the reduction of the income-tax. But we have very good reason to believe that no such change ever really took place. "There are men living," says the Englishman, "who could give the most unqualified contradiction to this conclusion from personal knowledge of Lord Mayo's latest views on this subject." To argue indeed that his opinions on this point had chopped round on so small a provocation as a mere change in the rate and incidence of the tax, was to pay a sorry compliment to his good sense and breadth of view. His reasons for disliking the tax were reasons which would have equal weight whether the tax was rated at one per cent. or three. From other official sources moreover, notably from Sir W. Muir's Minute, there was ample evidence that the tax itself was utterly obnoxious to the mass of our native subjects.

THE BATTLE OF THE GAUGES.

SOME time ago we drew attention to Mr. Andrew's important pamphlet on the evils of a break of gauge in India. Another powerful exponent of those evils has risen up in Lieut. Colonel Kennedy, Consulting Engineer to the Bombay and Baroda Line. It is to be hoped that these repeated protests on the part of experienced engineers and men of business in both countries may yet avert the mischief involved in the adoption by the Indian Government of a gauge which may answer well enough in the neighbourhood of Festiniog, but which seems wholly unsuited to the requirements of Indian trade or even of Indian soldiering. According to Colonel Kennedy the question of fixing a standard gauge for any country must be determined mainly by the character of the goods which the railways of that country may have to carry. In Lord Dalhousie's time the Indian gauge of five feet and a-half was fixed upon only after careful consideration of "the relative bulk and weight of each of the characteristic classes of Indian produce." Now it appears from the traffic of the last two years on the Bombay and Baroda Line that the produce carried on that line ranged from five to 224 cubic feet of bulk per ton of weight, showing an average of seventy-five cubic feet in 1870 and seventy-eight cubic feet in 1871. This would give an average space of 640 cubic feet for the storage of eight tons in an ordinary waggon on the old standard gauge, with a height of load not more than five feet above the platform, and the centre of gravity placed at five feet above the rails.

If these calculations be correct, Colonel Kennedy may well ask how an eight-ton load of half-pressed Indian cotton measuring 1,488 cubic feet, or eight tons of Australian wool measuring 1,120 cubic feet, are to be built up to a height of twenty or thirty feet on a little waggon with three feet only between the wheels, and therefore with one half of its proper stability. If we try to avoid the difficulty by making the waggon floors extend to any great distance outside the wheels, we are only landed in a new danger, consequent on ignoring the fearful effects of "centrifugal action with rapid motion on quick curves." We approach in fact the principle of the bicycle, which none but very bold speculators would think of applying to railway cars. Already has the lateral projection of loads beyond the rails been carried so far even with the present gauge, that many a railway accident can be traced thereto. It is a mistake also to assume the greater economy of the metre gauge, which involves among other things the necessity of double tracks instead of single. The cost per mile of a double track on the narrow gauge would be about 66 per cent. of the cost of a single line of rails on the standard gauge, while the making of a single track only on the narrow gauge would be "simply chimerical" in any country which is or may become populous. Moreover, while the broad gauge line could easily be doubled at need, the narrow-gauge line would have to be quadrupled for the same purpose. Even a single line on the narrow gauge, where there is any traffic, would be more costly than one on the broad gauge, from the great number of sidings required on the one as compared with the other.

In considering the cost of a broad-gauge line, we must not take that of existing Indian railways as a standard of comparison. That it is quite possible to make such a line in future, under right conditions, for £5,000 to £7,000 a mile, exclusive of very large bridges, has been proved not only in England and America, but even in India, where the first section of the Sabarmatti and Wadwan line on the broad gauge was begun in November, 1870, and opened for traffic in May of the following year, at an average cost of £5,500 per mile. Would it be possible to construct a metre-gauge line in any part of India for less?

We note by the way that even Mr. Molesworth, Consulting Engineer to the Government, in his report on the State Railways, admits that the broader gauge "has the advantage in light, bulky agricultural produce," that is in the great staples of Indian industry; and that this superiority has been shown in "the attempts on the guaranteed lines to enlarge their waggons and increase their wheel bases, so as to take the maximum load that the axles can bear without injury." At the same time he contends that the narrow gauge will suffice to carry almost everything, including artillery, siege guns, and military equipment. It seems however by his own confession that this can only be attained by restricting the speed to fifteen miles an hour; a condition hardly suited to military requirements in time of war. By his own showing too a railway truck eleven feet wide must be far better adapted for every purpose than one of six feet and a-half in width, to say nothing of the far greater speed at which the former may travel. Mr. Molesworth is also fully alive to the serious evils of a break of gauge, and deems it a thing to be avoided if possible, although it may be less of an evil than no railway at all.

Instead of branch lines on the narrow gauge, Colonel Kennedy would construct "well graded ordinary roads, branching from judiciously selected stations on the existing trunk-lines of railway," at an outside cost of £300 per mile. These lines should be laid out with a special view to adapting them hereafter for a broad-gauge railway; the driving and carrying power being meanwhile furnished by Thompson's traction engines and trucks, at a total estimated cost of £20,900 for road-making and carriage-stock over a length of forty miles, or about £522 a mile. For such a purpose he would utilise the outside embankments of irrigation canals. When the traffic on those roads had reached a certain stage of development, it would be easy to convert them into railways without any sacrifice of the original cost for making them; while the traction engines with their trains could be set at work in fresh districts.

IRRIGATION IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Public attention has of late been directed to the irrigation works constructed in India, and letters have appeared in some of the leading papers inquiring why periodical reports on their progress and results are not published, as in the case of Indian railways. Considering the importance of the subject, and the vast sums of public money which have been spent on the works in question, the public certainly have a right to know what their results have been; and that such information has been withheld must be ascribed probably to the fact that the works have proved utter failures.

The principal irrigation work in India is the Ganges Canal, which was commenced in 1842, opened in 1855, and was destined, it was said, to prevent famines in the adjacent country. This very desirable object, however, has not been attained, for those provinces were desolated by dreadful famines in 1860, and again in 1869, when the camp, which was being assembled in the latter year, near Agra, in honour of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh's visit to India, had to be broken up, in consequence of the scarcity of food and the distressed condition of the people, who were dying in hundreds from starvation.

Owing to defects in the construction of the Ganges Canal, it is almost useless for navigation, and its utility for purposes of irrigation is likewise very limited, as may be seen from the extent of its earnings, the total amount of which, after deducting charges, has fallen considerably short of the interest on the capital sunk in its construction. It has sometimes been urged in favour of the undertaking that it enabled the Government to raise a larger revenue from the adjacent land than it could otherwise have done, as irrigated fields are taxed at an increased rate; but it must be remembered that the country traversed by the Ganges Canal was previously irrigated by wells at the expense of the cultivators, and already taxed, therefore, as irrigated lands.

The other works in the North-Western Provinces constructed by the British Government have turned out ruinous to a greater extent still than the Ganges Canal, several of them having failed to earn enough for covering even their working expenses.

In the Madras Presidency, the Godavery works, after having cost about three times the amount of the estimate on which their construction was sanctioned, are now found almost useless, and unlikely ever to fulfil their object.

The Orissa canals, which were commenced by a private company some years ago, were soon considered so worthless that the shares of the company were quoted at forty per cent. discount. The whole concern was bought up nevertheless at par by the Government, who paid, moreover, a bonus of £50,000. This extraordinary bargain is the more to be regretted that the Orissa scheme is turning out a failure, the data on which the returns had been calculated being now found to be very incorrect. Notwithstanding this disappointment, the Government, it is said, contemplate the purchase of another scheme got up by a private company in the Madras Presidency, the prospects of which are no better than those of the Orissa canals.

Under the above circumstances, it is not surprising that the Government should not feel disposed to publish reports on the results yielded by their irrigation works in India. But when they continue to sanction the construction of new works, without any probability of their resulting less disastrously than the works already made, and declare their intention to spend thirty-nine millions more of public money on similar undertakings, it becomes high time for the public to protest and for Parliament to interfere, seeing that the losses arising from these undertakings have to be made good out of the public exchequer, and that taxation in India has already been carried beyond limits consistent with safety.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In England the judges are able and incorrupt, and the Bar is a society of gentlemen, among whose members you may find profound knowledge of the laws. The imperfections in the machinery for the administration of justice are caused by the defective supervision of the attorneys; but as the faults of the latter affect only a limited class of landowners, trustees, women, and children, the public opinion of the English nation has not yet called for a reform. Sir Walter Scott when he depicted the characters of Glossin in "Guy Mannering," and of the lawyers in the "Antiquary," and Dickens when he depicted Tulkinghorn in "Bleak House," satirized attorneys and family solicitors, and in Parliament this year one of its members censured the latter; but the sins of a Glossin or of a Tulkinghorn have but little affected the welfare of the industrious poor; they have principally injured those who subsist on realised property. In India the whole of the machinery is very defective. Few of the judges, European or native, possess more than a superficial knowledge of the Hindoo and Mahomedan Laws. The Bar is not a society. Pleaders, as native barristers are called, are almost uncontrolled. Barristers are inclined to dictate to the Bench, and to waste valuable time in their orations by repetitions and irrelevant observations. Indeed one had the honesty to confess that he continued his oration when he had nothing more to the purpose to say; he pleaded that he had received so large a fee from his friend, the native client seated beside him, that he would not be considered to have fairly earned the money were he abruptly to close his argument.

Many of the native lawyers in India have made large fortunes out of the uncertainty caused by the vacillating and contradictory enactments of Government regarding proprietary rights in land. The transfer of lands from landowners of the warrior caste to the kinsmen of lawyers by champerty and other devices, is the fruitful source of dangerous political demonstrations. The improper and unjust proceedings of some of the Civil Courts were, during the Mutiny, the chief cause of trouble in keeping in order the agricultural community.

Three reforms are in India urgently required:—

1. That public opinion among the natives be carefully consulted before laws are passed. In our pride we are apt to think that English lawyers understand the science of legislation better than the Orientals do; whereas the fact is that some of the Hindoo and Mohammedan laws have stood the test of time much better than any of our Statutes, though we seem to think that the knowledge of one English barrister must be superior to the united wisdom of Mooftees and Pundits for the past hundred years.

2. The Bench must be reformed. We must not be satisfied with placing on the bench those who have proved themselves unfit for the charge of a district. The quality of efficiently supervising, controlling, and instructing native judges, pleaders, and attorneys is even more requisite than an intimate acquaintance with the law library.

It would be an unpleasant task to remind the public of the instances of indolence and lamentable ignorance of law on the part of some of our Indian judges. Files of suits have for months been shut up in Cutcherry boxes, because judges were ignorant of the law, and too indolent to learn it, and had not been instructed by a properly qualified Bar; while the records of appeal cases show what dreadful mistakes have been committed, when incompetent judges have at last made up their minds to pass decrees.

Government has made two desperate efforts to remedy the evils patent to all. First it has in many places established Small Cause Courts to accelerate and cheapen the course of justice; but although this remedy is beneficent when great care is taken in the selection of properly qualified judges, it leads to terrible evils when the judges are incompetent; for as there is no appeal, injustice cannot be remedied, and its course may be continued for long before it can be stopped. Secondly, Government has organised an elaborate system of Registration, to which it appears to be inclined to give almost as much force as to Decrees. The great danger to be feared from the working of this system is from False Personation. Under the former system of Canoongoe registration, false personation was very difficult, for the Canoongoes were personally acquainted with the landowning community. False personation before Registrars in India may now go on for many years before it be detected, and indeed it is almost impossible to detect and prove it after the lapse of three or four years.

Government has also attempted this year to improve the quality of evidence by an Oaths Bill (Act VI. of 1872). I brought to your notice on the 3rd of October last year the absurdity of expecting truth while forbidding the use of oaths.

3rdly. The third great reform required is a Regulation strengthening and supporting the Bench in controlling pleaders and attorneys. The High Courts should be invested with full power over them; those Courts should have power to suspend or cancel all licenses to practise, merely recording publicly their reasons for doing so. No barrister should in India be permitted to dictate to a High Court Judge, or to bully subordinate judges. Whatever control the societies of barristers and solicitors may exercise over lawyers in England, there is little chance of any beneficent control being exercised over them in India except from the Bench.

The apparent costs of litigation are often great; I knew a judge who decreed Rs. 1,000 in favour of a lawyer who had done nothing, the parties having amicably arranged the dispute among themselves. Although the judge subsequently reduced his decree to Rs. 250 (one fourth), the latter amount was ten times as much as it ought to have been.

But the apparent costs are small in comparison with the actual expenses. I knew a lawyer who put himself up to auction. One of the intending litigants offered Rs. 4,000, but his opponent offered Rs. 5,000, and thus secured the assistance of the law professor. What sums in the shape of refreshers were afterwards given I never learnt.

However disgusted the English public may be with the conduct of a Chaffers, and of some of the lawyers in the Tichborne case, they have little idea of the doings among the legal profession in the Mofussil of India.

If law be administered with certainly and reasonable celerity, the Indian public will not demand cheapness. The Government now receives a large income for performing its duty of dispensing justice; this will not be grudged if only the litigant be defended against the expenses caused by immature legislation, incompetent judges, grasping lawyers, and the slow pace of justice through Appellate Courts, which maketh the heart sick.—Your obedient servant, T.

A FAVOURABLE VIEW OF THE INCOME-TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

HONoured SIR,—I am Bengalee Baboo, poor man, but very honest, and never make mutiny; nevertheless, family expense so great that my pay is too small. Income-tax always gives me pay, and now plenty stuff in newspaper about poor natives paying tax, so I write letter to say that all nonsense. Bengalee Baboo like income-tax, so write petition to Gracious Majesty all wishing to pay; every well-wisher pay tax, bad native only refuse, and say robbery. Mr. Grant Duff is great man, very great man, and every Baboo pray night and day that he become Governor-General, double income-tax, and make Baboo happy for five years. That gentleman's speech quite true; very few natives out of 150 millions pay tax to Government, but plenty natives pay bribe to Baboo and native collector. Foolish man pay tax; clever man give Baboo two rupees a month, and keep his name out of "Ticcus" List; but bobbery man very foolish, for, when Government make him pay, Baboo make him give present also.

Sir, I, long time, want the Canal Department, where my brother made overseer, and get plenty "baksheesh" from villagers; but, since income-tax coming, my brother get leave, because his mother dead, and then try for Income-tax Department.

Income-tax office, no one asking questions, and magistrate, very good man, says, "Good morning, Baboo, what letters have I to sign?" though former gentleman get angry and say, "Very well, Baboo, but stand over there, you smell so of cocoanut-oil." Native collector also family man, and he never hear complaints unless villager very humble and pay a rupee, then Baboo write petition for him to Governor-General, and charge eight annas for writing it. Everyone saying that Sir Richard Temple clever man, live at Simla, read newspapers, and amuse himself with painting pictures, but I write to him and say all Baboos strike if income-tax stopped, then Sir Richard have to do plenty office work, and live in Calcutta all the hot weather, and then he become very sorry. Mr. Fawcett, too honest gentleman, and say things too plain, but Mr. Grant Duff give him a jokeative answer, and refer him to Bengalee newspaper that loves the income-tax. Perhaps he read my letter next time in Parliament. All Baboo family man and native collector praying for long life and prosperity of Mr. Grant Duff, and plenty income-tax. If House of Commons want me please give my address, and pay first-class passage in P. and O. steamer then I give good evidence for the Government.—I am, honoured Sir, your humble servant,

Bow Bazaar, Sept. 3, 1872.

THE UNDER SECRETARY OF STATE ON INDIA.

Mr. Grant Duff's exposition in Parliament of the present condition of Indian finance, if it has taken no one in this country by surprise, has added one more to the numerous already existing proofs of the absolute necessity of furnishing the English public with accurate information regarding the simplest facts of Indian finance. It is felt in this country that no one rising to speak with authority on questions of vast moment to India, could have ventured to commit himself to the statements of which Mr. Grant Duff easily and serenely delivered himself, unless he could safely calculate on the ignorance of his audience. To an audience imperfectly acquainted with the rudiments of Indian finance, and predisposed to receive a pleasant account of the stewardship of this vast empire, the couleur de rose picture of the Under-Secretary of State for India must have proved as welcome as the conviction of ignorance or blindness would have been the reverse. The only drawback to the kind of enjoyment offered to the House of Commons consists in the fact that the discontent which is known to prevail throughout India has occasionally threatened to become dangerous, and may some day, when we are least prepared for it, fulfil the long-standing menace. Then, neither persistent congratulations nor tardy regret will suffice to remedy an evil which is still open to judicious treatment. To the labours of the Special Committee on Indian Finance, which has recently been suspended and will be re-appointed during the next Session, public opinion in India looks with a curious mixture of hope and fear. Enough has been revealed before the committee to set it on the right tack, but it is believed that nothing short of a commission deputed to make enquiries in India could so place the grievances of the people before Parliament as to ensure their prompt remedy.

INDIAN TAXATION.

The Englishman admits that the incidence of taxation in India at the present day is in actual amount proportionately less than it would have been, or even than it was, under native rule. We ourselves, indeed, on the basis of the actual comparison of the figures belonging to the two periods, have repeatedly insisted on its truth. If, on the other hand, the Times means to affirm that the burden of our taxation is not more severely felt than was that of our predecessors, we are strongly of opinion that the proposition is untrue. The great error of those who point to comparisons of this kind as conclusive proof of the leniency of our fiscal system, and, to a large extent, the great error of that system itself, arises from confounding the amount with the character of taxation. These people start from an assumption which is not only altogether unwarrantable, but displays a lamentable ignorance of human nature, that men feel calls upon their purse in proportion to their amount. Carried to its legitimate limits, this assumption would do away with the distinction, as regards the effect produced on the feelings, between giving and being robbed. It ignores entirely the philosophy of finance, and treats it as an exact science with which the imagination has no concern. But men are not mere calculating machines; and the fact is, that our taxation is at once less considerable in amount, and more severe in effect, than that of the Mughal emperors. So vital is the importance of this distinction between amount and kind of taxation, that we have no hesitation in saying we might largely increase the former while simultaneously alleviating the real burden. As to the second proposition, no doubt it is a strange reflection on the governing capacity of the English that we have so far been unable to pay our way without resorting to unpopular taxes. But when it is remembered that want of facility in adapting themselves to foreign customs and ideas is a well-known tendency of the character of the English as a people, it need not appear so strange as to cast any doubt on the ample testimony that exists to the fact. With regard to the cause of our increased expenditure, it is beyond doubt, to a great extent, due to a rise of prices; nay, it seems probable that whatever economies may be found practicable in the future will be fully balanced, if not outweighed, by the still further rise of prices that may naturally be expected to arise from the development of the country. The inference drawn by the Times does not, however, follow, for the reasons we have already stated. Though we have not imposed additional taxes in proportion to the rise, we have gradually departed more and more widely in the taxes we have imposed from the modes of taxation most familiar and least obnoxious to the people. What is needed, then, is not, as described by the Times, a financier who shall merely tap the means of the people proportionally to their increase, but one who shall know how to conduct this process as far as may be necessary by methods the most in accordance with the habits and feelings of the people to be taxed.

HARD LINES FOR THE ORDNANCE MAJORS.

The Times of India thinks that it could scarcely be worth the while of a great Government like that of India to perpetuate grievous personal injustice for the sake of saving a few thousand rupees; yet, that the Government of India is about to do so in the matter of refusing their pay to the lately promoted Ordnance Corps majors is, we are afraid, an instance in point. The reason given is supposed to be that majors of the mounted branch of the artillery gain largely by the system of contracts prevailing in India, for the supply of material, &c., required in the repair of carriages, harness, and the provision of horse-blankets, shoes, and stable equipments. This is necessarily a technical question and somewhat dry subject, but on that account it is the more incumbent on us to explain how the matter stands. Now it may, we conclude, be admitted that if Government could itself supply material cheaper, the system would be ended forthwith. Estimates were called for some time ago from the Ordnance Department for the supply of stable equipments, and it was found that they were higher than the sum—2 rupees per horse per month—allowed to commanding officers. Reports were also called for of the actual expense incurred by these officers in equipping their horses, and in no case was the contract price found sufficient. Harness and carriage allowances, if the harness and carriages are received new, are, no doubt, amply sufficient; but it is well known to all artillery officers in India that an old battery and old harness are sources of pecuniary loss to the commanding officer, to say nothing of the risk—on the occasion of a change of equipment—of the Battery having to be returned into store and put into re-issuable condition at the expense of the returning officer. In addition to these contingencies there are those of long and frequent marches on service, and in relief, when no profit can possibly be made; the frequent additions made, by order, to the articles paid for by the Commanding Officer (in civil life this would not be considered justice), and the liability to having the contract allowances lowered by Government. This was done when the Horse Artillery Commanding Officers allowance was reduced from Rs. 3 to Rs. 2 per horse not many years ago, thereby presenting a somewhat anomalous spectacle of a Captain of Dragoons receiving Rs. 3 and a Captain of Horse Artillery Rs. 2 at the same station, for doing the same work at the same cost to themselves for the same Government horses. Again, the so-called profits were always regarded in the light of a command allowance, and in return for the responsibility of looking after a large extra establishment of natives (syces, grass-cutters, &c.), also the keeping of forage and ordnance accounts, returns, store lists, and the numerous papers connected with a mounted battery. In confirmation of this view a command allowance of Rs. 250 was granted to commanding officers of heavy batteries on their establishment. It must not be forgotten that a Major of Artillery is his own Quartermaster, Paymaster, and Adjutant, and that all he is allowed for stationery and the repair of arms is Rs. 30 per month. How far that allowance goes with the present multiplicity of forms, returns, &c., one can easily guess. Further, only one-half of the Majors of Foot Artillery are commanding field batteries. As regards the other half, surely it is preposterous that men of their rank and service—some of them over twenty-two years—should receive less pay than many Wing subalterns of Native Infantry regiments. We need not proceed further than to compare the positions of a Major of British Infantry and a Major of British Artillery landing together in India; the former receives Rs. 819-3-0 per month, the latter (if belonging to a Garrison Brigade) Rs. 463-10-0, and (if to a Field Brigade) Rs. 523-10-0. These sums include all command and horse allowances, with the addition (in the case of the field brigade officer) of such sums as he can screw out of his contracts—never in the long run, we believe, with present high prices, more than Rs. 150 to Rs. 200 per month.

INDIAN ASPARAGUS.—At the last meeting of the Committee of the Agri-Horticultural Society an interesting memorandum by Dr. Cornish was read on the cultivation of asparagus in India. There seems to be a general impression on the part of amateur cultivators that an asparagus bed requires from two to three years to become productive, and the Doctor's object is to show that asparagus, under proper treatment and culture, may be successfully grown in Madras, and made to yield abundantly for the table within a year of the date of sowing the seed. The seed, he says, may be sown at any time from July to November. Dr. Cornish details his own experience of asparagus growing, and states that his beds have been yielding freely within seven months from the date of sowing; and he considers that for delicacy of flavour, tenderness, and succulence, the Indian grown asparagus is infinitely to be preferred to that which is imported from France in tins. Dr. Cornish throws out the caution that people should take the direction of the cultivation into their own hands, including the cutting of the heads, for native gardeners, at present, know nothing about the plant, and are sure to neglect or to cut too rashly if they are not taught how to treat it properly.

THE VISIT TO THE VICEROY OF THE KHIVA AMBASSADOR.—We have already several times referred to the Envoy from Khiva, who is now at Rawul Pindie on his way to the Viceroy, and speculation has arisen as to the nature of his mission, both to the ruler of Cabul and the Government of India. By letters just received from a merchant in Bokhara, we discover a possible clue to the errand that has brought an Ambassador all the way to India, from such a distant region as Khiva. The Russian expedition, which failed, or at least was withdrawn last year, has this year been renewed, and a force is now again moving from the north, probably from the Russian position on the Sir-i-Daria upon Oorgunj, a few marches north of Khiva. The Khivans were actively preparing to defend themselves, and a battle was shortly expected. In conjunction with this northern force, it is probable that a second column may be co-operating, from Samarcand, down the valley of the Oxus; if so the Samarcand column must be of small dimensions. From the same source we learn that cholera is making frightful ravages in Bokhara, two hundred deaths occurring in that city daily. Although this number may seem exaggerated, it is yet by no means improbable, as the filth of the city is beyond description.—Indian Public Opinion.

STATION TALK.

MURREE, Sept. 2.—You are doubtless aware that there have been several cases of cholera in this station lately. The past week has been the worst so far—eight cases and four of them fatal occurring among the troops in one day. Yesterday was one of the best days since the outbreak, no cases having occurred among the Europeans of the station or at the barracks, and but two natives having been attacked—not in the station, but on the road to Rawul Pindie. The Nonconformist chaplain has, I am sorry to say, lost a child, one of two which were attacked—but his house is situated between the Mule lines, where several cases occurred, and the barrack which was first attacked. There have been wonderfully few cases in the bazaar—only two or three perhaps at most. Immediately after the outbreak the men from the infected barracks were promptly moved out to a hill-top some miles off, but, if report speaks truth, stranger than fiction in this case, no medical men were sent with them, and two cases were absolutely sent back from the camp yesterday into the station, where both proved fatal during the night. These unfortunate fellows were brought in at the time the residents were taking their afternoon walk, and had to be carried for some distance along the Mall. Two more cases are said to have occurred out in the camp since yesterday, but it is to be hoped the authorities will provide accommodation out there, and not try to perpetuate the scourge amongst us longer than it might possibly otherwise last. As to the outbreak here being traceable to any particular cause, rumour has it that a gentleman from Lahore, where the disease was raging, lost a child, and determined he would come up to Murree at once. The civil surgeon at Lahore, it is said, warned him not to do so for fifteen days, but disregarding the warning he came straight up here, and his ayah, who had been ill for some days, was the first case of the many that have lately occurred—the poor woman died. If this tale be true, and it is pretty generally circulated here, the person who brought the disease amongst us from Lahore deserves something beyond the odium attached to his name, which I do not give, because this is but one side of a story. The weather is less foggy to-day than of late, and some fresh snow has fallen on the Punjab range, so we hope things may change for the better soon.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

CURIOUS ACCIDENT.—As the Cantonment Magistrate and the chief Medical officer of Roorkee were returning the other day from a visit to Jourasie (a cholera stricken village) the elephant they were riding almost bodily disappeared in a quick-sand of the Solani. A party of Sappers had, we are told, to be despatched to the scene to dig them out.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The report on the Judicial Administration of the Central Provinces for 1871 is a satisfactory but dry chronicle of a year of civil courts' labour. In all 76,092 original suits were instituted (being an increase of 5,300 over the total of the preceding year), of a total value of 47½ lakhs; that of the suits of 1870 was nearly three lakhs in excess of this.

CHOLERA AT WURDAH.—I am sorry to say cholera seems to be spreading about the Wurdah district; but here the general health is excellent, with the exception of colds, which are easily enough caught this damp weather. We still have almost continuously heavy rain, but apparently not more than is required, as throughout the Central Provinces the crops of all kinds are reported to be most favourable.—Madras Times Correspondent.

THE HIMALAYAS.—The Indian Daily News says:—"Lord Northbrook proposes to spend a month at Chini next year. We would advise his Lordship to ascend the valley of the Sutlej even higher. Chini is sometimes visited by heavy rain, travelling up the open valley. A bend of the river, a little higher up, makes quite a different climate, the elbows of the hills shutting out all moisture from the Punjab. Of course we write of the rainy season."

SALT CLEARANCES IN BENGAL.—During the first quarter of the current year the total clearances of salt of all descriptions amounted to 17,61,675 maunds, and the amount of duty levied was Rs. 57,25,444. The quantity of Government salt sold at the Presidency was 550 maunds, and at Pooree 400 maunds. The total importations to Calcutta were 13,45,700 maunds; no salt was imported by sea during the quarter at any of the ports in the Orissa districts.

SNAKE BITE.—A Dr. E. J. Lazarus sends to a contemporary instructions for the treatment of snake-bite. The medicine alluded to is the strong water of ammonia, but eau de luce is equally efficacious, and both are procurable at any chemist's. For several years a very great number of cases of snake-bite have been brought to him for treatment, but he has never taken notes of them. Since the rains have set in this year he has already had twenty-seven cases, all of which recovered, with the exception of one individual, who was in articulo mortis when brought in.

CHOLERA AT AGRA.—We learn that in consequence of a case of cholera having occurred in the band of the 20th Hussars, the rest of the musicians have been shifted out of barracks, and are under canvas on the parade ground. We hear that two cases of cholera appeared in the Artillery also, but the men who were attacked have recovered.—Mofussile, Sept. 4.

DEVoured BY A JACKAL.—In the village of Domjur, Howrah, a female infant, about six months old, was, on last Friday evening, devoured by a jackal. It appears that the mother of the unfortunate child had left her on the verandah, and gone to a neighbouring house to fetch some fire, when, in the interval, a jackal visited the house, and carried her away into a jungle. A neighbour having witnessed the scene ran after the animal, and commenced searching the jungle, which occupied some time, but he could not trace the body.—Englishman, Sept. 17.

ELECTION DODGES AMONG THE KHASIAS.—It is interesting to know that civilised nations are not the only people in the world who make a bad use of their privilege as electors. The following from Colonel Raban, who paid a visit to the Khasia Hills, is interesting with regard to this point:—"My visit to Chella in December was connected with the selection of Wahdadars, i.e., chiefs, for the Chella confederacy. Two vacancies had to be filled, and for both there was a severe contest. I had opportunities of learning, what indeed I knew pretty well before, that all sorts of election dodges are almost as common amongst these semi-civilised populations as amongst the more advanced people of Europe and America."

INDIAN TEAS.—Messrs. Balmer, Lawrie, and Co.'s fortnightly Tea Report, dated Calcutta, Sept. 16, 1872, states that the arrivals of tea during the past fortnight have been moderate, and the sales were, therefore, restricted to some 6,500 chests, of which nearly 1,500 were withdrawn from the public sales for higher rates. Prices for fine descriptions have been fully sustained during the period under review; but medium qualities have been less in demand, and are easier in price. The enquiry for teas of all sorts has somewhat subsided, and the smallness of the receipts from the producing-districts has probably been the cause of prices being sustained at their present level. Large arrivals are expected next week.

THE LATE MR. MAYNE.—In my last letter I gave a short account of Mr. Mayne's illness. I may as well complete it. On Tuesday night he was in a critical state, though cholera had left him and there were some favourable symptoms. But on Wednesday it was only too apparent that the struggle for life had been too protracted, and that, in spite of the additional strength gained by his late visit to England, he was succumbing. And yet all Wednesday and Thursday he fought for life—a dreadfully unequal fight—and on Friday morning at half-past one he passed away. He sank very slowly and peacefully, in no pain, but without the power of recognising the friends who stood around him. The immediate cause of death was cerebral effusion.—Pioneer Correspondent.

WHY NOT GIVE THE SO-CALLED "LOAFERS" A CHANCE?—An advertisement appears in the London Daily News of Aug. 9, from the India-office, calling for the service in India of three mechanics accustomed to the erection of iron bridge-work and roofing, three carpenters, three brick and tile makers, three bricklayers, three stonemasons, three stone cutters, and three plate layers, on engagement for five years. Their passages out and home are to be paid, and the salaries offered are one hundred and fifty rupees a month for the first year with increments of ten rupees annually. Considering that there are numbers of men at present in the country who would do the work required quite as well as the new importations, sending men from England is simply a waste of money.—Englishman.

THE KOOKAS.—It is feared in certain quarters that there is again something up among the Kookas, for although every man among them is known and his doings regularly recorded, yet it is suspected from things that occasionally crop up that there is a great deal of secret correspondence going on. In consequence, we believe, of this impression, the fortifications of Malair Kotla, the object of the last rising, are being strengthened. Malair Kotla, being the only Mahomedan state among those this side of the Sutlej, is the peculiar object of the fanatic Kooka's hatred. It is said that all letters to or from Hindoos in the Punjab are opened and read before delivery in the Post offices; servants have been known to complain that latterly they have constantly received their letters open.—Indian Daily News.

RAILWAY BRIDGE PIERS.—A correspondent, an engineer, who had recently occasion to travel on the Punjab Railway, writes to us to notice the peculiar effect of the river currents against the single circular piers of the bridges on that line; he affirms that the amount of "heading up" and consequent destructive scour on the circular piers, even when the rivers are low, are so much greater than at the bridges provided with cut-waters on the East Indian line, as to form a most striking, and unfavourable contrast. The single well piers on the Punjab line cannot, of course, compare with such bridges as the Soane with its twelve well piers, but our correspondent argues from the comparative aspects of the currents, that the immunity of the East Indian bridges is as much owing to their cut-waters as to the solidity of their structure.—Indian Public Opinion.

WOOD FAMINE IN THE PUNJAB.—The wood famine, which for some time has been threatening at various points in the Punjab, has, says the Indian Public Opinion, made itself felt at Rawul Pindie, where on a late occasion it was found a matter of some difficulty to procure the firewood necessary for burning the corpses of some Hindoos who had died of cholera.

THE GAUGE QUESTION.—The Pioneer once more writes on the gauge question, and "ventures to assert, in view of the evidence subsequently collected, that the reports forwarded to Lord Mayo while the gauge question was still undecided did not adequately represent the case for the standard system. There seems but too much reason to suppose that the uniformity of gauge has been surrendered under a complete delusion concerning the financial advantages of the sacrifice. An overwhelming mass of professional testimony in England now favours the theory that, by adopting comparatively light rails and economising in other ways, broad gauge lines can be constructed in this country for little more than the cost of narrow gauge lines,—that the difference is really not worth saving at the sacrifice of uniformity."

TRANSPORT OF TROOPS.—The Government of India have requested that it may be ascertained whether there is any objection on the part of railway companies to the insertion of the following clause in the regulations for the transport of troops:—"When bodies of troops travel by rail, the senior non-commissioned officer or soldier in each compartment will be made responsible that no damages occur whilst the troops occupy it; and a memorandum will be taken at the time of entry, under the orders of the officer commanding the troops, of the number of the carriage and compartment, and the name of the senior man in charge, who will report to the officer deputed to go down the line for the purpose after the men are seated, whether all is correct, and again whether all is correct before the men leave the train, a railway official inspecting each compartment, and reporting to the officer in command before the troops march off."

ANOTHER KHUD ACCIDENT AT SIMLA.—We regret to learn of another serious accident having occurred in these hills a few days ago to Mr. Bird, C.S., who was riding with a friend on the Mahosoon road, when they were met by a string of laden mules, and while endeavouring to avoid them, as usual, found themselves "shunted" to the khud side. Mr. Bird's horse, not liking the close proximity of the mules, took to backing towards the khud, and after a struggle went over the precipice with its rider, the latter falling a considerable distance, but escaping with only some severe cuts and bruises about the head and legs; the less fortunate quadruped was dashed to pieces, and not seen again. Mr. Bird was brought into Simla yesterday, and received prompt medical attention, and although he is seriously injured, we are glad to learn that the injuries are not of a dangerous nature.—Civil and Military Gazette.

DENGUE AT AGRA.—Sufferers by the dengue are picking up. Servants—in some instances the complete establishments of private houses were prostrated—are crawling about whispering the mysteries of the niah bokhar. We had the hope that the westerly breeze, whose appearance was hailed with delight, would diminish the power of, if not at once remove, the disease; but such, we regret to say, is not the case. There are very many sufferers by it now in the cantonment, and it is on the increase among the European troops. The native regiments have literally been defeated by it. Several officers and not a few ladies suffer severely by it. Even medical men, who generally manage by some mysterious agency known only to themselves to evade epidemics, are fairly over. Rumour says that but one of the many medical men in the station has escaped. From cholera we are thankful at being able to write we are free at present.—Delhi Gazette, Sept. 7.

AUSTRALIAN WINES.—A contemporary notices some pleasant congratulations over the discovery of a wine market in India, in which some Melbourne vine-growers have recently been indulging. One man stated that "he had found a market in India for an unlimited supply of light delicate Victorian wines at highly satisfactory prices;" another that "from the success he had experienced in the Indian market, he felt confident that he could place all his wines there at good prices;" and a third, that "for some years he had been able to dispose of his wines as fast as they could be brought into condition." These congratulations, accurate in the main, hardly represent the exact truth. We believe that when a large consignment of Australian wines was thrown on Calcutta a few years ago the wine became for some time a drug. It was new and unknown, and found few purchasers, until suddenly some French gentleman discovered that it could be medicated into a very decent poison for modern palates. There then arose, and probably still exists, some sort of demand for the article, which has never, however, become as popular as it deserves to be. To palates uncorrupted by the medicated wines which are largely imported into India, the light unadulterated Australian wine is both a pleasant and a wholesome drink. There is one thing about it to which we are able to certify; there is no headache in it. And if wine-bibbing is one of the necessary accompaniments of that civilisation which is expected eventually to take the native of this country in its embrace, we believe that, as an element of civilisation, Australian wine is in every way preferable to the heavier drinks of Europe. Until Mr. Vernier is prepared with his jamun specific, we should vote for the vine-growers of Melbourne.—Indian Daily News.

THE MAYO INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.—We have only just seen the prospectus of the Mayo Industrial School for European and Eurasian girls at Simla. A committee has been formed which has made itself responsible for the pecuniary liabilities hitherto borne by Mrs. Tytler. Rs. 30,000 are required at once to defray the debt on the building and the monthly expenses now amount to Rs. 700, although there are only twenty-three children in the institution, which, it is hoped, will eventually receive a hundred inmates. This is a bold venture, when it is remembered that the Pratt Memorial has raised very little more than thirty thousand rupees. But the patronage of great people goes a long way in India, and we do not despair of seeing the money raised. Except for its location in the hills, the institution seems to have very much the same scope as the Pratt Memorial School, and it seems unfortunate that there should be the prospect of two struggling establishments instead of one noble and well endowed school for girls.—Indian Church Gazette.

HOCKEY AN INDIAN GAME.—Our English contemporaries do not seem to know much about the game of "Polo," which they describe at great length and from which they expect many blessings to the aristocratic youth of England. One attributes the game to Canada! Whilst the Illustrated London News is a little nearer the mark by stating that "it was first introduced at Lahore, where it created quite a sensation." This—excepting the sensation especially among the natives which many of us remember—is a mistake. It was long before played at Calcutta on Munnipooree ponies, and had been introduced at that capital, we believe, by Captain Sherar from Assam. At Lahore it was introduced by Dr. Leitner after his Thibet tour, and was played with great vigour during the hot weather of 1867 on horses of every size. In one form or other the game is as old as the mountains, though, as now played, it is chiefly Bhootia or Thibetan. We hope it will again be revived at this station.—Public Opinion.

THE BRIDGES OF THE SCINDE, PUNJAB AND DELHI RAILWAY.—We understand that the recent disasters connected with the bridges of the Scinde, Punjab and Delhi Railway have been engaging the attention of the authorities at the India Office, who have been impressing the importance of enquiry into the causes of such serious accidents upon the Court of Directors in London. We are informed that, in consequence, Mr. Bradford Leslie, C.E., who is coming shortly out to this country on some business connected with the Government of India, has been commissioned by the directors of the Scinde, Punjab and Delhi Railway to examine, we believe, all the bridges on their line, in concert with Mr. Joseph Harrison, their present acting agent, with a view if possible of initiating as early as possible the best protective works devisable to guard against the probability of occurrence for the future of those accidents on the large rivers of the Punjab that are crossed by the railway, which have for the last two years been so disastrous to the railway company and productive of so much inconvenience to the public.—Indian Public Opinion, Sept. 10.

ANTIDOTES AGAINST MOSQUITOES.—A correspondent of the Pioneer writes:—Would you, or your readers, be surprised to hear that the common small bats everywhere met with are the best antidotes against mosquitoes and all such insect pests imaginable? Only allow bats free range of a house, and mosquitoes disappear instantly, i.e., in a day, or rather night or two. I mention this because many people are up in arms against these harmless and useful little animals, and take precautions to exclude them from their apartments. I discovered the fact years ago in Central India. Being fond of watching the habits of animals, I left undisturbed a family of bats which had taken up their abode in a crevice of the inner doorway of my bungalow. I found the bats there when I first entered the house, which has been some time unoccupied. The station swarmed with mosquitoes, but there was not a single one in my house, at least so long as the bats had free ingress and egress to every room. By way of experiment I several times shut off a room from the range of the bats by a chickoor purdah and found it in a couple of days again colonised by mosquitoes. I have tried the same experiment over and over again since, with the same results, and have at the present moment a medium-sized bachelor bat, who hangs himself by day in my sleeping room (occasionally patronising the goosel khunah), besides a couple of families or thereabouts, in the eaves of the bungalow and out-offices. Bats are perfectly cleanly (which birds are not), and are extremely useful to boot, as they live entirely on flies, mosquitoes, &c., their object in entering rooms, and flying round and round, with occasional dives at the wall and ceiling, is the capture of the latter insects. They never strike against anything in their gyrations.

ACCIDENT TO GENERAL BLAKE.—General Blake, we regret to hear, broke his collar-bone when riding in a paper chase at Rangoon on the 29th August. The General is, however, reported to be doing well.

HAIDRABAD.—We (Pioneer) have heard that Mr. Johnston, the secretary of the Nizam's Department of Public Works, has been dismissed, and that Sir Salar Jung has referred the matter constituting the ground of dismissal to the Council of the Institute of Civil Engineers (of which Mr. Johnston is a member) for investigation.

CAMP OF EXERCISE.—The South of India Observer is "sorry to hear it is just possible that the Camp of Exercise, which was to have been held at Bangalore early the ensuing year, may, after all, be postponed. Cholera, that dread foe to all preconceived arrangements, has appeared upon the scene, and it would scarcely be deemed wise to march troops down a road which has been devastated by so malignant a foe."

COOLY LABOUR.—The Madras Times thinks that a Cooly Labour Bill would be an immense boon to Southern India. "It should be binding on both employers and employed. Let it be an understood thing that a man engaging himself as a monthly or daily paid labourer binds himself for a certain remuneration to do a certain amount of different kinds of work, and that the employer is on his part bound to exact no more, and to pay for what is done, regularly and punctually. A month's notice absolutely necessary on both sides."

APPLICATION FOR A SUMMONS AGAINST THE DEVIL.—At the Town Police Court, before Mr. R. P. Campbell, a Mr. H. Balls, residing in Black Town, appeared in person and presented the following written statement for a summons against one T. Lazaro. "T. Lazaro, residing in Black Town, who is persecuting me by having tied the devil and Antony to himself through which I hear very foul and vulgar language from him, and he keeps my thoughts and minds garrisoned and thereby preventing me from entering into business by him keeping my time engaged by speaking to me as a ventriloquist and by which action I am suffering, and for which act against me I seek relief." His Worship, Mr. Campbell, referred the applicant to Mr. T. G. Clarke, the senior magistrate, who told him that he would give him a month's time to renew his application, in order to see under what Act he could charge the devil; at the same time he promised to make inquiries regarding the matter. It is supposed the applicant is of unsound mind.—Madras Mail.

THE WEATHER AT BANGALORE.—Writing of the weather, the oldest inhabitant tells us that the rain this monsoon has been excessive. All the tanks are filled to overflowing, and judging from the number of mud walls that have fallen, and the general leakiness of nearly every house in the place, the attentions of the clerk of the weather are almost too pressing to be agreeable. The worst of it is that the next monsoon is due in another three weeks, when it is to be hoped the lower class of natives, who suffer the most, will not be entirely washed out. We think we may safely affirm that as compared with other stations Bangalore has been most mercifully exempted from the dengue.—Bangalore Herald, Sept. 14.

RANGOON RECORDERSHIP.—With reference to the proposed Act authorising the Governor-General in Council to abolish the Court of Recorder at Rangoon, and to establish in its stead that of the Session's Judge, which is now pending the consideration of the Secretary of State for India, the present incumbent, it is said, has made a representation to his Grace, urging his claim to the proposed appointment in preference to that of any other officer, and has suggested that the independence of the Sessions' Judge, as provided for in the said Act, should be strictly maintained, and that the officer, or his Court, should be placed under the Indian Government, and not under the Chief Commissioner, as is the case with the several High Courts in India.

THE MADRAS PROFESSORSHIP OF SANSKRIT.—A Mr. Gustav Oppert has been appointed Professor of Sanskrit at the Madras Presidency College. In announcing this appointment the Secretary of State writes:—"Mr. Oppert states that he has studied Oriental Languages and History in the German Universities of Bonn, Leipzig, Berlin, and Halle, and took his doctor's degree at the last-named University in 1861. He was employed in the Oriental Department of the Bodleian Library at Oxford in 1866, since which time until now he has been an assistant in the Royal Library of Windsor Castle." The salary of the appointment is Rs. 500 per mensem. In his letter of appointment Mr. Oppert is informed that he must devote his whole time to the duties of the service, and not absent himself from his duties without having first obtained permission from the Government or its authorised officers, or except in case of sickness or accident certified by competent medical testimony. He will be eligible for promotion to the higher classes of the educational service as vacancies occur; but such promotion will not be actually accorded till he has passed the ordinary examination in the vernacular language of the district in which he may be employed in case the same shall be required by the Local Government.—Madras Mail.

THE LATE MR. BATCOCK.—We regret to hear of the demise of Mr. S. Batcock, formerly Deputy Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens here. He died, we are told, of cholera, after a few hours' illness, at Allahabad. Mr. Batcock had many friends in this Presidency, friends who appreciated fully his intelligent and valuable, though unpretending, endeavours to further agricultural and horticultural interests. He contributed in no small degree to the success of the cinchona experiments on the Neilgherries. He was at the time of his death engaged as secretary to Mr. Rivett-Carnac, cotton commissioner. Those who knew Mr. Batcock intimately will with us bewail the death of a good and estimable man. We have seldom heard of a case so sad as that of Mr. Batcock and his family. Almost every resident in Ootacamund remembers them—all when with us the picture of health and happiness. They were induced to go home, and no sooner had they reached the shores of England than ill-fortune came upon them like a flood. Within a few days three or four children fell victims to scarlet fever, from which the father himself barely recovered. The little money saved in India was swallowed up in some "investment"—one of the specious swindles of London. This compelled Mr. Batcock to return to India; but he left his wife and remaining child at home. The latter died, and now cholera has carried off the father. Well may this be called a "pitiful case," as an up-country contemporary indeed calls it, for we imagine, in spite of one or two irreconcilable facts stated, that it is to the late Mr. Batcock and his family the following paragraph refers:—"A pitiful case of a European gardener on his way to England from Simla occurred a week ago. He left his wife and three children at home and brought one child out with himself. The three children in England died of scarlet fever, and the one with him in India also died; his wife was nearly mad through grief, and he was hastening home to see her; he stopped here to break his journey, was taken ill with cholera, and died within a few hours!"—South of India Observer.

STATION TALK.

JACOBABAD (UPPER SIND), Aug. 27.—His Highness the Khan of Khelat is just now standing between two opinions. His councillors are advising him to break the treaty binding him to afford protection to the trade passing through his territories while on its way to British India, or that he be allowed to raise a duty on the merchandise, as the subsidy of fifty thousand per annum is inadequate to defray the expenses that he has to undergo in having a force for that special work. This is one opinion; the other is to stick to the treaty, come what may, trusting to the good services of the British Government. He has been so fickle of late that he has incurred the most serious displeasure of his Excellency the Viceroy. The unfortunate Wuzzeer who, through his zeal and love for his sovereign, has been able to restore good government in Beloochistan, where once anarchy and strife were predominant, has again fallen into the bad graces of his master, for the simple reason of giving some wise advice. The Khan of Khelat is bound to make good any loss that merchants may incur while passing through his country, and it so happens that during the late anarchy seven lakhs of rupees worth of merchandise was robbed by the Brahooes while in rebellion. A little over five lakhs has been recovered from them, while the remainder must be made good by the Khan. This he declines to do. It is a fact that Major Harrison has been ordered to leave Khelat; this he has by late advice done, and has moved three stages away from Khelat. The Wuzzeer is with him. There is, I learn, a last chance offered to his Highness, and should he still persist and remain stubborn the Political Agency will move into British territories. How long will our Government bear up with the fast and loose play of the unprincipled monarch Khodadad Khan? The Government have acted with clemency long enough. Stop the subsidy and they shall see the Khan repent of his misdeeds. There are rumours afloat here which I am inclined to believe, but should like your Simla correspondent to confirm, that Lord Northbrook will visit Jacobabad in November next, with the object of personally settling Khelat affairs and have an interview with the Khan. Some say that he will most probably stop the subsidy, as our Frontier field force should be capable of keeping the passes and roads free from bandits. If this be his Excellency's policy, I say it is excellent, and that it will prove in time to be the best. Jacob's castle is being thoroughly repaired, and will be by November in a fit state to accommodate his Excellency and staff. Sir William Merewether is expected here about the 15th Oct., and will meet Lord Northbrook at Kasmore about the 5th November. It is hoped that his Excellency will make a better job (excuse the word) of it than Sir William. The floods are abating and the threatened danger is now passed. The river will not rise again. The last fall is reported to have been four feet. It is hoped that the authorities will take necessary precautions for the next year and not shut the stables after the horse has already bolted, and may the Government make a better provision than eighteen hundred rupees in the next budget. I hear, but I do not believe, that a deputation had waited on the Political Superintendent, soliciting that measures be taken to save the city from danger when such danger did exist, which now fortunately is passed, and that they were asked to advance on their own account five thousand rupees which was latterly reduced to three thousand. Is it possible that the executives should have run out of funds? I do not believe it, and I write this for what it is worth. Mr. Charles Steele has taken six months' leave to recruit his health, and is going home. I wonder if he is suffering from "Civil Service on the brain," or is it from nervous affection, the spleen or the liver. Mr. Steele is quite a young man, and it is hoped that the six months' change will do him good and bring him back quite strong enough to undertake his duties with fourfold vigour. M. McLeod, Deputy Collector, Shikarpore, has relieved him.

Sept. 8.—Winter is approaching; every succeeding day tells us of this; the days are becoming shorter, the nights consequently long; the day is warm, but the mornings and evenings are remarkably cool and pleasant; at night a heavy dew falls, cools the surrounding atmosphere, and forces us to sleep in-doors. In a few weeks more blankets will be brought in use. The floods are now all gone down, but the country around still shows its water-mark; here and there are stagnant pools, and the ground is one vast puddle. The roads are covered with fallen trees, which makes them impassable; the P. W. D. and local funds are at work. Khelat politics are much the same as before. The breach between the Khan and his Wuzzeer is becoming wider day by day, and all the efforts of the British Political Agent at his Court to effect a reconciliation are met with a decided refusal. The Khan in his anger persists in his waywardness, and is determined to break the treaties he has entered into with our Government. Major Harrison is expected here by the end of this month. He will await Sir William Merewether's and Lord Northbrook's arrival, when some steps will be taken, either by means of arbitration or in extreme by force of arms, to compel his Highness to respect the British line. His Highness is rather uneasy of Lord Northbrook's intended visit. Various other reports are flying about in Khelat. Some say there that the Khan's conduct will force our Government to occupy the hills; others say there that the Khan will be deposed and the Jam of Lus Beyla placed on the throne. I am of opinion that our present policy with the Khan and his tribes should be changed or modified. The Kutchee hills should be patrolled by a mounted police. The men for this purpose should be selected from one of the clans in the pay of the British Government. Then Puetta at the entrance of the Bolan Pass should be cantoned with European troops. A saving would thus be effected in the maintenance of the Upper Sind Field Force, and the numerous outposts on our frontiers could be thus abolished. The climate of Puetta is like that of England throughout the year, and if European troops were quartered there the men would enjoy good health and be better off than their brothers on the plains. This was proposed some years ago to the Government of India both by Sir Henry Green and our present Commander-in-Chief, Lord Napier, but Sir William Mansfield did not see the necessity for it. The Murrees are filibustering again, although they promised to Captain Sandeman, the Punjab Government Frontier Officer on the Dherajat border, that they would not again take to plundering; but how is it possible that they could do so when the authorities here decided that they should make good their plunder from the kafilas in money to be paid from a source quite independent of deductions from their monthly subsidy which is paid them by the Punjab Government to keep peaceable their border. The only alternative they have is to molest their fellow tribes and the Khan's people, looting their villages, selling their plunder, and paying it proceeds towards liquidating this debt. This is a rob Peter to pay Paul system which the wily Murree is to glad to follow. I learn that some twenty camel-loads of Khandahar merchandise has been recovered from them, and are on their way to Jacobabad. Why cannot the Bombay Government adopt the same line of policy as the Punjab Government, and keep the hill tribes on the Sind frontier in their pay, and employ them like a police as suggested in the preceding para. Yacoub Khan, Governor of Herat, is losing favour day by day. He is levying new provincial taxes to fill his treasury, and to be able to carry out his intended expedition to Seistan to expel the Persian army of occupation. One or two companies of a regiment on hearing of this movement declined to serve. Yacoub Khan has imprisoned these men, who were mostly engaged against him in the late civil war; so he is meeting out a double vengeance. The Prince Governor of Kandahar has arrived at the capital. There were great rejoicings, and nearly the whole city went out to welcome him in. Shuster Ali Khan is now installed Governor by the voice of the people. Many deputations waited on his Excellency, praying that the obnoxious taxes lately enforced by his father the Ameer be removed, or that he should forward on fresh appeals to his Highness. His Excellency promised to do all he could in obtaining a favourable answer to their prayer.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

PAHLUNPOOR, Sept. 3.—The month of Shravan is over, and with it the fair held every Shravan Monday at a place called Balaram—seven coss from Pahlunpoor. A short description of Balaram may not be uninteresting. It is a hillock, at the foot of which is situated a Mahadev's temple, with a dharamshala attached, the frontage being covered by low jungles and a small stream. The water flowing from the hillock is a little diverted from its natural course, and conducted by an aqueduct into the Shiv's temple, where it is made to fall on the lingum through a gaoo Mookh or cow's mouth, constructed of stone, and this circumstance helps materially to inspire peculiar reverence for the place. The scenery is indeed picturesque, with a distant view of the famous Aboo and other hills. This natural view is enlivened by the presence of a multitude of people attending the fair; some are bathing, and thus, according to their idea, washing away their sin; some are running to pay their respects to the god Shiv, through the winding paths that lead to the temple; some amusing themselves by singing, talking, or moving about in company of their friends, while others are patiently engaged in a repast. The month of Shravan has its own peculiar attractions, and I have no doubt that a person who visits Balaram on the occasion of a fair will find himself amply repaid for his trouble. The majority of the Banians here are Shrawaks. Their Puchosun holidays have commenced, and they seem to exert every nerve to act up to the injunctions of their Shastras. During the last week we have had copious showers of rain. It is feared they might prove injurious to the bajree crops. The endeavours for opening a reading room at this place have succeeded, and one was opened on the 1st instant. It is a question how far people will avail themselves of this advantage, which is open to them free of any charge.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

BOMBAY ACCOUNT OFFICES.—Instructions have been issued to Mr. Gay, Deputy Comptroller-General, who is now in England, and is shortly expected to return to this country, to inspect some of the Account Offices in the Bombay Presidency, and to submit a report of such inspection to the Supreme Government.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. "VULTURE."—H.M.S. Vulture, 664 tons, Commander Robert B. Cay, arrived on Tuesday, September 11, from Muscat with 156 slaves (liberated). Eight slaves died on the passage, and thirty-eight were attacked with small-pox. The commander reports that he experienced heavy squalls from S.W. and S. with rain, and high sea.—Bombay Gazette.

A PROBABLE VISITOR.—It is possible that Bombay will soon be visited by the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia and other distinguished "Europe" personages. A Singapore paper says—"We are informed that the Straits are to be honoured shortly by visits from several scions of Royalty. H.I.M. the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia will arrive here towards the end of the present month, and their Serene Highnesses Prince Philip and Prince Augustus of Saxe-Cobourg Gotha, cousins of her Majesty the Queen, are also expected very soon by H. E. the Governor. Prince Augustus is son-in-law of the Emperor of Brazil. Their Highnesses will be heartily welcomed, and none the less because we have nothing to show them, or entertain them with, except calm seas, cloudless skies, and eternal summer greenery." From Singapore the Grand Duke and the Princes will doubtless proceed to Ceylon, and thence probably to Madras, Calcutta and Bombay.—Bombay Gazette.

A WILD BEAST FIGHT AT BARODA.—Our Baroda correspondent writes on the 3rd inst. :—"I think I should give you an account of a combat between wild beasts, which the European residents of Baroda were invited last week to witness. First an elephant and a tiger were introduced to each other, but it was soon clear that the elephant had no 'stomach for the fight,' and that the tiger was resolved to act on the defensive only. Other elephants were brought forward, but in vain did their mahouts urge them to 'try conclusions' with the rival jungle king of the feline species. One elephant, somewhat bolder than the rest, and perchance on friendliness intent, put out a foreleg towards the tiger, which surely misinterpreted the overture, for he responded with cat's kindness claw instead of paw, and the elephant quickly withdrew, rather hurt by so sharp and ungracious a response on the part of stripes. The fight, however, between the rhinoceros and the panther was altogether another affair. Rhino bowled the panther over at each renewal of the conflict, and would—each time—have followed up his victory in his own savage fashion, but for the Maharajah's men. The panther must have experienced a strong sense of relief when taken back to his cage, far from his recent and formidable antagonist. Two rhinos were hard at it, when the sahib log made their parting salaam, longing for the enjoyment of their evening drive and dinner."—Bombay Gazette.

OPENING OF THE HOG ISLAND LIFT.—On the 16th inst., after having once been unavoidably delayed, the ceremony of opening the Hydraulic Dock was fixed to be performed. Those gentlemen who had been fortunate enough to receive invitations to witness the ceremony were to assemble at the Apollo and Mazagon Bunders by 7 A.M. An hour's steaming brought us alongside the great Lift, in which the interest of the day was centred. The Lift itself was decorated with flags, and between the two rows of pillars was the sunk postoon, while moored close by was the turret-ship Magdala, the lifting of which was to form the greatest mechanical ceremony which Bombay had ever seen. The party (numbering some forty or fifty) were courteously received by Mr. Standfield, the resident engineer, and Mr. Maclaren, the superintendent and contractor's agent. The whole of the Lift, with its truly wonderful mechanical appliances, was inspected, and the two gentlemen before referred to explained everything in connection with it. Almost the first question asked was—What time is the Magdala to be raised? and the reply to this evoked much disappointment. Government, we were told, had, by the advice of its solicitor, declined allowing the Magdala to be lifted, unless Mr. Standfield would guarantee that no damage would be sustained by her during the operation. Mr. Standfield refused (and, as everybody says, very properly) to give the required guarantee, and so it was decided not to raise the Magdala. This announcement was felt as a severe disappointment by all the party, and the unreasonableness of the request was much discussed. How the Government could suppose that the engineer would take the responsibility of the trial on himself (as far as the Magdala was concerned) we were all at a loss to imagine. It seems that fears were entertained of the sides of the destructive craft bulging out on account of the great weight that would necessarily be thrown on them when the vessel was supported on her keel alone. Whether such an event would have happened had she been lifted is rather a difficult question to determine, although I think the majority of opinions were to the contrary. However, as the Magdala could not be experimented with, it was determined to raise the pontoon from the bed of the dock, full as it was of water. The hydraulic power was set in motion, and slowly but surely the huge pontoon was drawn up until about three feet above the water. The weight lifted, during this operation, was equal to between 9,000 and 10,000 tons, nearly double that of the Magdala. This in itself proved most conclusively the raising powers of the Lift, and all who witnessed the operation expressed themselves as perfectly satisfied with its capabilities. On Friday last the same experiment had been performed in the presence of the "Select Committee" from the dockyard, who expressed themselves as quite sensible of the power put in motion, and the enormousness of the weight raised. The Select Committee were present, too, on Monday, having come over in the Dagmar, with the intention, I believe, of formally taking over charge of the Lift from the contractors; but after witnessing the operation they left, to make their report to Government on the working of the dock. Had the Magdala, however, been lifted, the test, although not so great, would have been looked upon as more successful.—Times of India Correspondent.

SUBDIVISIONS OF DISTRICTS.

Circular No. 47.

To all Commissioners of Divisions, dated Calcutta, Aug. 14, 1872.

Arrangements have lately been made to render the boundaries of districts conterminous in respect of revenue and judicial jurisdictions, and to adjust district boundaries to the best advantage. In doing this, it has been necessary to rearrange some sub divisions which were divided between two districts, it being deemed desirable that a sub divisional officer should always be under one magistrate collector only, and should not serve two masters. But as regards all other sub divisions, the Lieut. governor, while feeling that in some districts new sub divisions are required, and that in others it may be desirable to revise sub divisional jurisdictions and stations with reference to the experience which has now been secured, has thought that it would be better to complete the district boundaries, organise the subordinate establishments, and obtain the full results of the census before undertaking any review of the sub divisional rearrangements generally.

It appears, however, that the High Court are engaged in a rearrangement of moonsiffes, which it is sought to render conterminous with sub divisions, and so many questions regarding sub divisional lock-ups (which it is certainly necessary to render more efficient), sub divisional buildings, and such like matters, constantly come before Government, that the Lieut. governor does not think he can longer delay calling the attention of commissioners and district officers to the subject. He would not at present undertake to supply sub divisional establishments for districts, or portions of districts, where sub divisions have not yet been at all established. But wherever the sub divisional system has been in operation, he would like it to be considered once for all whether the number and position of the sub divisional stations are what they should be, and whether the jurisdictions are arranged in the most advantageous manner. It may not be necessary to hurry a decision in specially doubtful or difficult cases. But the Lieut. governor would like to have as soon as possible a report in all cases in which it is clear that the sub divisional station and jurisdiction are rightly placed and arranged, and where, therefore, all subsidiary arrangements for lock-ups, &c., may be proceeded with without misgiving.

On the other hand, he would equally like to have a report of all cases in which there is reason to think that alteration is desirable, with proposals for rearrangement as soon as such proposals can be made with confidence.

The census returns, thannah by thannah, will very soon be available for almost all districts, and are already supplied to many.

The Lieut. governor accordingly directs that, as soon as the census return is received, a return may be submitted for each district with a map, showing sub divisional and thannah jurisdictions, and a statement regarding each sub division showing population, number of criminal and other cases for each of the last two years, and other particulars. An opinion should then be expressed in regard to each, either that it should be retained as at present, the magistrate and commissioner being thoroughly satisfied on that point, or that it should be altered or rearranged, for reasons given, in manner specified, or that for any reason the decision had better be postponed.

The Lieutenant governor would wish that in coming to a conclusion on these points the following considerations should be borne in mind.

The Lieutenant governor considers that the sub divisions should, if possible, be of such a size that one officer, and no more, of the covenanted or subordinate executive service grades, should be fully occupied, and should be able to do all the duties lately prescribed with the assistance of a subordinate establishment of the first, second, or third class, such as is contemplated in the resolution of the 20th March last. He prefers full-sized sub divisions giving employment to an officer and establishment of this kind to a smaller sub division where the case work is so light that assistance is not required, because now that treasury and much other office work must always be done by some one at head-quarters, a single officer who can with difficulty leave his head-quarters (even when not very fully occupied) is much less efficient than a sub divisional officer who has such assistance that he can any day visit any part of his sub division. Probably a fair average sub division, as at present existing, will nearly satisfy these requirements, the additional work recently required being met by the additional establishment which it is hoped shortly to give. But a sub division where there is now insufficient work should not be retained on the ground that enough work may be found for one officer.

At present there are a few sub divisions with more than one officer. Probably with a first-class subordinate establishment one officer may do the work; if not, a plan should, if possible, be devised for reducing the size of the sub division.

This also the Lieutenant governor wishes to be particularly borne in mind that the district should not be equally divided, the sudder division being treated on the same footing as the outlying sub divisions. The sudder division always has more officers and should be larger. Whenever any place is equidistant from the sudder station and a sub divisional station, it should go to the sudder in preference; that course has many advantages, and should be followed whenever it can be so arranged by any contrivance. Sub divisions are established not to divide the work, but to bring the protection and aid of Government, and the administration of justice, nearer to the people. They should, therefore, only be established where they decidedly attain that object, and portions of the district should be attached to them only so far as the object is attained.

In districts where the sub divisions have been marked off, but have not been officered and established, the Lieut. governor begs that the proposed sub divisional boundaries may be revised with reference to the above considerations, and a report made.

In some instances the sub divisional stations seem to have been badly chosen, and much loss and inconvenience have been caused by the necessity for changing them. In some other cases, though no complaints have been made, and the sub divisional officers seem to be comfortable, the stations appear very far from central, and are too much on the borders of other districts. It is most desirable that they should now be fixed and permanent, and wherever a station, being unobjectionable in other respects, is not central, it should be stated what buildings there are, whether the place has local importance, &c., and it should be well weighed whether the permanent advantages of a change are worth the immediate sacrifice.

J. WARE EDGAR,

Offc. junior Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA.—In anticipation of the half-yearly meeting, the directors of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China have issued their report. It shows a net profit of £117,265. 19s. 7d., to which has to be added £883. 19s., brought forward from the previous year, making a total of £118,149. 18s. 7d. A dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum (free of income tax) is declared, leaving a balance of £88,149. 18s. 7d. carried forward to next account. The directors refer to the failure of a firm of high standing, with which the Bank has had large transactions for many years past. This failure would involve the Bank in a loss; but at the worst, it would leave a large balance available to supplement profits.

LIEUT. COL. G. N. FENDALL.—Her Majesty has approved the appointment of Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel G. N. Fendall, 53rd Regiment, to be Assistant Military Secretary to Lord Sandhurst, commanding in Ireland. Colonel Fendall obtained his Ensigny December 11, 1846; became Lieutenant, May 4, 1849; Captain, November 7, 1856; Brevet Major, March 24, 1858; and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel, March 18, 1869. He served with the 53rd against the hill tribes on the Peshawur Frontier in 1851-52 (medal with clasp). Also in the Indian campaign of 1857-58, including the actions of Chuttra, Gopalgunge, Khodagunge, and entry into Futteh-pore, and affair of Shumshabad; served as Brigade-Major at the assault and capture of Meangunge, and also at the assault and capture of Lucknow, after which he officiated as Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General at Lucknow until the close of the rebellion in Oude (mentioned in despatches, Brevet-Major, and medal with clasp).

Miscellaneous.

CAPT. J. P. E. JERVOISE, 3rd Hussars, has been confirmed in his appointment as Aide-de-Camp to Sir Philip Wodehouse, K.C.B., Governor of Bombay.

INDIAN ARMY DEFENCE INSTITUTION.—A general meeting of the Indian Army Defence Institution will be held at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St. James's, on Saturday, the 19th inst., at two P.M., when all supporters of the Institution are invited to attend.

PROFESSORS FOR PERSIA.—It is stated that orders have been sent by the Persian Government to the Persian representatives at Paris to engage forty professors for the Lyceum and new colleges of a similar kind.

CANDIDATES FOR SEATS IN PARLIAMENT.—Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, late Governor of Bombay, and formerly M.P. for Horsham, will contest that borough in the Conservative interest at the next election, Major Aldridge, who was the Conservative candidate in 1868, having consented to withdraw in his favour. Mr. W. Massey, some time Law Member of the Viceroy's Supreme Council, will contest Tiverton in the Liberal interest, as successor to Mr. Denman, the new Judge.

THE WELLINGTON COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIPS of £55 per annum for four years, open without limitation to any candidates under fourteen years of age, have been awarded as follows:—1, to A. S. Pagden, Forest School, Walthamstow (Dr. Guy); 2, to H. H. Stewart (Mr. R. Chignell's), West Mount, Dover. A scholarship of £25 for two years has been awarded to Mr. R. F. Harrison, Temple-grove, East Sheen.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—Orders have been received at Chatham directing detachments of the 39th Regiment, 54th Regiment, and 106th (Bombay Light Infantry) Regiment, to be held in readiness to embark for India, via the Suez Canal. Lieutenant A. M. Le Marchant, 39th Regiment, and Lieutenant W. O. Harris, 106th Regiment, are placed under orders to embark with the troops. Captain F. A. Wright, 83rd Regiment, has likewise received orders to embark with the troops.

THE BURMESE EMBASSY have returned to London from Dublin. They have visited the principal seats of manufacture and commerce in England, Ireland, and Scotland, and have received addresses from the Chambers of Commerce of Liverpool, Manchester, Bradford, Halifax, Sheffield, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Glasgow, and Dublin. It is understood they will remain in London until the return of the Queen to Windsor, when, after taking leave of her Majesty, they will proceed through France, Italy, and Egypt to India, where they will pay their respects to the Governor-General, and, finally, arrive in their own country about the beginning of next year.

NERBUDDA COAL AND IRON COMPANY (LIMITED).—The directors have transmitted to their shareholders a report on the Nerbudda properties by Mr. Charles Maynard, the manager lately appointed at the mines, from which they gather that, in his opinion, the collieries are a very valuable property. They add that early in November they purpose holding a half-yearly meeting to confer with the shareholders, and to lay before them any other information that may have been received from the manager ulterior to the present date.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—The following promotions take place in the Royal Artillery consequent upon the death of General Sir Patrick Montgomerie, K.C.B., Royal (late Madras) Artillery, which occurred on the 5th inst.:—Lieut.-Gen. J. T. Lane, C.B. (late Bengal), to be General; Major-General Sir W. M. Coghlan, K.C.B., Colonel Commandant 21st Brigade (late Bombay), to be Lieutenant General; and Colonel H. A. Carleton, C.B., 16th Brigade (late Bengal), to be Major-General, a run of promotion going for the benefit of the officers on the Bengal List; Lieutenant-Colonels and Brevet-Colonels H. H. Maxwell and A. Light, C Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, becoming Colonels; and Brevet-Lieutenant-Colonel W. Dowell, 16th Brigade, a Lieutenant-Colonel.

THE MONCRIEFF GUN.—The report to the Secretary of State for War by a committee of officers appointed to investigate the Moncrieff system is understood to be of a favourable character. Amongst the trials was one calculated to test the alleged liability of the apparatus to get out of gear by disuse and exposure to the weather. A seven-inch gun mounted on one of these carriages fired ninety rounds consecutively, and was then allowed to rest for three months without attention. At the expiration of that time it was again run up, and fired thirty times more without hitch or difficulty. The War-office has determined to employ some of the Moncrieff carriages in the home defence, and have sent nine to Flatholme, on the Severn; four to Lavernock, on the Severn; six to Cork Harbour, and one to Sheerness. Should the reports from these places be satisfactory, after a few months' trial, other places will be furnished as fast as the carriages can be manufactured.

H.M.S. "NASSAU" ATTACKED BY PIRATES.—The Straits Times says that while H.M.S. Nassau, from Labuan via Macassar, was surveying in the Sulu Sea, a boat's crew, with Lieut. Grey and Mr. White, when taking bearings on the N.E. end of Sulu Island, were attacked by forty or fifty natives. They fought their way through them to the boat, and during the fight Lieut. Grey and one of the crew were wounded: some of the natives were killed and others wounded. Captain Chimmo, believing his crew had been mistaken for Spaniards, communicated with the people, telling them the Nassau was an English vessel, and had nothing to do with the Spaniards, and asked for an explanation of their conduct, which they declined to give, and expressed their readiness to fight. Several days were spent in vain endeavour to come to an understanding, after which the Nassau was put into position and shelled the villages, which were totally destroyed. It turned out that the people were Baliguni pirates.

80TH FOOT.—A correspondent hears that this regiment is to move from Singapore to Hong Kong, and that a large draft of three hundred men is to proceed, via the Cape, early this month to the latter place, under Captain Stoue. No one knows the reason of this early and unexpected move, nor will it, I fear, be a popular one, for they have all settled down very comfortably, and like the country very much, particularly those at Malacca, under the command of Captain Tucker, who has taken great pains in improving the station by instituting gardens and recreation-rooms, where the men are frequently entertained by short descriptive lectures on simple and interesting subjects. Malacca had not been previously used as a European station, and at first barrack accommodation was scarcely adapted to European requirements. However, Captain Tucker, on his own responsibility, effected many necessary changes and improvements, and received the General's cordial approbation for what he had done. Paymaster Givens has been ordered home, and it is extremely probable that another paymastership will soon be vacant.

60TH RIFLES.—A correspondent of the Army and Navy Gazette writes:—"The reported transfer of the 3rd battalion 60th Rifles from Aden to the bleak downs of Shorncliffe, in the depth of winter, must surely be a jest, or the authorities by whom such moves are regulated must be so wrapped up in official wool as to be incapable of all feeling for out-of-office misery. The battalion in question has served in India and Burma for over fifteen years. There is a large proportion of old soldiers in the ranks, with long Indian service and diminished stamina. The general vigour has been further impaired by a residence at Aden during the last year, when a severe epidemic of dengue fever went steadily through the battalion, from the commanding officer to the newly-born infant, and reduced the standard of health to a minimum. Upwards of ninety unfortunate children who have been born and nurtured in the tropics will have to brave or perish under the cruel miseries of an English winter, thinly clad, and thinly housed. Is there no high sanitary official in these days of preventive science who lends his counsel, based upon a wide experience, to the sages of the department for the location of troops returning from foreign service, who will raise a voice in favour of these sufferers by anticipation?"

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—An extraordinary meeting of the shareholders of the above bank was held on October 9, Mr. Andrew Cassels presiding. The chairman said he was glad of the opportunity of meeting the shareholders and explaining to them the exact position of the bank. Exaggerated rumours had been in circulation, as was shown by the fall which had taken place in the market value of their shares when the failure of Messrs. Gledstones was announced. Their £20 shares had fallen to 13½ to 14½, which represented a loss of £120,000, but this was too great, as the amount they should have to claim for was about £28,000. Under these circumstances the directors thought it right to issue a circular at the earliest possible moment, so as to make the shareholders aware of the true position of the bank. Their earnings for the half year had represented a return of 11 per cent. on the capital, and the directors were indulging in the hope of being able to declare a moderate interim dividend when the failure of Messrs. Gledstones came upon them and compelled them to forego that pleasure. The acceptances of this firm were freely taken in the discount market, and no whispers were in circulation about them. Their bills were taken, as it was known that produce was being shipped to them. A more discreditable failure had rarely, if ever, occurred; the firm had been insolvent for years, yet two of the partners had remained as directors of two of the largest banks in the world. To expect an Indian bank with numerous branches to steer clear of losses was to expect impossibilities, as neither the directors nor their agents could get information which was implicitly to be relied upon. But the shareholders had a right to expect that no one failure should put the bank in a serious condition, and it was because the directors were doing this that they asked the shareholders' support and co-operation with them. They were now sending the manager round to each branch to look into the business, and he had no doubt that this work of reorganisation would result in good to the bank. The opening of the Suez Canal had altered the conditions of trade to the East, and he considered that six months' bills were no longer necessary, and some time ago they had instructed their agents that in all shipments through the Canal they should, as far as possible, only recognise three months' bills, and he should be very glad to find that their neighbours were doing the same. He then moved the election of Messrs. F. W. Heilgers and William Paterson as directors, which was unanimously agreed to.

THE DELHI AND LONDON BANK (LIMITED).—The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders in the above bank was held on Oct. 9, at the Offices, King William-street, under the presidency of Colonel Smith. The Chairman (the report having been read) said it afforded himself and his colleagues much pleasure to meet the shareholders and give an account of their stewardship, the more especially as some erroneous statements had been industriously circulated as to the extent of the bank's commitments on account of the failure of Messrs. Gledstones. So disastrous was this rumour, that at one time the £20 shares of the company were sold for £14. The board, however, sent out a circular to the shareholders stating the exact amount of bills which had been purchased. He made bold to say that a more disgraceful failure never took place in the city of London, and that such a failure could never have occurred in any of the continental cities where the Code Napoleon was in force, and he regretted that it was not in force in England. The board exonerated the manager from all blame, as at the time the bills were bought it was well known that large consignments of produce was being made to the members of the firm, and so there was not the slightest idea of the old firm sending out any "kites." Indeed, up to the very eve of the failure, the bills of Messrs. Gledstones were most readily taken, if not sought after. Referring to the accounts, he said that the bank's operations during the six months were equivalent to 11 per cent., and had it not been for a commercial failure, which took them all by surprise, the dividend would have been larger. The business of the bank had been improving and increasing, and the profits would have been larger but for an unexpected loss. A committee of directors had gone most carefully through the lock up, and found that it had been reduced between £3,000 and £4,000. He concluded by moving the adoption of the amended accounts furnished, and the declaration of a dividend at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum. The motion having been seconded, some discussion ensued. A shareholder asked whether any of Messrs. Gledstones' bills had been purchased by the bank. The Chairman replied that the bank had purchased some of Messrs. Gledstones' bills, but not to any large extent, and they believed that one-half or more of the amount would be recovered. In reply to a further question, the chairman said that the bank had no bills of Messrs. Leggett. The loss, whatever it might be, would fall upon the current half-year, and not upon the profits of the half-year under consideration. But the directors had set aside a sum, as could be seen in the accounts, amounting to £700, as a contingency towards meeting the loss expected to accrue upon Gledstones' bills. The report was adopted, and the 3 per cent. dividend declared. A long conversational discussion took place as to the error in the original accounts, and a proposal was made by a shareholder that the chief accountant should be summarily dismissed, which was not seconded or adopted, on the understanding that he should be reprimanded by the directors. The proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX.

The Times remarks that the Income-tax is particularly unpopular in India, and, whatever matters Anglo-Indians and natives may differ upon, they unite in condemning the Imperial finance. The feeling which Mr. Grant Duff's speech has excited will probably hasten the time when the British Parliament will be forced to listen more attentively to those who examine Indian affairs free from official prepossessions. We do not ask any one to pin his faith to all that comes to us in the name of Indian opinion. We are quite aware that the opinions of an interested minority may be attributed to a people, and that discontent may be craftily fostered for class purposes. This is what Mr. Grant Duff more than insinuated in his speech. He said that the tax was most obnoxious to the persons who made opinion—"to our own European officers, to the head men of villages, and, above all, to the whole class which owned, wrote in, and influenced the newspapers." Lord Mayo, he went on to say, "was very much struck by the way in which the irritation of those persons who paid the tax, and, therefore, quite naturally hated it, was communicated all over the country to hundreds of thousands, if not millions, who do not pay the tax," and thus the Minute of 1870 came to be made. The position taken, therefore, by the Government, if it insists on supporting the tax, is, that the wealthier class in India, including our own officers, whose duty it is to maintain order in the country, and our civilians, who have to administer and teach respect for the law, are endeavouring, with the help of "the newspapers," to fill the minds of the millions with discontent at a tax which the said millions do not pay, in order that they, the few, may escape it. This is the argument, and our readers are free to believe it if they please. But first, let them consider the probabilities of the case. Here is a country which has scarcely entered into the conditions which allow a scientific system of finance. Numbers of its people, even those who may come within the operation of the law, have not risen above the primitive fashions of disposing of money, as by hoarding or by the purchase of costly jewels. All of them are timid as by a hereditary instinct—a disposition which is easily to be understood of a people who have lived under the caprice of princes and the extortion of agents, and amid the low morality which such conditions engender. The complaint is that "the Income-tax is unsuited to India;" people repeat, amid each other's approbation, that it is "inquisitorial," and can never be tolerated. What does this form of complaint indicate? That England has taken from the armoury of financial expedients which her statesmen have forged that which morally and politically is the most questionable. Let it be remembered that, though we have in England a class of officials remarkable for probity and rarely given to blab about the matters confided to them, the working of the Income-tax, even among ourselves, is in many respects very objectionable. Thousands make their returns with the greatest unwillingness, with a sense of humiliation, or a sense of danger, according to their social or commercial relations. They feel this yearly pecuniary confession to be one of the greatest trials of their lives, and never make it without a secret dread that it may in some way do them harm. Time and necessity may have reconciled us to the impost; but it must be recollected that Sir Robert Peel, in proposing it, expressly stated that it was a tax only to be justified by the exigencies of the time, and as a temporary expedient to maintain the credit of the country. Others have called it a war-tax, and fully recognised that those who pay it in its increased proportions have the first claim to a remission on the return of peace. It is certainly not consistent with the old opinions on the subject that an income-tax should be imposed upon an Asiatic country in time of profound peace, and as a permanent financial arrangement—that men should be obliged to show their pecuniary condition and open their books to a class so little reticent and delicate, to use no stronger language, as the native officials of India. In short, there can be little doubt that the Indian Department makes a mistake when it lightly dismisses the prevailing discontent, and complacently concludes that this is only a petty class agitation which will die out of itself. A large section, and, of course, the most powerful section, of Indian society pays the tax, and of those who do not pay it the most energetic are apprehensive that they will have to pay it some day. It may be that with all this the people might submit themselves in time to the impost if it stood alone, but the irritation which it engenders mingles with the larger mass of discontent caused by long-standing financial difficulties, and there is a tendency to resist the tax as the worst offshoot of a bad system.

THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1866.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1859, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshahur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Review.

PEPSINE.—The popular and professional medicine for Indigestion is MORSON'S PEP-SINE, the active principle of the gastric juice. In Powder, Lozenges, Globules, and as Wine.

CHLORODYNE has now obtained such universal celebrity it can scarcely be considered a speciality, its composition being known to most European practitioners. The combination of Chloroform quickly relieves the pain and spasms of Cholera, Diarrhea, Dysentery, and in fact all acute and nervous pains, and chronic Coughs; frequently small doses will produce this beneficial result. Many of the Chlorodynes of commerce are not of uniform strength; this has induced MORSON and SON to compound their preparation. Sold in ½-oz., 1, and 2-oz. bottles.

GELATINE.—The purest preparation of this nutritious agent extant is MORSON'S.

PEPTIC FOOD for Invalids and Infants, digestible, nutritious, and palatable. Sold in ½-lb. and 1-lb. tins.

All the above are carefully packed and shipped to orders, which must be made payable in England.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, September 30; Agra and Madras, September 28; Calcutta, September 27.

CHOLERA by the last accounts—barring the telegrams—continued to reap its daily harvest in various parts of the Punjab. At Meerut among other victims it has carried off Colonel Frith, whose death we noted last week, and Major the Hon W. Frazer, Superintendent of Police. It is said that more than 1,300 people out of 60,000 have died in that station of cholera or dengue in the past few weeks. All the English soldiers were in tents, the natives were panic-stricken, and business at a standstill. Owing to the prevalence of dengue in Upper Bengal, the supreme Government has placed further funds at the disposal of the local authorities, for the supply of medicines to the civil dispensaries. In Kashmir 2,900 deaths are reported out of 5,600 seizures. At Rawalpindi no fresh cases have occurred since the 14th September. Peshawar was still free from the epidemic, which seems to have entirely subsided at Lucknow and the hill-stations.

HEAVY floods are reported from various places in Bombay and Madras. On the Madras Railway all communication had been stopped for three days by the washing away of the line between Dhudni and Gulbarga. In Gujarat and Khandesh the ravages of the floods have been very serious. The through traffic on the Bombay and Baroda line has been almost entirely suspended. An iron bridge of twelve spans over the Par was carried away, eight spans of the Damaun Ganga bridge were destroyed, and several other bridges rendered unsafe. In several of the Gujarat towns the people were glad to find shelter in the treetops from the floods which swept away their houses. Many sufferers were rescued from the thatched roofs on which they had been floating down the swollen current. The loss of life and property is said to be very great. Surat itself was widely flooded by the Tapti; a great many native boats were driven out to sea, and not a few lives have been lost. Khandesh seems to have suffered still more cruelly than Gujarat. Whole villages have been swept away, hundreds of lives lost, immense damage has been done to all kinds of property, and thousands of poor wretches have been left homeless and destitute. In the town of Nassik, crowded with pilgrims, the floods reached up to the Peshwah's Palace, and the temples on both sides of the river were filled with water. Several lives were lost there also.

THE Fine Arts Exhibition at Simla was opened by the Viceroy on the 21st September during a heavy shower. Only about fifty or sixty people were present to hear Sir R. Temple compare the show of this year with that of former years, and compliment Lord Northbrook on his skill as a painter. After disclaiming all merit on that score, his Lordship hit the weak point in these exhibitions by expressing a wish to see "more sketches" in a country where "the aspects of nature were so varied." Among the prize-winners were Mrs. Swiney of Madras, and Paymaster Sergeant Swift of the 20th Hussars. Sir R. Temple himself was one of the "highly commended."

LORD NORTHBROOK, we are glad to see, is determined to probe the wounds which our fiscal experiments have been inflicting on the temper of the Indian people. A circular letter from the Secretary to the Indian Government contains the following paragraphs:—

I am next to ask that report may be called for from some of the best local officers who come into direct contact with the people, upon the question whether any, and what taxes, imperial, provincial, local, municipal, now existing or about to be imposed, create a feeling of discontent in the country or among any particular section of the people. Care should be taken to ascertain the feeling of the people towards any particular tax, the income-tax, for instance, as it now is and not in regard to any more severe form of it that does now exist. The reports thus obtained should be carefully reviewed, and the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor upon this important matter submitted to the Government of India.

I am to ask, in particular, of the operation and effects of the duty on rice and paddy exported to and from the Presidency of Bengal.

If the Rangoon Times has been rightly informed in a telegram received from Prome, the Panthays in Yunan have been "severely defeated if not crushed;" the road from India to China is once more open, and the Chinese at Mandalay and Bhamo rejoice greatly thereat. This is probably a very magnified account of some small advantage gained by the Chinese over a Panthay force.

THE Khivan envoy has had an interview with the Viceroy, and presented a letter for the Queen. It is said, no doubt with truth, that the Viceroy declined to intercede with the Russians in the case of Khiva.

AFTER all the changes reported in the Viceregal programme, the telegraph informs us that Lord Northbrook held a public darbar at Ambála on the 17th November. In a brief address to the assembled chiefs the Viceroy touched upon the loss which the native princes had sustained by the death of Lord Mayo, and thanked them for their prompt action with regard to the Kuka outbreak. His Lordship also expressed his pleasure at the completion of arrangements for making the Sirhind Canal, and gave a general assurance of adhering to the spirit of the Queen's proclamation, in supporting the dignity and independence of the native princes.

ACCORDING to information received from Berlin, the Russians are backing up their movement against the Khan of Khiva by the march of an armed force from the southern shores of the Aral Lake. It is said that the troops will march along the Oxus, one of whose branches appears to have been made navigable for flat-bottomed boats.

Our correspondent "Delta" disputes the accuracy of the estimates we quoted last week from Colonel Chesney and other high authorities, with regard to the working of the chief Indian canals. In a recent letter to the Times however another witness, under the initials of "R. E. F." bears out the general truthfulness of our remarks. Taking his figures from the Irrigation Revenue Report of the North-Western Provinces for 1870-71, he shows that the net revenue derived that year from the Ganges Canal amounted to £103,312, or a return of 4·3 per cent. on a capital account of £2,402,438. If to this be added the enhancement of land-revenue due to the canal, the rate of profit would be raised to 5·31 per cent. This reckoning does not quite tally with the 7½ per cent. of Colonel Chesney, but that officer was doubtless speaking of the returns for 1871-72. Or it may be that he had before him those complete returns of the profit gained from the enhancement of land-revenue, which appear from the Report to have been still wanting at the time of its publication. There is no reason moreover, as "R.E.F." observes, why the proportion of working expenses to revenue should continue to be higher on the Ganges than it is on the Eastern Jumna Canal; for the capability of improvement on the former was shown in the famine year 1868-69, when the net profit rose to £212,582, or 8·21 per cent. on the capital. The proportional cost of working the Ganges Canal indeed may be expected to diminish year by year, as its vast irrigating capacity comes more and more into play. "It takes time," as the same writer points out, "for these great bodies of water, these artificial rivers, to settle down into a fixed and fully controlled régime;" especially when the people for whose use they were intended are slow to avail themselves of the new facilities. On the Eastern Jumna Canal the net profits for 1870-71 amounted to 19·76 per cent. of the capital outlay. The actual net profit from direct income alone on all the canals in the North-Western Provinces for that year is returned at 5·1 per cent.

We are glad to see that Captain Dicey's scheme for reducing to their lowest the discomforts of the Channel Passage, by means of double steamers on the "outrigger" principle, has at length gained some practical support from the city gentlemen. Several of these have combined to build a vessel of the kind proposed, and a large model of the same may now be seen at the office of Mr. E. A. Smith, 150, Leadenhall-street. Between such a vessel and the sort of steamer projected by Messrs. Reed and Bessemer—a thing larger than any Holyhead steamer, with a draught of only seven feet, and a promenade deck seven feet above the ordinary deck,—there can, we imagine, be no choice. The former, if rightly built with a proper width between the hulls, can never lose its balance in the roughest sea, however light its draught of water, while the stability of the latter with so light a draught and so much height out of the water is worse than doubtful.

THE funeral of the late Sir George Pollock took place on Wednesday last in the presence of a goodly gathering of old friends and comrades. A pretty full account of a ceremony worthy of the old soldier's high deserts will be found in another column. Among those present was the new Constable of the Tower, Sir William Gomm, an older soldier than Pollock by several years, who succeeded Sir Charles Napier as Commander-in-Chief in India. His Indian command was chiefly noticeable for its humdrum character, a soothing change at the time from Napier's brief but stormy tenure of the same post. Officers at any rate found rest, if nothing better, under Sir William's mild rule. There was fighting indeed in Burmah; but if all accounts are true, the chief management of the war rested entirely in Dalhousie's hands.

Now that the French Government has concluded a new contract for the carriage of the French Mails to England, it seems that, however punctually they may arrive at Calais, the delivery of the Indian mails in London can never for the present be fore reckoned with the old precision. Delays of twelve and even twenty-four hours are already recorded in the passage of the ordinary mails from Calais to London. At their best the gun-boats now employed on the service are generally about two hours behind the time of Messrs. Churchward's old packets. It is worth noting also that the Overland Mails from Bombay have been more than usually irregular in their passage home during the late monsoon season. How is this? Has the monsoon this year been heavier than usual, or have the P. and O. Company's steamers been handled with less than the usual regard for punctuality? Or is the management at Brindisi in part to blame?

IN the last number of Ocean Highways, an excellent monthly record of geographical progress, there is an interesting paper by Dr. Brandis on the "Distribution of Forests in India." The writer divides the country into arid, dry, and moist zones, according to the yearly average rainfall in each; and the extent and direction of the several zones are clearly marked out in a coloured map which accompanies the paper. The arid zone, where less than fifteen inches of rain falls yearly, stretches southward from the Salt Range in the North-West to the mouths of the Indus, and from the Suleiman Range eastward to the Aravalli Hills, covering an area equal to that of Prussia, with a population of twelve millions. Here the rains are scanty and uncertain, and the timber, consisting chiefly of tamarisk, poplar, acacia, and such like trees, grows mainly along the strips of country watered by the Indus and other streams. To the north, east, and south of the arid zone stretches a dry zone, at a width ranging from 100 to 200 miles, past Lahor, Delhi, Ajmir, Disa, and Rajkot in Gujarát, with an average rainfall under thirty inches. A similar zone extends southward from Nassik through part of the Dakhan and Mysore to Cape Comorin. In the northern dry zone the woods consist chiefly of acacia, a tree of a kindred sort—the Prosopis, and a species of Anogeissus, "a beautiful tree with small leaves, drooping branches, and dense foliage," which clothes the hill sides of Mewár. Over most of the southern dry zone spreads the sandal-wood, not in large forests, but here and there in the bushes and hedges. Outside the dry zones spreads a region of more or less moisture, distinguished by a rainfall varying from thirty-four inches at Haidrabad to six hundred at Cherra Poonjee in Assam. The belts of greatest moisture extend, on the one side along the Himalayas, down through Assam and Arakan to Rangoon; on the other, along the Western Ghats, from the Tapti to near Cape Comorin. In these belts the rainfall generally exceeds 75 inches. The richest vegetation loves the moistest regions, and "really thriving forests are only found where the fall exceeds 40 inches." The frosts of the cold season in the Punjab and the Satpura Hills are a source of trouble to the forester, and so are the dry heats of April and May in many parts of the Peninsula. In the hot weather most of the forest trees lose their leaves entirely, except the Sál, whose leaves are renewed before the old ones have all dropped off. Some trees renew their leaves very quickly, while others, like the teak, remain bare for four or five months. In the hot months occur the jungle fires, destroying millions of seeds and seedlings, and more or less damaging a large proportion of full-grown trees.

It has been no easy task, says Dr. Brandis, to convince the people in India of the harm done by firing the jungle for the sake of getting fresh grass for their cattle. Colonel Pearson was the first who succeeded in taking precautions against forest fires, and for more than six years his unwearied energy kept thirty square miles of forest in the Satpura Hills free from this particular danger. In Burmah a great deal of good timber is spoiled by the native habit of cutting down trees and setting fire to the dry stems and branches, for the purpose of sowing crops in the burnt patches. After a year or two a fresh patch is cleared in the same way, and thus some of the finest teak forests have been destroyed in order that one or two crops may be raised upon the ruins. This sort of erratic husbandry was checked in Mysore mainly by the exertions of Dr. Cleghorn, and steps have been taken to check it in some of the teak-bearing tracts of British Burmah. In the western moist region the forest growths are nearly as luxuriant as in the eastern. The oldest and largest teak plantation, begun in 1844 by Mr. Connolly, may be seen in Malabar, where the trees are already 70 to 80 feet high.

DR. BRANDIS sees no prospect of materially improving the climate in any part of India by means of forest conservancy. In the dry zones there is not enough moisture, save along the river banks, to raise and sustain large tracts of forest. Still something may be done to that end by the mere preservation of brushwood tracts in a dry climate, according to the methods long pursued in some parts of Rajputana. In hilly country also forests serve to husband the existing water-supply. The main use however of forest conservancy is to meet the ever growing demand for timber, wood, and other forest produce, as well as to furnish a steady supply of fuel for railways and steamers in regions where coal is unprocurable. For these ends the retention of all the more valuable forests in the hands of Government has come to be recognised as the wisest course. The area of forest lands now reserved from sale by the State in India, excluding those of Bombay and Madras, amounts to 6,200,000 acres, or somewhat more than the total acreage of the Crown forests in Prussia.

MAY we hope that the Indian Government will turn its attention without further delay to the question which Colonel Wragge has once more been stirring in the columns of the Times? With coal at seventy shillings and coke at £5 a-ton in Bombay, it is really time to look about for some cheaper fuel for the railways in Western India. Besides the vast coal-beds still waiting to be drawn upon in Central India, there must in many parts of the country be large supplies of peat, as useful for railway purposes as that which has long been consumed, according to Colonel Wragge, on the railways in Canada and Bavaria. Some time ago the Colonel himself insisted at a public meeting on the advantage of utilising the peat in the Nilgiri Hills as a substitute for the wood so largely burnt on the Madras lines. But his voice was that of one crying in the wilderness, although for years past he had given his close attention to the peatfields of India. Encouraged however by some remarks in Mr. Juland Danvers's Report on Indian Railways, he has again come forward, in hopes of a more favourable hearing. It is four years since he first pointed out to the Government the economic advantages of peat as a locomotive fuel in a country abounding with peat bogs, which, properly managed and worked, would yield an ample and immediate supply of such fuel, whereas it would take many years to develop the timber resources of Madras for the same purpose. No heed however was given to his representations, and in the meanwhile many of the peat bogs have been broken up or otherwise turned to naught, for want of a proper system of conservancy. Colonel Wragge has "corresponded on the subject with Secretaries of State, Governors of Presidencies, conservators of forests, consulting engineers, locomotive superintendents, chairmen and secretaries of railways, all of whom, while deeply lamenting the state of the fuel question in India, seem powerless to provide the necessary remedy." Let us hope that his present appeal will be more successful, if his reasons for making it are as sound as they appear to be. The question, at any rate, is one which ought not to be left in its present state. Either peat is good for railway purposes or it is not. If it can be cheaply and usefully employed on European and American railways, why should it not be turned to account in India? Let the question be speedily settled one way or another. What is there to hinder the Indian Forest Department from taking it up at once? A few experiments carefully conducted, with a single view to eliciting the truth, would soon determine the soundness of Colonel Wragge's position with regard to Indian peat, its fitness for locomotive or other uses, and its probable cost as compared with other fuel.

SOME of our readers will be glad to learn that Lieutenant Low of the late Indian Navy is at work upon a biography of the late Sir George Pollock, which will shortly issue from the press of Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. Of the author's capacity for such an undertaking we have good reason to augur well from his previous writings.

NEW BOOKS ABOUT INDIA.

Two or three of the books lately published on India open up endless questions touching the character of our Indian rule in the past and the present. In a little pamphlet of sixty-three pages, "A Late Indian Editor" attempts to show the historical development of the causes which still endanger the well-being of our Indian Empire. General Macleod's volume deals more especially with questions concerning the proper treatment of our native troops, while Mr. Halliday's little book contains a whole mine of pregnant commentary and apt suggestions on all kinds of Indian political themes.* All three of these books will furnish the inquiring reader with much food for serious thought. General Macleod, for instance, can testify from his own experience to the extent to which even the Madras Sepoys at one time shared the general belief of their comrades in Upper India, as to the design of their English rulers to trick the Sepoys into Christianity by means of the greased cartridges. To his own surprise, he discovered that a story about the English missionaries at Delhi praying the Queen to employ the greased cartridges for that very purpose had won ready credence all over the Madras Presidency. Even educated natives "believed that the English believed in the potency of the charm," and the fruits of such a delusion were fostered by the prevalence of an old prophecy that the British rule in India would die out a hundred years after the battle of Plassey. Then came the order compelling the 8th Madras Cavalry to begin their march on the very morning of the Moharram Kutba, the most sacred day in the Mohammedan year. We can hardly wonder that the men who obeyed this order afterwards broke out into mutiny under fresh provocations. Happily for us, the great bulk of the Madras Army remained loyal, a result partly due to the cruel outrages enacted by their comrades and countrymen in Upper India, partly also, we think, to the efforts made by officers like General Macleod to dispel the delusions of their men. Another reason, overlooked by the writer, might be found in the number of those "hostages to fortune," the women and children who form part of every Sepoy regiment in Madras. From whatever motives at any rate, the loyalty of the Madras Sepoys, Hindu and Mohammedan, withstood all temptation; and therefore the subsequent disbanding of so many Madras regiments would be viewed by many as an unkind return for a service of the highest value at such a time. From the petition of the 6th Cavalry to the Queen, a document never presented because of its informal address, we may guess how sore a feeling possessed the hearts of men who had not only volunteered to serve against the rebels, but proved their loyalty in many a hard fight and trying march during 1857. To men whose forefathers had for generations faithfully served their English masters, it was a cruel blow to find themselves suddenly turned adrift, expelled as it were from their ancestral homes in camp, and doomed to seek for their children other callings than that to which they had been trained. The disbanding of such a regiment was in fact the breaking up of several hundred homes, and it is no wonder that men so treated should accuse their employers of broken faith. Is it yet too late to repair a wrong resented still, we are assured, by every Brahman and Mohammedan in the Madras Presidency?

Of the mischievous effects of outraging native prejudices, the "Late Indian Editor" quotes an instance fresh in the memory of some of our readers. We refer to the outbreak of last year at the Bareilly Jail, provoked by an English surgeon's interference with the right of Brahmans to wear their sacred thread. "The effect to a Brahman"—he remarks—"who is deprived of the sacred thread is this; it divorces him from his wife, it separates him from his children; it deprives him of funeral rites; it debars his unmarried daughter from marriage; it reduces him to the level of a chamar, and it leaves a blot on his family that nothing can efface." Loss of the thread in short means for a Brahman the loss of everything. Dr. Eades was very properly removed from his post; but the mischief he wrought could not end there. The Brahmans in other places must have felt the insult done to some of their body by a servant of the State; and the Government which punished him has no doubt been widely accredited with the wrong done by its official; although its only fault was the selection of an unfit servant for a particular post. The question of fitness however for the work required, is one which the present system of government tends too often to overlook. It is still the case, we believe, in most parts of India, that "a collector of revenue for twenty years, in which capacity he has never had occasion to study the Civil Law, is elevated to a judgeship, because his period of service entitles him to promotion." In the non-regulation provinces a mere youth is entitled to try suits of limited value indeed, but which may often involve the most intricate questions of law as to succession and inheritance. But the natives who suffer can always appeal? If they are rich enough, no doubt they can; but that is a condition which applies only to a fortunate few. Ere long however they will have, we trust, a simpler safeguard against wrong judgments, when the long-promised scheme for dividing the judicial from the revenue service comes into play.

The same writer brings a serious charge against the Indian Government, with regard to the resumption of certain Jagirs in the North-West Provinces from the heirs of those on whom they were bestowed at Lord Lake's instance in 1803. It seems that last year one of the ousted Jagirdars carried an appeal through the Privy Council. He of course got back his estate, but hundreds of fellow-sufferers remain stripped of all their property in spite of a ruling which ought to benefit all. If this be a true story, we advise the Government to lose no time in removing one heavy cause of offence from their doors. Another piece of cruelty which ought not to be tolerated is the practice—alleged by the same writer—of keeping thousands of poor natives day after day, often for weeks together, waiting to appear as witnesses in the Law Courts, with no shelter from sun or rain, and no money-allowance for their support. No one, it appears, has troubled himself to remove a hardship by which so many thousands are yearly reduced to beggary, if they survive the dangerous effects of their compulsory exposure. Neither has any attempt been made to protect the needy husbandmen from the arts of unscrupulous money-lenders who bring exorbitant claims against them for money lent upon their crops. The borrower must either submit to an extortionate demand, or defend himself in a Court many miles away. If he should fail to appear at the right moment, the case goes against him and his crops are seized. "If he attends the Court, weeks may elapse before his case is heard, and all the satisfaction he will likely get will be to find his crops destroyed from not having been gathered, and himself and family ruined."

One of the grievances brought forward by the same writer, the maintenance of Christian Churches out of Indian revenue, can hardly, as things are, be called a grievance. It is not the same thing as if a tax were levied in England for the support of Hindu temples and Mohammedan mosques, for the simple reason that England is not a conquered country. The great bulk at any rate of the money spent in India for ecclesiastical purposes forms an essential part of the outlay required for our English garrisons. It is rather a branch of the civil and military expenditure, than a charge for the maintenance of an alien Church. The State-paid clergy are as necessary adjuncts to the public services as the State-paid doctors, and the bishops do the work of head-chaplains. It is a mistake perhaps to give grants in aid to mission schools, but the natives at any rate do not object to make use of the schools.

A great deal of shrewd wisdom, boiled down into pithy paragraphs, may be said to characterise Mr. Halliday's little book. It is divided into four chapters, three of which deal respectively with British Rule in India, Armaments, and the Frontier, while the fourth briefly reviews the present state and prospects of our Indian Empire. Almost every paragraph has its own heading, and contains in itself the fruits of careful reading and sound thinking, served up in clear and pointed language. It is in fact a collection of loose "thoughts" on Indian subjects, grouped together in a certain order and relation to a common head of inquiry. These thoughts, like well-trained skirmishers, cover much ground and rarely miss their mark. In the space of a few pages, for example, we have a series of brief, well-aimed remarks on the growth of modern nationalities, on the diversities of race and creed in India, the contrasts between Moghal and British rule, the sources of confidence in the latter, the probable results of its downfall; on its influence over the native States and native opinion, on the peculiarities of native character, the custom of adoption among native princes, the treatment of natives by English officers, and of both by the State; on the tendency to chronic strife in India, on the native belief in the marvellous; the annexation of Oudh; on railways, sanitation, irrigation, agriculture, coal, revenue, and the Wahabi conspiracy. To show how neatly he can bring out the pith of any important question, let us hear him speak of the treatment of the old Company's officers on the breaking up of the regimental system:—

A legal quibble was taken advantage of to deny officers compensation for the loss of the bonus on their leaving the service, although the same had been sanctioned by the former Government, and guaranteed by Parliament in the Act commonly designated "The Henley Clause." The unfairness of this proceeding has been further demonstrated by the fact of the officers of the British service obtaining their over-regulation purchase money, and the officers of the new Line regiments the bonus usual in their corps. These latter officers were at one time in the service of the East India Company. It is not too much to say that the Administration of India has been carried on by the devotion and personal character of the officers of the State, both civil and military. They looked up to the Government with reverence, and were ready to sacrifice themselves to advance its interests. It is sad to think that all this is changed; and that, instead of looking upon the State as a protector and friend, the officers should regard it as an enemy. In this condition of things it is superfluous to say that the service is thoroughly demoralised.

Here we have the whole of a long vexed question packed into a nutshell without any loss either of clearness or of argumentative force. In the same way we are told that since the formation of the Staff Corps, "the vessel of the Native Army has been drifting nearer and nearer to the rocks, till at last the wreck is complete. The army is now a huge disorganised mass, and those in authority are afraid to meddle any more with it, as every effort to make matters right has only resulted in increased failure." So again the new barracks—built to satisfy an ignorant cry from this country—are hit off as "immense masses of building, which are ovens in the hot weather, and in the Upper Provinces too cold in the cold weather," which are placed in positions of no strategical importance, and like all barracks in India, "occupied by large bodies of European troops, with their families and camp-followers, have a tendency to become unhealthy after a period." Much better would it be, we hold with this writer, to locate our English soldiers "in small bodies, in particular localities, as far as the exigencies of the service will admit, and in barracks built of cheap materials, the roof being of thatch, and not of chunam or tiles, which retain the heat."

THEIST VERSUS BRAHMO.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Permit me to correct an unfortunate blunder in a paragraph in the Indian Mirror, which was copied into your issue of October 9, under the heading of "A New Missionary." In this paragraph Miss Annette Akroyd, who has just gone out to India with the intention of working for the education of the Bengali women, is commended for her benevolence, "though neither Christian nor Theist." The inevitable inference is that she must be an Atheist—an inference which is entirely erroneous, and has given her much pain. The writer, doubtless, used the term "Theist" as synonymous with "Brahmo," and only meant that Miss Akroyd did not belong to his own type; but this would not be understood by English readers, and such a narrowing of the term "Theist" has inadvertently led him into doing a serious injustice to the lady whom he really wishes to serve.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

S. D. COLLET.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I am glad to learn that the East Indian Railway Company have protested against the octroi at Delhi, octroi being in India the official name for licensed extortion.

I beg you to urge the Secretary of State for India to consult with Sir Charles Trevelyan and Lord Lawrence, and to issue positive orders to the champion of octroi, the Hon. the Lieut. Governor of the Punjab, to discontinue levying this barbarous tax.

It is strange that the Lieut. Governor should continue to disregard the instructions of his benefactor and patron contained in the Resolution of the Right Hon. the Viceroy in Council, published in the Supplement to the Government Gazette of Nov. 14, 1868.—Your obedient servant,

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I have only now seen your paper of the 14th, in which you impugn the correctness of some statements contained in my letter of the 5th on the subject of irrigation works in India. The evidence taken by the Indian Finance Committee during the last session will be published, I understand, on the 31st of this month; and, if you will look over such portions of it as relate to the above subject, you will, I feel sure, be induced to modify considerably the favourable opinion you have formed of the works in question. You will see that the Ganges Canal, instead of yielding a net revenue of $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., as seems to have been Colonel Chesney's impression when he gave his evidence last year, has, under the most favourable circumstances, not yielded half that rate. Quoting from memory and in round numbers, the construction of the canal cost two and a-half millions sterling, or, with charges and interest less earnings, about four millions. The net revenue of late years has been about £90,000, or at the rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the total outlay, while the Government have to pay 5 per cent. interest on the money borrowed for its construction. The Jumna canals, which you mention, were excavated by the native Government, our predecessors, and my letter therefore did not relate to them. The Orissa canals, when their construction was sanctioned, were estimated to yield annually £400,000 from irrigation alone, viz., five shillings per acre on 1,600,000 acres, but this estimate has turned out very wide of the mark; the rate had to be reduced from five shillings to two shillings per acre; and, looking at the length of the canals open, a very small area has been irrigated in proportion to the estimate of 1,600,000 acres for the entire length. Reckoning future earnings according to the experience actually obtained, the estimated return of £400,000 seems likely to dwindle down to £40,000. The Godavery works, which were looked upon as a great success, appear now from General Strachey's evidence to be likewise a complete failure, and it is very doubtful whether any return will ever be obtained from the capital sunk in those works.

I am glad you agree with me in thinking that trustworthy and regular reports should be published on the progress and results of the irrigation works in India, and I trust that the subject will have the attention of Parliament, in connection with the finances of India; for the annual losses occasioned by those works have to be made good by increased taxation, at a time when taxation has already been pushed beyond limits consistent with prudence and safety.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Times, in a leader last week, exposed some of the causes of that deep discontent which the Income-tax created in India; but there are others which will show in a more striking light how great was the suffering inflicted on the people, and will explain the statement made by the Hon. Mr. Inglis in the Viceregal Council of India, that the tax is odious to the people who pay it and odious to the officers who have to collect it.

The smallest income assessable by law was at first £50, then £75, and is now £100. Nevertheless, hundreds of thousands of persons, earning scarcely £20 annually, were assessed as possessing incomes of £50, £75, and £100, especially in the agricultural districts; and as they were unable to pay the tax, their goods and chattels were seized and sold, the proceeds scarcely ever being sufficient to satisfy the Government demand, whence the poverty of the individuals assessed became evident. Many bribed the underlings who were charged with drawing up the preliminary lists, in order to keep their names out of those lists, and others, among the wealthier classes, bribed the assistants in the assessor's office to have their assessments reduced. Thus, while the Government failed in obtaining from the prosperous portion of the population their legal share of the tax, the poor were frightfully oppressed and the people were demoralised by being driven to seek protection in bribery and corruption.

THE BONUS QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—May I ask you for the information and benefit of Indian officers, to give publicity to the following sketch of what the Bonus Compensation Committee have been doing in the past session, and of their future movements:—

The Bonus Compensation case was to have been brought before Parliament early in July last, when the illness, and subsequent (greatly to be deplored) death of our faithful friend and leader, Colonel Sykes, M.P., gave a temporary check to our proceedings. Immediately after this sad event I met Colonel Jervis, M.P., and a committee of our other friends and supporters in the House of Commons, and they were unanimously of opinion that it would be inexpedient and impolitic to bring our case on so late in the Session, and therefore strongly recommended its postponement until next Session, when it will (D.V.) be brought forward at the earliest possible date. I was at the same time assured that our cause would not suffer by the delay, as it was steadily gaining ground in the House, the sympathy of many M.P.'s being with us.

The Bonus Compensation Committee (which has not amalgamated with, and has no intention of amalgamating with any other committee) has now been working steadily and surely for the last four years, and it has hitherto been most fortunate in securing Parliamentary interest, which it has every prospect of materially extending during the present recess, and I hereby beg to notify on behalf of their Committee (over which I preside) that out of the 151 petitions presented this year only five reached the House through other hands, than ours. We have still a few petitions in hand, which reached us too late for presentation this Session, but they will be presented (with any others that may be forwarded to us) when Parliament re-assembles.

Officers who have already sent petitions to the Bonus Compensation Committee (care of Messrs. Grindlay and Co.) need not renew them, as those previously sent will stand good for next Session; but I would impress on all other officers who have claims for the loss of their regimental bonus to make out their petitions, according to the form supplied by Messrs. Grindlay and Co., 55, Parliament-street, or through their agents at the three different Presidencies without delay. A subscription of Rs. 10 is invited from all officers who are interested, and who have not already subscribed, towards defraying the expenses of the movement. Any further information may be obtained by personal application to the Bonus Committee, which meets at one P.M. on Tuesdays, at Messrs. Grindlay and Co.'s, 55, Parliament-street, or by writing to the President, at the same address.

A general petition for retired officers is lying at Messrs. Grindlay and Co.'s for signature.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,
J. C. PHILLIPS,

Lieut. Col., President, Bonus Committee.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR MR. EDITOR,—Observing in your paper of the 14th inst. a notice from the Committee of the Indian Army Defence Institution "that they have recommenced their labours from this time in view of the approaching Parliamentary Session, when they trust that arrangements will be made in conjunction with the Bonus Compensation Committee to bring the Bonus question before the House of Commons," &c., &c., as an interested party I should be glad to know what good this institution has up to the present time effected? Of what its future labours are to consist, and in what manner it proposes to control the action of the Indian Government in the future?

My object being the recovery of my regimental bonus, I have narrowly watched the action of the Indian Army Defence Institution, and the Bonus Compensation Committee, and I have come to the conclusion that the work has hitherto been like Irish reciprocity, all on one side, namely, that of the latter Committee, whose exertions under the banner of our regretted champion, the late Colonel Sykes, M.P., resulted in a Parliamentary victory in June, 1870, which victory, by keeping our grievance before the House, enables us again to press our claims. On the other hand, it appears to me that the Indian Army Defence Institution (which started into existence three years after the Bonus Compensation Committee), although it issues such grand programmes of its intended proceedings, has hitherto signally failed in its performances.

The wording of the notice above quoted would appear to imply a probability of the two Committees amalgamating, which I know (from good authority) to be the wish of the Indian Army Defence Institution, but I know equally well that there is no foundation for such an idea, the Bonus Compensation Committee adhering to a decision they arrived at long ago (under sound advice) to pursue rigidly their independent action.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,

DEEDS, NOT WORDS.

THE SLAVE TRADE AT ZANZIBAR.

The Times of India asserts that the Commission of 1860, so far as proposals and practical suggestions could go, carried forward the work of reformation, in which they in great measure carried the Imam and Sultan with them, by dint of that tact, common sense, and persuasive personal influence which Indian officers of the Honourable Company knew (and still know) how to use, but which is a thing that has no place in the philosophy of the British Foreign Office. But with the growth of Zanzibar trade, and with that increased purchasing power which even Arabia and the Gulf acquired during that period, the slave trade had grown apace towards 1860; while, as Sir William Coghlan bitterly observes, the British Government had utterly neglected the means which Indian officers and negotiators—Residents at Zanzibar, Aden and in the Gulf—had, through a world of pains, placed in its hands. The General himself seems to have been met at the Foreign Office with very little better than civil sneers, and that department needlessly neglected the means of accomplishing that great end for which that decorous assembly, the House of Peers, recently allowed itself to be agitated by a wave of humane enthusiasm and in the name of which her Majesty's ministers have made a high sounding flourish in the Queen's Speech. Both these writers serve to confirm what we said a fortnight since as to the hollowness and factitious character of the Ministerial cry about putting down the East African slave trade. If there had been sincere and consistent feeling on the subject in those quarters, very much might have been done seven or eight years ago to check the traffic, and as General Coghlan points out, provide for its gradual and equitable extinction. Well may he write—"with this retrospect I may be pardoned if my hope for the future is not great." The mood in which competent men like Sir William, Mr. Badger, and their predecessors write of and treat this difficult subject, is that of experienced experts, as compared with the moralising gasconades of the amateurs at the Treasury and Foreign Office. Doubtless there is behind all this fuss a good deal of sincere philanthropic feeling, but we have only to speak of the politicians who affect to lead this pretentious crusade. It must be confessed that when we see the polite and refined Ayrton, the generous and susceptible Lowe deeply concerned to rescue the poor slaves in Africa—it is a touching sight to shame these cynical times. As to the "international" recipe, the proposed consultation with America, France, and Portugal, that is merely the "nothing like leather" of the irresponsible and irremovable "M. Jobus" of the British Foreign Office, and is almost a transparent device for doing nothing, or an excuse for looking away from the real difficulties that will have to be grappled with. After this programme—knowing as we do that the British Treasury and Foreign Office have ignored and disregarded information under its hands for years past—we may fully share the apprehension of Sir William Coghlan when he says:—"The benevolent intentions of our Government will be defeated—smothered under a load of diplomatic correspondence perhaps for years, during which time the horrid traffic will flourish and the admiral in command will cry out for more gunboats."

HIMALAYAN SCENERY.

The Indian Daily News points out that, if snow-clad summits, difficult passes, glaciers, avalanches, crevasses, bergschrunds, and a hundred other terrible things, serve to lend zest and enjoyment to the scrambles of the Alpine tourist, the Himalayas present these phenomena on a grander scale. Not far from Simla the tourist may traverse passes as high as the summits of any of the giants of the Bernese Oberland, and scramble up peaks almost double the height of Mont Blanc. In point of scenery, there is admittedly nothing to compare with the mountains and valleys leading to Kooloo and Lahoul. After crossing the Rohtung Pass, where Lord Elgin is said to have accelerated, by over exertion, the heart disease of which he died, the tourist may plant his feet on glaciers and ice-fields. He may have his nerves braced by the most splendid of climates, and may indeed learn—

To mix his blood with sunshine, and to take
The winds into his pulses!

But there are few comparatively who undertake a tour among the snows of the Himalayas. The roads in some parts are thoroughly bad. The bridges here and there are primitive, consisting of a jhoola, or rope cradle, flung across the mountain-torrent, and the rest-houses in many places have fallen into decay. But with all this, it is a pity that our holiday folk do not form a closer acquaintanceship with the Alps of this country. The fact is that the attractions of the Himalayas are not sufficiently known. People do not write books about them as they do of the Swiss mountains; most of the information regarding them is locked up in official reports. Guide books, such as they are, say nothing, or very little, of their charms. There are, of course, heaps of scientific notes on the Himalayas, containing dreary calculations about the dip of the needle, barometrical pressure, magnetic poles, and topics of that sort, that may be of interest to the members of the Royal Society, but which on men in general have merely the effect of expanding the jaws for the utterance of a protracted yawn. They want poetry and picturesqueness, in place of which we have minute descriptions of the strata and the scoræ, until the reader feels as if he had eaten for dessert half-a-dozen pippins grown on the shores of the Dead Sea.

INDIA'S MINERAL RESOURCES.

The Indian Daily News observes that India is rich in copper, tin, iron, and coal—especially the two last. Other minerals will, no doubt, be found when the mineral areas have been more thoroughly subjected to examination. Just now, however, coal and iron are in strong demand, and the duty which successive governments have put on one side can no longer be trifled with. As between itself and the public, the Government appears to expect capital to do the work without the interference, or leadership of the State. And this being so, it becomes necessary to see what the drawbacks are under which capital labours. As far as we know only four attempts to work iron ore in India have been made. Two are in progress in the valley of the Nerbudda; one was started by the Government in Kumaon, too far from any market, and failed; and one in Beerbhoom, after promising well, was found to have been badly selected. This last is now in native hands, and is not therefore likely to be carried out energetically. A glance at the map will show that the mineral area is exactly that part of India which is least known. It is peopled by races differing in language, manners, and civilisation from the superior races of the plains; it is covered for the most part by dense forests, which have secured for it, as a whole, a terrible reputation for unhealthiness; and as if these were not sufficient deterrent causes, it is held for the most part by semi-independent chiefs, or heads of clans, with systems of land tenure little known, and altogether unsatisfactory. Where, however, the Government is master of any portion of the mineral area, it has frightened capital away by its Waste Land Rules. No English capitalist will risk his money to acquire for a short period a grant of 5,000 biggahs; and even if he would do so, it so happens that the portions in the hands of the Government are farthest from centres of consumption, and consequently open to the objection of imposing on any works that may be undertaken prohibitive transport charges. The hills come close down to the capital, but they are not so well known as Peshawar, for the reasons we have given. In Beerbhoom there is iron in plenty, but then the other conditions for its successful working are wanting. It is for this reason that we have so often pointed to Hazareebaugh. Here the Government has the management of the native estates concerned, and could, if it would, make satisfactory arrangements. Hazareebaugh, too, is the nearest point to the capital where coal, iron, and limestone are found in any quantities within workable distance of each other. As we have remarked in previous articles, the Government has the greatest interest in this question, and should lead the van in a new and important enterprise. If however the capitalist is expected to do the work, the Government must abandon its restrictions regarding waste lands, with reference to the peculiar circumstances it has to meet, and abandon its favourite policy of so working the Waste Land Rules, as to endeavour to tempt "respectable natives" to accept them. This policy has utterly failed, even in agricultural enterprises. When we come to the working of Indian minerals, the natives themselves will be the first to scout it as absurd. Here, either the Government itself, or English capital, must do what is required; and to encourage capital to come forward, Government must forget its traditions, and accommodate its policy to the occasion which has arisen.

THE UNHEALTHINESS OF PHILLOUR.—There must surely be some local circumstances, probably admitting of mitigation by wise sanitary measures, to make the fort of Phillour so exceptionally unhealthy. Captain Newbolt's company of H.M.'s 54th Regiment, which marched in, 61 strong, in the month of August, had been within a month of their arrival, every single man, for a longer or shorter time, in hospital. It is natural to attribute in some measure to the weakness thus produced the fatal virulence of the subsequent cholera. As soon as the disease broke out, the detachment was marched into camp, and every precaution taken. Nevertheless, they lost eleven by cholera, which with three and the wife of a sergeant by fever, makes a mortality of fifteen in so short a time, out of so small a number. There were still, a short time ago, eleven men left behind in the Phillour camp in hospital, some of them in a precarious condition.—Pioneer.

TRADE OF THE PUNJAB.—Notwithstanding the scarcity—amounting, indeed, almost to famine—in 1869-70, the trade of the Punjab was much the same that year as in the preceding one. The total trade, external and internal, excluding the river and railway returns, was as follows:—

		Maunds.	Value.
1869-70	...	1,70,12,601	15,39,89,421

The countries and provinces with which the external trade is carried on are the Sikh States, Puttiala, &c., north-west frontier, Central Asia, Central India, and various British provinces. The trade with each, in order of value, is compared with that of the previous year in the following table:—

		Maunds.	Value.
British Provinces	1868-69	15,28,645	Rs. 2,03,78,291
	1869-70	18,03,918	2,58,94,337
Central India	1868-69	31,75,022	1,92,21,886
	1869-70	23,50,278	1,17,30,578
North-West Frontier	1868-69	2,63,925	53,90,334
	1869-70	2,47,299	88,47,500
Sikh States	1868-69	12,89,999	71,88,016
	1869-70	10,63,558	76,59,333
Hill States	1868-69	87,509	5,09,746
	1869-70	77,886	7,43,778
Total	1868-69	63,45,100	Rs. 5,26,85,223
	1869-70	55,42,039	5,48,75,826

There was, therefore, an increase (with the exception of the Central India Provinces) in value of Rs. 21,90,603, but a decrease in amount of 8,02,161 maunds. The returns show a considerable increase in the import of silk and charas, the amount of the latter being double, and that of the former quadruple, the amount imported during the previous year. Three-fourths of the silk is imported from Cabul, and charas is chiefly brought from Cabul, Bokhara, and Yarkand. It is thought that the encouragement given to these trades by the Peshawar and Palumpore fairs may have in some degree caused the increase. Of eight lacs' worth of tea imported from the seaboard, upwards of one-half crossed the north-west frontier. The market for tea so exported is Peshawar, and the leaf is almost exclusively from China. The export trade of cotton (four times that of the previous year) amounted to 10,000 maunds, valued at 17½ lacs of rupees; seven and a-half lacs were imported from the Sikh States and Central India, and a large portion of the exports went to the North-Western Provinces, Sind, and Kurrachee. The export of indigo was chiefly to Sind and Cabul.

EARTHQUAKE AT GOALPARA.—Letters from Goalpara, Lower Assam, state that a smart shock of earthquake was felt there on the evening of the 12th September, and another on the morning of the 13th.

DARJELING.—The rate proposed to be levied on the tea-planters of Darjeling for the payment of the European doctor and his native assistants to look after the health of the workmen on the different estates has been fixed at eight annas per acre of cultivation.

CALCUTTA PRESIDENCY JAIL.—It is rumoured that the Presidency Jail is in a very unhealthy condition at present, several deaths having occurred within the past few weeks; diarrhoea, dysentery, and fevers have been the order of the day, and the last fatal case was one of small-pox.—Indian Daily News.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—In consequence of the encroachments of the Ganges on the East Indian Railway in the Bhagalpore district, a strip of land, one mile in length and twenty-five feet in breadth, is to be taken up by Government for the purpose of constructing a diversion of the present line of railway.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—The Orissa division has been reconstituted into two charges in the Public Works Department. One is the Balasore division, of which Mr. W. McCleery has been appointed executive engineer, and the other comprises Cuttack, Pooree, and the tributary Mehals to which Mr. F. Bond has been appointed.

DENGUE IN THE HOLY CITY.—We hear from Benares that the dengue, after raging in the city, has "put in appearance" at Secrole, the European portion of the station. In the city scarcely a house escaped, and in one instance, where a household numbered forty-seven persons, every one was attacked within a couple of days.—Indian Daily News.

ACCOUNTANT GENERAL P.W.D.—We (Indian Daily News) hear that Captain Gordon, R.E., Deputy Consulting Engineer to the Government of India and Examiner of Railway Accounts, with the assistance of Lieutenant Bissett, R.E., has been directed by the India Government to inspect the office of the Accountant General, Public Works Department, and to report the result of such inspection to the Supreme Government.

AGRA.—Major-General Daly, C.B., Agent, Governor-General for Central India, came in yesterday under the salute due to his rank. His Highness the Maharajah of Gwalior also arrived under the usual salute. The troops, we are glad to be able to say, have been quite free from cholera since the 8th instant. Dengue is still prevalent among them, however. The 1st N.I. had 140 men in hospital yesterday morning.—Delhi Gazette, Sept. 21.

MEDICAL.—The report on the Medical Institutions of Calcutta for 1871 enables us to take a comprehensive view of their increasing usefulness. The year, taking it all round, was remarkably healthy, yet the number of patients was 244,410 as against 208,833 in 1870. Of these 194,000 were treated in the Medical College, the General, the two Municipal, and the Calcutta Hospitals, and the death-rate in each of these institutions materially decreased.

THE LATE GARROW RAID.—Yesterday morning twenty-two men were selected by the magistrate of Howrah, out of a large number who had volunteered for the purpose, for service in the Mymensingh district in connection with the late Garrow raid. Two hundred men, from ten districts, containing, by order of the Lieutenant-Governor, only 30 per cent. of foreigners have, we hear, been selected for this service, and will start for the frontier on the 28th instant.—Englishman, Sept. 25.

THE KUKA EXECUTIONS.—The Simla paper hears that the Governor-General has called upon the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab to explain whether the letter purporting to have been addressed by his Highness the Maharajah of Puttiala to his Honour was a genuine one, and if so, whether it was published by the authority of the Punjab Government; or independently by the Maharajah of Puttiala. It is evident that the Viceroy is determined to sift the Kuka business to the bottom.

HASAN ABDAL.—It may interest some of our readers to know that Hasan Abdal (not Hasan Abdul, as it has become the fashion to call it), the place selected for this year's camp of exercise, is called after a famous Muhammadan saint, Biba Hasan Abdal, a Sayyid of Sabzwār, in Khurāsān, who came to India with Mirzā Shāh Rukh, son of Timur, and died at Kandahār, and whose tomb is much resorted to by pilgrims. Jahāngir, in his memoir, says:—"To-day I arrived at Biba Hasan Abdal. About a kos east of the town is a waterfall, the water of which rushes down with great rapidity. There is none like it in Kābul, but there are two or three like it in Kashmir. In the middle is a tank, from which the river flows. Rājā Mān Singh has built here a little villa. There are a great number of fish in the tank, half a yard and a quarter yard long. As the place is so nice, I stayed here for three days, and drank wine with my friends. I also enjoyed fishing. The fishes are caught with peculiar nets, which are difficult to be used. I caught twelve, had pearls strung through their snouts, and set them free."—Englishman.

DACCA COLLEGE.—The students (native) of the Dacca College have petitioned his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for a gymnasium. This college has already cricket and boating clubs.

PRESENTS FOR THE VICEROY.—The Amir of Kábul has, a contemporary informs us, given orders to the Governor of Turkistan to send handsome specimens of silks and other articles manufactured there, together with some horses and camels, fit for presents to Lord Northbrook. Sardár Yakub Khán has been ordered to send some carpets and other sorts of Hirát manufactures, and the Governor of Kaudáhar to supply a quantity of the best fruits. It is also reported that the Amir intends to visit the camp at Hassan Abdul.

THE LATE MAJOR ORMAN.—The Pioneer announces the death at Roorkee of another well-known and popular officer. Major C. E. Orman, cantonment magistrate at that station, expired very suddenly on the night of Sept. 16. The deceased officer was the life and soul of Roorkee society, and was universally and most deservedly respected by all classes. Major Orman originally belonged to the old 29th Bengal N.I., and had been cantonment magistrate at Roorkee for many years.

CHOLERA IN THE PUNJAB.—During the week ended Saturday, the 31st August, the number of deaths registered from cholera in the Punjab amounted to 1,084, being an increase of 331 over those registered in the previous week. No less than 172 towns and villages have suffered, the principal increase during the week having been in the Jullundhur, Hoshiarpore, Gurdaspore, and Gujranwala districts. The places in which the largest number of deaths occurred were Hoshiarpore, 153; Loodiana, 137; Gurdaspore, 130; Gujranwala, 114; Jullundhur, 101; Lahore, 99; and Kohat, 72.

BENGAL P. W. DEPARTMENT.—We understand that Mr. W. M. Vivian, appointed engineer-apprentice to Bengal by the Public Works Department to the Government of India, is posted to the third Calcutta Division of the Bengal Provincial Establishment. Mr. Thomas S. Isaac, C.E., Executive Engineer, 1st grade, officiating as Superintending Engineer, North-Eastern Circle, Bengal, Buildings and Roads Branch, D. P. W., having been promoted to Superintending Engineer, 3rd grade, by the Government of India, is confirmed in the North-Eastern Circle, Dacca.—Englishman.

THE NEW EVIDENCE ACT.—The law of estoppel and the plea of res judicata have effectually been put an end to by the New Evidence Act. This is calculated to increase litigation to a very serious extent, particularly in the Courts of Small Causes in the Presidency towns. A judgment is only final in respect of the sum sought to be recovered in the suit in which it is given. The same point and the same facts may be gone into and contested in the very next suit against the same defendant. The plea of estoppel or res judicata cannot be raised.—Englishman, Sept. 25.

RETRENCHMENT IN THE BENGAL CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT.—It is said that the Superintendent of the Customs Preventive Service has been called upon by the Government of Bengal for a report as to the feasibility of reducing the present number of preventive officers. It is believed that a reduction could be made without in any way impairing the efficiency of the service. It is proposed to reduce one officer in each grade in case of casualties. Promotion in the service has hitherto been very slow, and the proposed reduction will make it still worse.—Englishman.

A SEEMLY REBUKE.—The Indian Mirror condemns the conduct of Mr. S. B. Thakur in even stronger language than some of the English journals. It says that his onslaught on the Archbishop of Canterbury "was as much destitute of good taste as it certainly showed in some respects a want of good sense. . . . It is discouraging to compare the respectful tone and moderation with which the British public have treated the highest functionary of the Church of England with the shabby and conceited commonplace which two of our own countrymen have hurled upon his devoted head."

TRADE OF THE PUNJAB.—The statistics of the trade of the Punjab during the past year show a falling off of nearly thirty lakhs of maunds in weight, and two millions sterling in value, as compared with that which preceded it, the decrease being attributable partly to the effects of the scarcity, and partly to the Franco-Prussian war, which caused a diminution of some eight lakhs of rupees in the exports of pashmina. The exports of grain decreased one-half. There was also a great falling off in the silk and indigo trades, and the imports of rice sank to one half. The exports of cotton also fell off one-half, while the imports of salt were doubled, and the imports of English piece-goods increased from forty-eight to fifty-eight lakhs of rupees.

A PLEASANT MEETING.—A rogue elephant is said to have attacked the mail cart between Kaladoongee and Moradabad, and to have killed the grass-cutter riding behind. A European sitting on the front seat escaped so far as to be able to continue the journey to Moradabad, but was injured enough to require his staying there for four or five days. It will be a shame if the many sportsmen of Nynce Tal will not in a short time rid the road of the brute. At present he holds sway over the whole road, and prevents travellers passing, though our letters come as usual. I believe he is the same one reported to have committed some depredations about a month ago near Ramnugger, after whom Mr. Greig, of the Forest Department, made an expedition, but did not succeed in tracing him.

FIRE AT CALCUTTA.—A fire broke out last Sunday evening in the premises occupied by the Oriental Gas Company in Halliday-street. About twenty barrels of pitch and tar were consumed. It was at one time thought to send a message to the police compound, for the assistance of the fire brigade, but it was found unnecessary to do so. The local police exerted themselves strenuously in separating the unignited portions from those that had ignited, and this had the desired effect. What had ignited, however, smouldered till morning, during the whole of which time the police kept a constant look out, so as to prevent an explosion.—Indian Delhi News, Sept. 20.

THE CHIEF OF ULWAR.—A correspondent, whose communication appears in the usual place, complains bitterly of the treatment which the Ulwar Chieftain has received from the Government. If the facts which he states are correct—and we see no reason for questioning them—then we must say that the punishment of this unfortunate Chieftain has been carried too far, whatever may have been his offence. But our correspondent says he has committed none against the Government. It appears singular that a chieftain who had won the good opinion of Lord Lawrence and the late Earl of Mayo, as an able and energetic ruler, should now be found utterly incompetent to govern his territories, and subjected to every kind of humiliation and disgrace. We trust Lord Northbrook will institute an inquiry into all the circumstances connected with the case of the Ulwar Chieftain.—Mofussilite.

THE CHOLERA AT MEERUT.—On Friday afternoon Colonel John S. Frith, R.A., died of cholera at Meerut. There were three other fatal cases of cholera on the same day. Colonel Frith's funeral took place on Saturday morning, the General and nearly all the commissioned officers in the station being present. The chaplain, Rev. Mr. Aberigh Mackay, read the burial service. There was no firing party. None has been allowed since the first outbreak of cholera. All the sick belonging to the Artillery, and nearly all the rank and file of the 105th and Artillery, are in tents. The heavy rain on Saturday must have made them very uncomfortable. Dengue fever seems to be abating among Europeans and natives; but we regret to say that up to last accounts cholera continued to carry off some victims daily. It is said that there has not been so much fatal sickness in Meerut for twenty years. But the cold weather is now drawing near, and we may hope that every week will bring a change for the better.—Delhi Gazette, Sept. 28.

AN ENGLISH COLONY IN THE HIMALAYAS.—The proposal to form a colony of Englishmen in the Himalayas is assuming a more practical shape than it has ever done hitherto, as a programme of what is intended to be carried out is published in the columns of the Delhi Gazette. Like most modern undertakings, it is to be carried out by means of a limited-liability company, called the Himalayan Colony Company Limited, with a capital of Rs. 500,000, in one thousand shares of Rs. 500 each, of which the first instalment of Rs. 100 is to be paid on January 1, 1873, and the remainder by similar instalments every three months. The locality selected is in the districts of Kumáon and Garhwál, at an elevation of from five to six thousand feet, conveniently near an excellent market, with water-power available for mills. The approach is by rail to Baranagar, and then by cart road. The principal settlement is to consist of a small town with church, schools, market, library, infirmary, and town-hall, with farms, plantations, and gardens around it. The government of the colony is to be vested in a Municipal Council to be elected by the shareholders, with a President elected by the Council; and Government is to be asked to invest the President and one or two other members of the Council with the powers of Justices of the Peace. Mr. H. Herbert, C.E., has been appointed honorary secretary.—Englishman.

MR. G. CAMPBELL.—We learn from Patna that, on Wednesday, the 11th September, the Lieutenant-Governor visited the Patna College and went round all the classes. He found a very large Civil Service class who were reading for the Subordinate Civil Service examinations in February next. After inspecting the institution, he met some of the leading people of the city and the college committee in the hall. He explained to them that Government had never intended to reduce its expenditure on the Patna College, but had proposed to substitute science classes for the third and fourth year, or B.A. classes. He, however, had learnt from the commissioner, and had satisfied himself, that there was a very unanimous feeling among the people of Patna in favour of retaining the present B.A. classes. Under the circumstances, therefore, he would yield to the very clearly expressed wishes of the people, and would maintain the third and fourth year arts classes. At the same time he would hope hereafter to find native professors for some of the college subjects, and in this way to find money for additional science and art classes. Mr. Campbell spoke in Hindustani (or in Urdu, whichever the language is to be called); and Wilayat Ali, a well-known loyal citizen, got up and expressed the satisfaction with which the Lieutenant-Governor's announcement would be received. Another Muhammadan gentleman added that there would be no objection whatever to the appointment of native professors to some of the chairs of the Arts Course.

THE INCOME TAX.—To the Editor of the Indian Daily News.—Sir,—I ask your attention and that of your readers to a simple statement of facts illustrating the cruel injustice caused by the Income-tax when it was professedly levied on persons whose income was over

Rs. 500 a year. At the village of Dum-Duma, about eighteen miles South from Calcutta, lives a man, named Sonaton Napi; as a barber he serves eight or ten houses, by which he obtains Rs. 6 or 8 in the year. He has no land of his own, but, acting under the influence of the longing which the poorest Bengali feels to have some land, he hires four bigbas, for which he pays a yearly rent of Rs. 20. The utmost produce he can hope for from this land in a favourable year will bring him Rs. 32, so that after paying his rent he may have Rs. 12 as clear profit. He adds to his miserable income by working as a day labourer, by which he earns, when employed, two annas a day, and in the busier seasons ten pice. I am certain his income is not more than Rs. 60 a year. I know this man, and have been to his house, and seen the wretched state in which he lives. He was assessed to the income-tax on an income of Rs. 600 a year, at the rate of one and a-half per cent., and paid Rs. 9! This sum was demanded, and he thought he must pay it. But how did he pay it? He probably had never in all his life had so much money, which he could call his own. He borrowed the amount from some money-lender and has been paying interest on the loan at the rate of ten annas a month ever since, so that in two years he has paid Rs. 15 for the loan of Rs. 9, which the Government took from him by its income-tax assessor. It is hardly likely that the man will ever be free from this to him terrible burden. I had hoped that this case, in common with others in the same neighbourhood, would have been enquired into, and the mischief done be, in some measure, rectified by the refunding of the money, so unrighteously taken from the poor. But my hope, I fear, is a vain one. I should have been glad if it had been in my power to have paid the money to the man myself. Comment on this case is needless on my part.—Yours, &c.,—GEO. KERRY, Sept. 7, 1872.

CYCLONE IN EASTERN BENGAL.—We have news of a severe gale on Friday last, which blew from about noon until dusk in the upper portion of Nuddea and the lower portion of the Pubna districts. The Decca and Furreedpore districts also did not escape. Two of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company's flats were run aground in a khal some ten miles above Goalando, and we learn that nine large country-boats laden with coal for Serajgunj were lost in the Brahmapootra. The loss of craft of this kind in the Eastern rivers is, we fear, serious. The greatest damage on land is observed near Kooshtea, where a large portion of the huts of each village have been blown down, and near that place a country-boat was blown from the Padda inland, and deposited on a heap of coal, with its cargo destroyed. Here the wind, though not sufficiently strong to cause any damage, partook of the nature of a cyclone, commencing from N.E. towards morning of the 20th, and gradually veering round to S.W. The cyclone, the western edge of which passed over Calcutta on the morning of the 20th, appears to have been severely felt to the east of Jenida. A correspondent, who was in a boat at Tikeri, about ten miles to the S.E. of that place, describes it as fully equal in severity to that of the 1st November, 1867. Houses were everywhere in ruins. The wind is said to have veered from N.E. through E. and S. to S.W., and to have blown with greatest force from the S.E. and S. Tikeri must, it seems, have been to the east of the centre. We learn that the cyclone of Friday last was felt with extraordinary severity at Serajgunj. The wind blew hard all Friday, commencing from the N.E., and gradually veering round through E. to S. and S.W. The barometer is said to have stood at 29.66 in the morning, and to have fallen gradually to 29.34 at 5 P.M., 29 deg. at 6 P.M., 28.90 half an hour later. The steamers Rajmatal and Simla, which were in a creek at Serajgunj, were both more or less damaged, the former losing her funnels and her roof, which was blown over to the other side of the creek. A flat belonging to Messrs. Begg, Dunlop, and Co. was landed high and dry by the force of the wind, and five other flats were more or less seriously damaged. Our correspondent counted three hundred wrecks of country boats in the neighbourhood of Serajgunj, and the loss of jute is said to be very large. The bungalows at Serajgunj are all destroyed; and several of them are said to have been blown bodily away.—Englishman, Sept. 27.

A NAUGHTY LITTLE RAJAH.

The Pudukottah Administration Report is a very meagre and ridiculous report indeed. It is, we are told, for "Fusly 1280." The Rajah is in debt, and the country anything but flourishing. Most of the matters treated of in the report are of a very petty character. The Government Order thereon is for the most part a mere résumé or echo of the report. From the following paragraph however we learn something new, viz., that the way to please Government is to increase the expenditure of the P. W. department:—

The Government notice with satisfaction the increased expenditure incurred on public works during 1870-71, amounting to Rs. 24,659, against Rs. 5,645 in 1869-70. They will be prepared to consider favourably any scheme for the reorganisation and more efficient working of this department of the Pudukottah State.

The close of the Government order is about the funniest piece of writing we ever came across. Our readers will bear in mind that the following refers to—a "Rajah"!

The Rajah was regular in his attendance in the Appeal Court, and disposed satisfactorily of public business, but the Government regret that the Officiating Political Agent is unable to report favourably on the Rajah's personal conduct.

(Signed) W. HUDLESTON, Officiating Chief Secretary.

If this sort of trifling goes on much longer we shall read of something like the following paragraph in a subsequent order thereon:—

"The Rajah took twenty-three pills and seven black draughts during the past year. The Government learn with satisfaction that the Rajah took the draughts without much trouble, but they must express their displeasure at the item which accompanies the apothecary's account, viz., 'fifty-six pots of strawberry jam, to enable the Rajah to swallow his pills without tasting them.' Mr. Cadell, the officiating political agent, is requested to decrease the number of pots to the number of pills, unless the Rajah, to obtain more pots, should take an excessive quantity of pills, in which case Mr. Cadell is authorised to substitute castor oil for the pills, and to stop the supply of jam altogether. The Government are also glad to learn that the Rajah has decreased his staff of dancing girls from thirty-one to twenty-nine, and is in other ways improved as to the moral tone of his personal conduct. If he progresses at this present brilliant rate, the Government have reason to expect he will attain to years of discretion before he grows to be seventy-five years of age."

To speak seriously, is it quite the thing for Government to pass orders on the personal conduct of any one, much less a subject whom they entitle a king?—Madras Athenæum.

Miscellaneous.

CAMP OF EXERCISE.—Six hundred thousand blank cartridges have arrived in Madras by the steamer Himalaya. They are intended for the use of the troops at the Camp of Exercise. The total amount sanctioned for the Camp is thirteen hundred thousand.

LITERARY.—It is said that scarcely half a dozen copies of the 1,000 copies printed of the late Mr. Charles Gover's Folk Songs of Southern India remain unsold. He was engaged shortly before his death in the translation and compilation of a second series of his songs.

DENGUE IN MADRAS.—It was proposed in the Madras Chamber of Commerce the other day to close the mercantile establishments of the city for a week, to give clerks and others who had been "down with dengue" a holiday in which to recruit their strength; but the proposal was not carried.

A LARGE WHITE SHARK CAUGHT AT MADRAS.—A fine specimen of the common white shark was captured on the evening of the 17th by some catamaran men, who, with the help of a number of soldiers of H.M. 21st Regiment, dragged it on shore opposite to the Band Beach, where it lay for some time the object of great interest to a large number of spectators. In length it measured eleven feet eleven inches, and about five feet eight inches in girth. The way in which the huge brute occasionally winked his right eye and opened his capacious jaws was very suggestive to the weak mortals that surrounded him.—Madras Mail.

CATTLE-POISONING.—The Cochin Argus tells us of the way in which a hungry pariah tried to get a meal. He saw a fat bullock belonging to a rich neighbour, and he longed to be tasting it. So he concealed some poison in a handful of grass, which he gave to the young bullock, whilst it was innocently grazing under the care of a cowherd. The very next morning he went to the owner's house to see if the bullock was dead, hoping to be permitted as usual to use it for food. The pariah was however found out in this instance and brought before a magistrate, to whom he confessed his crime. We believe this instance is not a solitary one. The crime is often committed just for the sake of the flesh and skin. Some years ago if a horse was sent from an up-country station, and had to pass through Nellore it was almost sure to be made away with by the chucklers.—Madras Times.

THE LATE MR. C. GOVER.—We regret to record the death, at the early age of thirty-five years, of Mr. C. E. Gover, sanitary inspector to the municipality of Madras, and author of several works on Indian folk lore. Mr. Gover (says the Athenæum) at the time of his death was, and for some time previously had been, engaged in the work of tabulating and completing the returns of the census of the Madras Presidency recently taken, and the zeal and energy he brought to bear in the discharge of this duty caused him to overwork himself, thereby aggravating a complaint he had for some time been suffering from. This, accompanied with an attack of dengue fever, was the immediate cause of his death. The municipality and Government have lost the services of an able officer in the decease of this gentleman. Who Mr. Gover's successor as sanitary inspector may be is not known. It is, however, generally supposed that some medical man will be selected for the appointment, and it is rumoured that the Government contemplate perpetrating a job by appointing the present health officer of Madras sanitary inspector to the municipality, in addition to the first named appointment which that gentleman holds.

A WARNING TO REUTER.—A good deal of anxiety has been felt in Madras during the last week with regard to the s.s. J. Stevenson, which sailed from Madras, bound for London, via the Suez Canal, about the middle of July, with several passengers on board from this city. A telegram from Reuter, received on Wednesday last, announced that the ship had been burnt off Lisbon. Later information from a private source stated that the passengers had arrived safely in London. And a still later telegram from Reuter informs us that the vessel has, also, arrived in London. The fire, it appears, which at first was thought to have destroyed the whole ship, extended only to a portion of the vessel. A second accident also befel her, viz., that of getting aground. We shall of course have to wait the receipt of full information from England before we can know the particulars of this double disaster. There is one matter, however, in reference to it, which we may allude to here, viz., the dilatoriness on the part of the owners of the vessel, as well as on the part of Reuter, in forwarding immediate information of the mishap. No less a period than a whole fortnight from the time of the accident was allowed to elapse before intelligence of it was communicated to Madras. This is unpardonable neglect on the part of the owners, who owed it to all who had friends on board to make them acquainted, as speedily as possible, with the disaster which had befallen the vessel. On Reuter's part the neglect is unpardonable by the public of India, who, he may be assured, will not patiently submit to such treatment. In fact it is high time something was done with regard to our telegraph service. The public press pays Reuter enormously for telegrams, and yet are treated by him in the most indifferent manner in respect of both the number and kind of telegrams he sends us. Important public information is frequently altogether omitted by him in his messages to the Press, while messages to merchants and others are known often to contain such information, and which ultimately reach the public second-hand through those channels. The Press of India does not pay Reuter at an enormous rate to be so treated by him, and will not much longer, he may be assured, bear with these shortcomings. His last piece of negligence in reference to the J. Stevenson has created a great amount of indignation towards him, and we should not be surprised were immediate steps to be taken for securing a better agency than Reuter's has, for some time past at least, proved itself to be.—Madras Athenæum.

THE OLD BANK OF BOMBAY.

A meeting of the shareholders of the bank in liquidation was held at the office of the liquidators in Elphinstone Circle on Friday last.

Mr. Spencer, senior, having been voted to the chair, Mr. Rodgie, the liquidator, read the notice convening the meeting. He said that the last meeting had been very inadequately attended, there being only two shareholders present, and they not forming a quorum, no regular business could be transacted. It was then mentioned by the liquidator that an endeavour would be made to get Government to pass a short Act, which would assist the liquidator in his efforts to wind up the bank and remedy some faults existing in the present Act and in the charter of the bank. A memorial signed by some dozen shareholders was sent in to Government, and the liquidator himself saw several Government officials personally about the matter, but Government had decided not to grant their request, and the following reply had been received from them :—

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 2,875, 2nd inst., wherein, under the circumstances mentioned, you request to be informed whether Government will assist the bank by passing a short Act to amend the present Act of Incorporation of the bank. In reply I am desired to state that Government are not inclined to take the action proposed.

F. R. S. WYLLIE.

Every possible plan had been tried to close up the liquidation, and, unless it were speedily done, there would be no other course than to put the bank under the High Court.

The following resolutions were then proposed and carried :—

Proposed by Mr. J. F. Spencer, and seconded by Mr. J. F. Vaz :—
“That in order to provide for the debts and liabilities of the bank still outstanding, the sum of Rs. 51,635 be paid by the bank to Messrs. G. R. Wilson and William Watson, both residing in Bombay, gentlemen, on the sum of Rs. 10,000 being paid by Mr. William Rodgie, the liquidator of the bank, to the said G. R. Wilson and William Watson.”

Proposed by Mr. N. Spencer, and seconded by Mr. J. F. Vaz :—
“That the said sums of Rs. 51,635 and Rs. 10,000, making together the sum of Rs. 61,635, be held by the said G. R. Wilson and William Watson upon the trusts for the payment of all claims in respect of the outstanding debts and liabilities of the bank which shall be satisfactorily established before the 13th of January, 1874, and after that date for the benefit of Mr. William Rodgie, subject to any claim in respect of the said debts and liabilities which shall have been made before that date, contained in a deed, the draft whereof has been produced and read to this meeting to be made between the bank of the first part, the said William Rodgie of the second part, and the said George Ramsay Wilson and William Watson of the third part.”

Mr. Langley then read the deed of agreement.

Proposed by Mr. Bhickajee, and seconded by Mr. Spencer, jun. :—
“That as soon as the said deed shall have been duly executed, and the said sums of Rs. 51,635 and Rs. 10,000 paid to the said George Ramsay Wilson and William Watson, the proper steps be forthwith taken for completing the liquidation of the bank and distributing the surplus assets thereof and dissolving the bank according to the provisions of section XCV. (sub-sections 10 and 11) of Act XIX. of 1857 of the Legislative Council of India.”

This being all the business to be transacted, the meeting then separated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—Bombay Gazette, Sept. 20.

STATION TALK.

DEOLALEE, Sept. 16.—After my peregrinations I now sit down to pen you a few lines, and endeavour to give you some news from this quiet little station. Last Monday the Brigadier-General and the Assistant Quartermaster-General arrived here by the midday train. In the evening the Brigadier inspected the troops, numbering about twenty men in all, and then the bazaar. Next morning he rode out and paid a visit to the new hospital which is in course of construction, and I believe condemned the site chosen for the hospital establishment as being too distant. He thinks it ought to be built a little closer to the existing hospital. From thence he inspected the barracks, hospital, and other buildings, and pronounced the rations pretty good. The Brigadier-General and the Assistant Quartermaster-General then left by the evening train for Khundwah to inspect the barracks at that station. They will return to Bombay immediately after. The weather is the general topic now everywhere—the great floods, lightning, and thunder. We in Deolalee also had a small share of it on Saturday night and mostly the whole of Sunday. The sky on Saturday was overcast with a sullen, leaden hue all day and oppressive heat; and at about 9 P.M. the wind commenced to blow a hurricane with drifting rain. So heavy was the rain that every house leaked. The hurricane continued till Sunday at three P.M., when it began to abate. During this time no less than four or five inches of rain must have fallen. It is now calm, as if nothing had happened, and the weather is everything that is desirable. Our general contractor is building an excellent shop and billiard-room to keep us amused. I wish a few more such enterprising spirits would take it into their heads and build private bungalows for non-military people to live in—the builder would not only confer a favour, but it would remunerate him well for his trouble.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—The Bishop of Bombay left Poona for Lanowlee on Wednesday, Sept. 28.

HEAVY RAIN AT PARDEE.—We learn that in two days, namely on the 14th and 15th Sept., nearly fourteen inches of rain fell at Pardee, in the Surat Collectorate. The damage done to property is estimated at Rs. 30,000.

DENGUE FEVER IN KATTYWAR.—It is stated that dengue fever h of late made its appearance at Rajcote.

THE “MAGDALA.”—H.M.’s ship Magdala is to be brought over from Hog Island to be docked in the Government Dock near spring tides.

CHOLERA AT WOODWARA.—A correspondent informs us that cholera is at present seriously raging at Woodwara in the Surat collectorate. The Parsees of Western India go to this place every year to visit their principal fire-temple, which is situated there.

MUNICIPAL.—We understand that Government have asked the Municipal Commissioner to prepare lists of house-owners and occupiers who at present pay to the Municipality Rs. 100 and Rs. 50 annually on account of the various municipal rates.—Argus.

THE CONSUL FOR THE GERMAN EMPIRE AND THE NETHERLANDS.—H.E. the Governor has been pleased to recognise Mr. Charles Kapp as acting consul at Bombay for the German Empire and the Netherlands during the absence of Mr. Otto Nolke.

HEAVY RAIN AT SURAT.—We learn that during last week there was a heavy fall of rain at Surat, by which several buildings were completely destroyed.—A correspondent informs us that in consequence of the recent heavy rain at Surat the bajree and other crops have sustained great damage. The state of public health is good.

THE MHOW BARRACKS.—The upper storied barracks which were to be built at Mhow have been abandoned by Government, and the lucky contractor who had taken the contract from the engineer’s department at that station has, we hear, received fifty thousand rupees as compensation from the Sirkar.—Poona Observer, Sept. 26.

CHOLERA AT DAMAUN.—A correspondent, writing from Damaun, states :—“Cholera is at present seriously raging here, and consequently there is much agitation in the community. The Governor personally attends on persons suffering from the epidemic, and administers medicines to them. He has issued an order to preserve cleanliness in the town.”

A LATE SOLICITOR SENT TO JAIL.—Mr. Edward Elliott, late a solicitor of the High Court, was on Friday last charged before Mr. Woodward with being drunk and disorderly, and was sentenced to seven days’ rigorous imprisonment. It will be remembered that Mr. Elliott’s name was a few months ago struck off the roll of solicitors by order of the Chief Justice, Sir M. R. Westropp.

BUSHIRE.—A news-letter from Bushire, dated Sept. 6, informs us that peace and tranquillity prevailed at that time in the Gulfs of Persia and Oman. The murderers of Sergeant Collins, R.E., an inspector of the Persian Telegraph Department, who was fired at by robbers and killed while travelling near Shiraz, have been captured and taken to Shiraz, where it is believed they will be executed.

LOCUSTS.—A correspondent of the Jumi-Jamshed states that young locusts have appeared near Limree in Jhalawar. Though these noxious insects have not committed much destruction of the crops, fears are entertained of their being more injurious hereafter.—A large number of locusts appeared the other day at Bhoomlee, near Bhownugger. The damage done to the crops was but slight.—A large number of locusts appeared the other day at Veeramgaum.

CHOLERA AT NEEMUCH.—We regret to hear that cholera in a severe form has broken out at Neemuch, chiefly among the men of the 59th Regiment there, who have been moved twice into camp; but the native troops also have been attacked. Medical aid was called for from Mhow, and Assistant Surgeon Turton, of the Royal Artillery, had proceeded to Neemuch by camel dak.—Bombay Gazette, Sept. 30.

FLOODS AT NASSICK.—Last Sunday there was a heavy flood at Nassick. The river Gunga suddenly rose considerably, and the Biragees, a sect of Hindoos, who always stop on the banks of rivers, had located themselves on the banks of the Gunga, and at night when the floods came many of them were carried away as they slept, nearly fifty lives being lost. A flood of such an extent has not been known for the last fifty years.—Argus.

ABOLITION OF A TAX.—We have much pleasure in stating that the tax which has for some years past been raised upon houses in the cantonment bazaar at Poona has also been abolished, contemporaneously with the non-agricultural tax; the consequence of which measure is, that all the poorer classes of house owners in the bazaar are now in a perfect state of felicity, and are daily showering blessings upon the Cantonment Committee, its much respected secretary, Colonel Eveyard, and all concerned.—Deccan Herald, Sept. 20.

MEDICAL.—We understand that Dr. Hunter has been appointed to succeed Surgeon Shepherd as Physician and Superintendent of the Colaba Lunatic Asylum. Dr. Weir has had medical charge of the institution since the departure of Surgeon Shepherd, and has given every satisfaction. His length of service, however, does not warrant the local Government in nominating him to this highly important charge. We are glad to mention that it is the on du that this accomplished young medical officer will receive an appointment commensurate with his claims and ability. The chair in the school of Anatomy has recently become vacant, and Dr. Sylvester, we learn, has recommended Dr. Weir as a candidate of great promise, and one that is likely to be able and popular in the lecture hall.—Bombay Gazette.

THE RYOTS OF KUTCH.—The Arya Mitra hears that the dissatisfied ryots of the principality of Kutch are about to leave that place and migrate into British territory. Our contemporary advises these ryots not to do so, but that they should first try to conciliate their Prince and to obtain from him redress for their grievances. If they fail in this attempt, they should try to obtain the intervention of the British political officer at the Kutch durbar; and if they do not succeed in the latter attempt, they should seek redress by petitioning the paramount power.

THE FLOODS IN GUZERAT.—The recent floods in Guzerat have proved more destructive and ruinous than we were aware of. The latest accounts from Billimoria show that the town and eight or nine surrounding villages were almost entirely submerged under water, and that the inhabitants lost all their clothing and dry grain, and are now reduced to a state of starvation. We are glad to learn that to relieve the sufferings of the poor inhabitants of these villages. Messrs. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy and Dinshaw Maneckjee Petit have each contributed Rs. 300 towards forming a fund. Dr. Cawasjee Hormusjee Billimoria has undertaken to collect funds for the purpose, and it is to be trusted that other gentlemen will follow the excellent example set by Messrs. Byramjee and Dinshaw. The Gaekwar of Baroda has caused the distribution of two seers of grain to each of the sufferers by the recent floods of Billimoria. Bai Maneckbaee Mortlabace has subscribed Rs. 100 to the fund started for the relief of the sufferers, and Mr. Nowrojee Manockjee Wadia Rs. 50.

FLOODS IN KHANDESH.—All the dharamashalas and houses on both banks of the river have been washed away, as have also the houses of Mussulmans beneath the Gadhi. The old habitations of Devapoor have been entirely obliterated. The gardens on the river side have been wiped out clean. This has been more or less the case in towns and villages all along the course of the Panjara. At the village of Nera several houses have been washed away; and out of about 1,000 inhabitants living at Kasumben not more than 200 have remained. Kheda has lost a number of houses. The Girna likewise is reported to have overflowed its banks, destroying hundreds of human beings and a large amount of property all along its course. The villages of Mehmabara and Bhadgam have suffered immensely, and many of the villages are reported to have shared the same fate. As this has been the case with its tributaries, we fear the main stream will have spread death and destruction far and wide over a large area, of which we have not yet heard. This is a calamity near our homes, and we trust our charity may not be found wanting on this occasion."—Native Opinion.

STOPPAGE ON THE B. B. AND C. I. RAILWAY.—Very little has been officially known about the real state of the floods on the B. B. and C. I. Railway line, but the Jam-i-Jamshed gives the following particulars:—"The whole country between Bombay and Surat has taken the appearance of a sea. The train, which left Bombay on Sunday morning for Ahmedabad, narrowly escaped coming to grief. It crossed the Par bridge at about 4.15 p.m., and, after three minutes more, the bridge was carried away. Thus 150 passengers were saved from premature death by the hand of Providence. The loss to the company is estimated at about 15 lacs of rupees, which appears to be a little exaggerated. The wooden culvert between Amulsar and Billimora has been carried away by the floods. The bridge on the Ambica river is shaking ominously, and the road between Marolee and Sacheen has been cut up fearfully. A large number of labourers, belonging to Mr. Cowasjee Banajee, contractor, were despatched the day before yesterday by special train to the damaged lines, and the work of repairing will be soon commenced. The force of flood in the Par river was so great that the iron work was driven away to a considerable distance. Several kites were sent from Bombay, which served to convey messages from one bank of the river to the other, the telegraph wire being interrupted."

THE FUNERAL OF SIR GEORGE POLLOCK.

On last Wednesday afternoon the ancient Abbey of Westminster was once more filled with a crowd of mourners, the relations, friends, or companions in arms, who accompanied to its last resting-place the body of one of England's great men, Field-Marshal Sir George Pollock, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.S.I., late Constable of the Tower. The ceremony was arranged to take place at one o'clock, and cards of invitation had been issued by Sir John W. Kaye requesting those who did not follow the coffin from the residence to assemble at the Westminster Palace Hotel, where two rooms had been set apart for their reception. As early as eleven o'clock the hall of the hotel began to fill with officers of all grades, most of whom had been intimately acquainted with the late Field-Marshal during some portion of his long and honourable career. When the above mentioned hour drew near, the attendance of officers became so large that the rooms could scarcely hold them, and it was strange to listen to the scraps of conversation of men who had grown old and grey in the service, and whom a common interest thus united after an absence of many years. There names were uttered of men that have long since been numbered among the dead, and whose deeds were recorded on the walls of the time honoured Abbey.

The procession on the present occasion was not of a very imposing character outside, in consequence of the distance from which the coffin had to be conveyed. At about half-past eleven it left the residence at the extremity of Clapham-common, in an ordinary hearse, and followed by the family carriage, and those of Dr. Pollock, Messrs. Hudson, Thornton, Westwood, and Dr. Spitta. Near the Vauxhall Station there was in waiting a gun carriage belonging to the C Brigade of the Royal Horse Artillery at Woolwich, commanded by Lieut. A. Lorraine. Upon this the coffin was placed and covered by the Union Jack. At the same place the carriages of the Burmese Ambassadors, Field Marshal Sir Wm. Gomm, and Colonel Milman joined the others, and the procession then slowly moved on by Victoria Station, and Victoria-street to the Abbey. Those who had assembled at the Westminster Palace Hotel had crossed over to the west cloister door in Dean's-yard, and waited the arrival of the coffin.

The Abbey inside was but scantily filled. The admittance was by cards only, and as these had been dealt out with a sparing hand there was no great attendance. The immediate friends were admitted to the seats of the choir, those nearest the sacrum having been kept open for the gentlemen who composed the procession. Among those who awaited its arrival amidst the solemn silence, there was conspicuous the figure of another old hero and brother in arms, whose birth preceded that of the late Sir George by two years—Field-Marshal Sir William Gomm. The rails of the sacrum, the pulpit, and the entire pavement of the centre aisle were covered with black cloth, trimmed with white satin, and the bier was placed beneath the lantern, midway between the choir entrance and the altar rails. It was half-past one before a guard of honour, consisting of ten Yeomen of the Guard—commonly known by their ancient name of buffetiers—marched through the choir, and took up their station on each side of the bier. Shortly before that time his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and Mr. Cardwell were also observed in the choir. At half-past one, while the subdued tones of the organ filled the Abbey, the procession advanced slowly in the following order:—

Ten Wardens of the Tower.

Twelve Officers of the 1st Surrey Volunteers.

Commanding Officer and Adjutant of the 1st Tower Hamlets Militia.

Commanding Officer and Adjutant of the 2nd Tower Hamlets Militia.

While the procession slowly advanced towards the bier, the choir sang Croft's anthem, "I am the Resurrection," which was followed by "I know that my Redeemer liveth," by the same composer. Meanwhile the coffin had been placed on the bier, and the Union Jack replaced by a black velvet pall. The procession was so numerous that the rails of the sacrum had to be thrown open to admit those who could find no standing room at the side. When silence had been resumed, the Rev. Lord John Thynne read the opening sentences of the service, after which the choir sang the anthem, "We brought nothing" (Croft), and chanted the 90th Psalm. The Lessons were then read by the Venerable Archdeacon Jennings, assisted by the Rev. Canon Conway. When the first part of the service had been performed the party fell almost into the same order, and the coffin was lowered into the grave. The position of the grave is almost exactly opposite the nave pulpit, on the right hand side of the centre aisle, and the foot of the coffin rests against the head of the coffin of Lord Clyde, while it is close to the monuments of General Cholmondeley and Sir James Outram. The coffin is of polished oak, with brass mountings, and on the plate is the inscription:—

Field-Marshal Sir GEORGE POLLOCK, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.S.I.

Constable of the Tower.

Born 4th June, 1786. Died 6th Oct., 1872.

The choristers having placed themselves at the head of the coffin, the officers ranged themselves round the grave in a circle, with the Duke of Cambridge standing opposite the pulpit. The second part of the service was read by the Rev. Lord John Thynne, the solemn words, "ashes to ashes, dust to dust," being uttered amidst a deep and breathless silence. The choristers then sang Handel's beautiful chorale, "His body is buried in peace, but his name liveth evermore." At the close of the service the organist, Dr. Turler, played the Dead March in Saul, while those who had been kept back by the barriers flocked to the grave to have a last glimpse of the coffin, which was soon afterwards covered over.

Miscellaneous.

MAJOR HANKIN, Madras Staff Corps, has been elected governor of the county gaol at Hertford.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—We extract from Mr. Girard de Quetteville's Indian Circular of 17th October the latest quoted exports of bullion to India by the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. From Southampton, the exports were as follows: viz., per Simla, October, 10, 1872: Gold—Ceylon, £1,630; Madras, £5,000; Silver—Penang, £2,190; Singapore, £42,500.

THE BURMESE EMBASSY.—The Burmese Embassy have returned to the Grosvenor Hotel. It is understood they will remain in London until the return of the Queen to Windsor, when, after taking leave of her Majesty, they will proceed through France, Italy, and Egypt to India, where they will pay their respects to the Governor-General, and, finally, arrive in their own country about the beginning of next year.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—At the meeting on Thursday of the Oriental Bank Corporation, an interim dividend of 30s. per share was declared. The Chairman (Mr. James Blyth) stated that the corporation is a creditor of the firm of Gledstones and Co. to the extent of £67,000, but there is a prospect of recovery to the extent of £24,000, which will leave a loss of £43,000; but to meet that loss £50,000 has been deducted from the earnings of the bank. The Chairman also stated that the bank was never in a better position than at the present moment.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £650,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 16th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £631,900; to Bombay, £10,000; and to Madras, £8,100. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 43 per cent., above that price in full. Tenders on Bombay at 1s. 10½d. in full. The average rate on Calcutta was 1s. 10¾d., on Bombay 1s. 10¾d., and on Madras 1s. 10¾d.

SINGAPORE GAS COMPANY.—The directors of the Singapore Gas Company (Limited) have issued their report for the half-year ending June 30, 1872, to be presented at the meeting on October 22. They state that the profit for the half-year amounts to £1,805. 6s. 7d., which, together with £19. 5s. 2d., the unappropriated profit of the preceding half-year, makes the available balance £1,824. 11s. 9d. Out of this sum the directors recommend the declaration of a dividend at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum, less income-tax, on the amounts paid up on the preference and original capital, the balance of £14. 16s. 4d. to be carried forward to the profit of the succeeding half-year. The dividend to be payable on October 31 next.

DEATH OF THE SENIOR ADMIRAL OF THE FLEET.—We regret to announce the death of Sir Thomas John Cochrane, G.C.B., Senior Admiral of the Fleet, in his eighty-third year. The deceased baronet, who was the father of Mr. Alexander Baillie Cochrane, M.P. for the Isle of Wight, was the eldest son of the late Hon. Sir Alexander Forrester Inglis Cochrane, G.C.B., who was the sixth son of the eighth Earl of Dundonald. Sir Thomas entered the service at an early age, and was made post captain by his father on the 23rd of April, 1806, when he was only about seventeen or eighteen years old, and was appointed Rear-Admiral November 23rd, 1841. He was Commander-in-Chief on the East India station from 1842 to 1846.

MESSRS. LEGGATT'S FAILURE.—An application was made on Oct. 15 to Mr. Registrar Brougham to register a resolution come to by the creditors under a petition of liquidation filed by Messrs. C. D. Leggatt, of 26, Austin-friars, East India merchants, trading under the style of Leggatt and Co. The firm had large business connections in Bombay. The liabilities are upwards of £100,000, against assets, £35,000. Mr. Hackwood (Linklaters, Hackwood, and Co.) now applied to register a resolution come to by the creditors of a meeting held on Sept. 30 last, by which it was resolved to wind up the estate under the arrangement clauses of the Act, and not in bankruptcy, and to appoint Mr. W. Hurlbatt, public account, Old Jewry, trustee, with a committee of inspection. Some trifling objections to the registration having been disposed of, his honour ordered the resolution to be registered.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS.—Her Majesty's Indian troop relief steamship Euphrates, Capt. St. George C. D'A. Irvine, embarked at Portsmouth on Oct. 14 the following officers for Bombay, and sailed in the latter part of the day, with orders to call in at Queenstown to embark there 999 non-commissioned officers and men, 11 staff-sergeants, 131 women, and 120 children. 18th Hussars.—Lieut. Bolton. Royal Engineers.—Lieuts. Gore, Brown, Cameron, Lloyd, Scott, and de Villamel; Assist.-Surg. Henn. Royal Artillery.—Major Griffin; Capt. Gillies and Taylor; Lieuts. Pengree, Ewing, Atchison, Lane, W. H. Frith, J. S. Frith, Smith, Truth, Watson, Casey, Brackenbury, Dawson, Layton, and Wymell Mayow. Her Majesty's Indian Army.—Assist.-Surg. Murphy, Reed, Watson, Lawrie, Wilson, Long, Mulvaney, Zorabs, Dutt, Booking, M'Gregor, and Duphtray. 76th Infantry.—Capt. Hodges. Royal Artillery.—Capt. Wheatley, wife, child, and servant; Lieut. Lloyd and wife. 2nd Battalion 19th Infantry.—Lieut. Tribe and wife. Bengal Establishment.—Sub-Conductor Gleeson, wife, and family. 51st Infantry.—Lieut. Col. Madden and wife; Majors Acton and Farrington; Surg. Kidd; Capt. Barnaby, Trydall (wife and child), Nugent, Græme, Wynne, Clements, White, and Franks; Lieuts. Kennett, Dunn, Seppings, Campbell, Harness, Smyth, Drury, Burnett, M'Gillicuddy, and Bennett.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—On Oct. 14 the half-yearly meeting of shareholders was held at the Bank's premises, Broad street, Mr. G. G. Nichol in the chair. The report having been taken as read, the Chairman, in moving its adoption, said he had to perform on the present occasion a very pleasant and agreeable task, much more so than had fallen to his lot for many years past. He had to submit to them what, he had no doubt, they would consider a very satisfactory report indeed. [For a summary of the report see last number of the mail.] The profits for the six months were £117,265, and included the balance of last year £118,149. He could assure them that the whole of the profit was gained by the legitimate business of the bank—that is, in exchange and local business. He laid stress upon this, because he found that an impression prevailed that the profit had been made in an illegitimate manner. He could assure them that there was not a shilling of profit that was not made in the business of the bank. But they had the advantage of rather exceptional times as regarded the business of exchange, and it was only due to their managers to say that they had conducted the business with great ability and success. They must all feel that this was an exceptionally good year, and could scarcely hope to look upon it as an average one. The prospects of the current half-year showed every indication of a fair average one, but not equal to the present. The only loss they had sustained during the six months was through the failure of Messrs Gledstones, and that, he regretted to say, was rather a considerable one.

THE NEW CONSTABLE OF THE TOWER.—Field-Marshal Sir William Maynard Gomm, G.C.B., will succeed the late Sir G. Pollock as Constable of the Tower. This distinguished veteran served in the 9th Foot on the expedition to the Helder in 1799, including the actions of the 19th September and 2nd October; on the coast of France and Spain in 1800, and in Hanover in 1805; in the expedition to Stralsund and siege of Copenhagen in 1807; Peninsular campaigns of 1808-9, including the battles of Roleia, Vimiera, and Corunna; expedition to Walcheren and siege of Flushing in 1809. Proceeded again to the Peninsula in 1810, where he served on the quarter-master-general's staff during the remainder of the war, including the battles of Busaco and Fuentes D'Onor, assault and capture of Badajoz, battle of Salamanca, action at Villa Muriel, battle of Vittoria, siege of San Sebastain, battles of the Nivelle and Nive, and investment of Bayonne. Served also in the campaign of 1815; and was present at Quatre Bras and Waterloo as Quarter-master-General of the 5th Division. Was Commander of the Forces, Lieutenant-Governor, and Member of Council in Jamaica in 1840-41, where he established the mountain barrack of Newcastle. Commanded the Northern District of England in 1842; Governor and Commander-in-Chief in the Mauritius from 1843 to 1849; Commander-in-Chief in India, and an Extraordinary Member of Council from January, 1851, to December, 1855. Sir William has received the Gold Cross and one Clasp for Badajoz, Salamanca, Vittoria, San Sebastain, and Nive, and the Silver War Medal, with six clasps, for Roleia, Vimiera, Corunna, Busaco, Fuentes d'Onor, and Nivelle, and is a Knight (2nd class) of St. Anne, of Russia.

THE ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY.—The Duke of Cambridge attended this Academy at Woolwich on Tuesday, Oct. 15, for the purpose of presenting to the gentlemen Cadets who had been successful at the recent examination their commissions and prizes. There were twelve in the Royal Engineers, and fifteen in the Royal Artillery. When presenting the Pollock medal to Mr. Godsall, the Duke feelingly alluded to the death of that distinguished officer to commemorate whose services in India the medal had been instituted. He said the last time they had assembled in that hall Field-Marshal Sir George Pollock presented the medal himself. He had now gone, and they all in common had to mourn the loss of an officer who was a credit to the nation. At the close of the distribution of prizes the Duke said it gave him great pleasure to be among them again that day. He was extremely satisfied at hearing so much good and so little bad in the reports. Under some disadvantage, the majority had obtained high credit. They would, no doubt, take advantage of the classes at Chatham and Woolwich. He especially urged upon them the importance of discipline and subordination, without which all science to soldiers was perfectly useless, and the army would become a mere rabble. He felt it the more important to instil this into their minds, not that he feared they would fall short of their comrades who had preceded them, but because in the present day subjects were freely and publicly discussed which were formerly never alluded to: and there might be a tendency among young officers to fancy that they might think for themselves and follow their own line, instead of yielding strict and unquestionable obedience to their superiors. He congratulated them upon the honourable position they had attained, and wished them a happy and prosperous career in the service of their country.

MILITARY.—The two brigades of Horse Artillery, vacant by the deaths of Sir George Pollock and Sir Patrick Montgomerie, will be filled by General Sir George Brooke, K.C.B., from the 25th Brigade, and General F. F. Whinyates, from the 17th Brigade. Sir George Brooke entered the army Sept. 17, 1808; became colonel-commandant July 21, 1851; colonel Sept. 10, 1852; major-general Nov. 28, 1854; lieutenant-general June 19, 1866; and general May 24, 1870. He served in Bundelcund during 1809-10; throughout the Nepal war of 1815-16, including attacks upon Nallaghur, the Heights of Ramghur, and Fort Malown; siege of Hattrass in 1817; Mahratta war of 1817-18; siege and capture of Bhurtapore in 1825-26; Sutlej campaign of 1845-46, including the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, and Sobraon; in the two first he commanded the whole of the artillery (medal and two clasps and C.B.), Punjab campaign of 1848-49, as brigadier commanding the horse artillery, including the affair of Ramnuggur, and battles of Chillianwallah and Goojerat (medal with two clasps). He has also the Indian war medal with two clasps for the Nepal war and Bhurtapore. General Whinyates obtained his first commission July 6, 1813; became colonel and colonel-commandant Aug. 12, 1853; major-general Nov. 28, 1854; lieutenant-general July 14, 1867; and general Jan. 21, 1872. He served with Colonel Thompson's force in 1814; in the Army of Reserve, under General Hyslop, in 1815; in the 1st division of the Deccan Army, under Sir Thomas Hyslop, in 1817-18; in Sir J. Doveton's Division in pursuit of Bajecrow and Appa Saib; was present at the battle of Mahidpore (medal), Dec. 21, 1817; at the storming and capture of Talnair, Feb. 27, 1818; at the capture of the Fort of Jillypamnair; and at the siege of the fortress of Asseerghur.

THE MILITARY FUNDS.—We understand that a reference has been made to the Secretary of State for India as to the grade in which majors of the Ordnance Corps are to subscribe to the Military Funds. The Indian Government are of opinion that Article VI. of the Bengal Military Fund Rules should be made applicable to the several Presidencies. This Article provides that "members whose substantial regimental rank is higher than that in which they draw pay may subscribe in such higher substantial rank, on furnishing health certificates in the usual form, and paying the contributions of such higher rank from date of promotion thereto." There are, however, many difficulties in the way of this solution of the question. For, in the first place, the rules of the Madras and Bombay Military Funds contain no similar stipulation, and therefore to demand a health certificate from such members of those institutions as may desire to subscribe in the higher grade would be manifestly unjust, and contrary to the Act which transferred the funds to Government, and might be the occasion of serious hardship to the families of officers. Again, what would be the position of those officers who, being either unable or unwilling to produce the required health certificate, should return to England and come on the higher rate of British pay? The rule no longer applying to their case, would increased subscription and donation be demanded from them? If not, might they not insist upon subscribing according to their pay? And, if so, when they returned to India and claimed the benefit of the rule, would their increased subscriptions and donations be refunded, or would they have to lose all sums on that account in England? On every hand difficulties beset this mode of dealing with the question; and, as the matter now stands, we are at a loss to see what rigid rule can be laid down so as not to occasion hardship and injustice in some cases. There are, however, two equitable courses still open to the Secretary of State; the one is, to give the Ordnance Corps majors the pay of their rank, and thus settle the question for ever; the other, to allow them individually the option of subscribing either in the higher or lower grade. If the Council of India is not prepared to grant the former measure of complete justice, surely it is not too much to ask that no further wrong be inflicted on a body of officers whose only fault appears to be this—that they, being induced by the Queen's proclamation to volunteer for general service, ceased to be Indian officers, and thereby forfeited the protection of the Indian Council. —Home News.

RUSSIAN AGGRANDISEMENT.

The Pall Mall Gazette is not disposed to enter upon any particular criticism of the march on Khiva, or to make any predictions therefrom except one: that the expedition will succeed. And its success will unquestionably do much to revive in England and in India the dread of Russian encroachment, and the account to which these conquests will be turned in the future policy of the conquerors. What they are undoubtedly good for is to increase the amount of pressure which any strong Power willing to fight may bring to bear on English counsels. A formidable position, a formidable attitude, often suffice to accomplish a nation's ends without absolute recourse to the sword. Though your enemy stand in your barn with a blazing torch in his hand, he need not be put to the painful expedient of using it, necessarily; he happens to have the torch, he is at the door of the barn with it, and that is enough for you. But apart from all this, the prophets with whom we began these remarks may behold in the present condition of Europe a remarkable justification of their predictions. Fate seems to be working strongly in favour of Russia. While she has been carrying out her designs far away from home, unchecked and unhindered, a great war between her neighbours has lifted her into a position from which she may almost dictate to the world. Her alliance is of the last importance to a great nation which can afford to pay any price for it. Nobody can imagine that France will remain in a state of vassalage to her conqueror, endure insult, abstain from an attempt to seize back her ravished provinces and the hoards of money which load her to the ground with debt, a day longer than she feels a renewal of her military strength, and can on any terms obtain the alliance of a Power like Russia. On the other hand, it is almost impossible to conceive that Russia will consent to the consolidation of German power on her borders—a power that may be made to extend from sea to sea, and shut her up in the north to freeze with all her long-cherished ambitions. Or if Germany choose to make a bargain that will leave Russia to fulfil her designs unhindered, she is still mistress of her fortunes, and is equally free to work out her "destiny." Which way the game may go is as yet uncertain; but so far as common intelligence casts any light into the future, it can hardly fail to be played to the aggrandizement of Russia. It may be said, no doubt, that England has some voice in the matter, as she certainly has an interest of the most vital kind; but what sort of voice? Vox et præterea nihil we fear. And it would be so immoral to share with Russia the new fortunes of the world, to go with rather than against her (which would please her best), that nothing, we suppose, is to be said on that score. In the language of the political authority we have quoted above, we have naught to do but watch and wait, hoping at least that when the hour of peril comes we shall be prepared for it—if not before. But whatever we may do, we can hardly doubt that Russia has now before her a clear, safe path to the aggrandizement she has worked for so well.

STRONG COATS.—Mr. Miller, the magistrate of the southern division of the town, had occasion the other day to remark, in a case of assault by a sailor against a police constable, that it was very hard Jack should be made to pay the price of the constable's coat, which was torn in the scuffle, owing to the flimsy texture of the garment. The cloth with which the coat was made was alpaca, which was so thin that it gave way even when no great violence was used. If the coats were made with stronger cloth, the damage would never have occurred.—Englishman, Sept. 25.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, October 7; Agra, October 5; Calcutta and Madras, October 4.

THE Madras papers seem to be at issue regarding the long promised Camp of Exercise at Bangalore. The Spectator, for instance, believes that the camp will not be held at all, because one of the British regiments told off for it, the 21st Foot, 2nd battalion, has just received orders to embark for England early in December, and a wing of the 1st battalion will have to take its place for the time being in Madras. The Madras Times, on the other hand, declares, in spite of all such statements, that the camp will really be held at Bangalore, the Indian Government having itself expressed a strong desire to carry out the programme, while General Norman and Colonel Lumsden will be especially deputed to attend the camp, and report upon the condition of the Madras Army, so far as that may be gathered from the doings in the camp itself. It is said that before leaving India Lord Napier of Ettrick drew up an able and exhaustive Minute on the Madras Army, but as yet nothing is known of its tenor.

ACCORDING to the Madras Athenæum the following troops, which are on their annual course of relief, and are passing through or by Bangalore, will be detained to take part in the Camp of Exercise to be held at that station in December next:—G Battery, 9th Brigade, R.A.; B Battery, 20th Brigade, R.A.; A Battery, 23rd Brigade, R.A.; H.M.'s 1st Battalion, 21st Fusiliers; H.M.'s 89th Foot; 4th Light Cavalry; 3 Companies Sappers and Miners; 23rd Regiment, Madras Native Infantry, which is under orders for Bangalore from Quilon. The troops forming the garrison with those in the neighbourhood will also take part in the manœuvres. The Sappers are already engaged in surveying the ground outside Bangalore Cantonments.

BOMBAY has been doing honour to its eminent citizen Sir Cowasjee Jehangeer Ready money, by presenting him with an address signed by over 2,000 fellow-citizens, who join in congratulating him on his knighthood. The address was presented by Mr. Justice Gibbs, whose eloquent discourse on Sir Cowasjee's many acts of public spirit was warmly applauded by a large gathering of native and European gentlemen. A similar address from the inhabitants of Surat was next presented to the new Parsee Knight by his apparent countryman Mr. Dinshaw Manockjee Petit. The ceremony, which came off in Sir Cowasjee's drawing-room, ended, it appears, in a general distribution of bouquets—a becoming return for the flowers of rhetoric which had fallen, no doubt in choice abundance, on the good knight's head.

THE Agricultural Reports for the fortnight ending September 25 are generally favourable. At every reporting station except Peshawar, rain had fallen more or less; too heavily indeed in Sattara, Cawnpore, and the Berárs, while floods have done much damage in Karáchi, Gujerát, and Khandesh. On the whole the autumn harvest promises well, though more rain is still wanted in parts of Lower Bengal. In Cuttack the early rice-crop has turned out poorly; things look better at Akyab, but at Thayatmyo more rain is wanted.

THE Maharajah of Gwalior has promised to lend the Indian Government a crore of rupees—about a million sterling—at 4 per cent. for the proposed railway from Gwalior to Agra. His Highness has also given General Daly leave to take for that purpose, free of charge, whatever suitable materials his country may furnish. Sindhia at any rate puts his retrograde neighbour Holkar to the blush.

LORD NORTHBROOK's railway ride up country has probably quickened the steps now taking by his Government to ensure the proper cooling of railway carriages in the hot weather. It is pleasing to learn that the Viceroy in Council has decreed that a certain proportion of first and second-class carriages in every train shall be fitted henceforth with some kind of cooling apparatus.

It seems that Major General McMurdo does not leave India for good until after the breaking up of the Camp of Exercise. He is to have the command of a division at Hassan Abdal. Generals Sir H. Tombs and Macdonald are also to have commands of divisions.

A SERIOUS disturbance is reported from Kashmír. The Sunnis and the Shias—the two chief Mohammedan sects—have had a terrible fight, and a large portion of Srinagar has been laid in ruins by burning.

THE Times of India gives a heart-rending account of the scenes witnessed on board an Arab slaver, lately captured near Ras-el-bad, in the Persian Gulf, by the boats of H.M.S. Vulture. Above and below the dhow swarmed with slaves like an ants' nest. "The hold, from which a most intolerable stench proceeded, was several inches deep in the foulest bilge-water and refuse." Down below were heaps of children and adults in every stage of small-pox and scrofula. Many of the poor wretches had to be carried on board the Vulture. Thirty-five in all were suffering from small-pox, of whom fifteen died before reaching Bombay. Forty more are said to have died before the capture, most of whom had been thrown overboard alive by the Arabs in order to prevent the disease from spreading. When even this dreadful remedy failed, the rest were left to take their chance together, sick and well. Many of the children were of very tender years, and most of them bore marks of Arab cruelty in half-healed scars or bruises left by the lash or the stick.

FROM the Darbar at Ambála on the 17th October the telegraph carries us by one leap to the Darbar which Lord Northbrook held at Multán on the 25th. Among those present were the Nawáb of Bhawalpúr and several frontier chiefs. His Excellency expressed his pleasure at the cordial reception he had met with in the Punjab, and assured the independent chiefs that, so long as the security of our frontier remained undisturbed, the British Government had no desire to interfere with their independence. A good deal of virtue lies in that proviso about the undisturbed frontier.

THE death of the talented author of the "Folk Songs of Southern India" seems to have been hastened by domestic sorrows and overwork. From a Mastership in the Government Normal School at Madras, Mr. C. E. Gover rose in 1863 to be Principal of the Lawrence Asylum at Utakamund, in which post his services were cordially appreciated by the ruling powers. After serving for some time on the Municipal Board of Madras, he became last year Sanitary Inspector of the Municipality. When arrangements were making to take the Census, to Mr. Gover was entrusted the difficult task of collecting and compiling the needful statistics. In the early days of this year however three of his children died, one after another, of diphtheria, and, what with grief for their loss and the continued pressure of the work he had taken in hand, his health was so impaired that his friends advised him to accompany his wife and remaining children home. He determined however to finish his labours first. His family sailed home without him in July, and he remained behind to work on and die at last before he could take the furlough he had earned so well. Let us hope, with the Madras papers from which these particulars are gleaned, that the Government may have the power to do something handsome for the widow and children of one who worked himself to death in their service.

THE embassy from the Khan of Khiva to Lord Northbrook has once more drawn the attention of the English Press to the old subject of Russian progress in Central Asia. It seems to be generally agreed that the Indian Government could do no better than put off the envoy with some judicious, if unpalatable advice to his master about surrendering his Russian captives, and making for himself the best terms he can with the Russian general at Tashkand. In spite of Englishmen's not unnatural dislike to a policy of mere advice in view of Russia's steady advance to our North-West Indian frontier, it is hard to see what else the Viceroy could have done. We could hardly dispute the right of another Power to exact compensation for wrongs done to its subjects by a people with whom we have no sort of alliance. If Russia is determined to swallow one of the Khanats after another, the conquerors of one Indian province after another have no special call to prevent her from following their example, even if they felt quite certain that all such movements were only paving the way for an ultimate trial of strength between Russia and England in the Punjab. The only wonder indeed is that Khiva has so long been spared, lying as it does on the direct road from the Caspian to the borders of Persia and Afghanistan. Some people will doubtless take comfort in the reflection that Russian progress in Turkistan means the march of modern civilisation and the decline of Islam, although Mr. Vambéry for one estimates Russia's place among civilised nations as only a little higher than the Kirghiz, and decidedly lower than the Mohammedans of Khiva. It is not pleasant however to find so powerful a rival both in trade and politics drawing so near our Indian frontier, and adding one more to the anxieties that already beset us as an Asiatic Power. All that we can do meanwhile is to "trust in God and keep our powder dry;" in other words, to keep a watchful eye upon our Northern neighbour and a light but steady hand upon our Indian subjects. No foreign power will dream of invading India so long as, by a just but kindly rule and strict attention to our fleets and armies, we continue to prove our fitness to hold the country. As Sir H. Lawrence was fond of repeating, the true source of danger to our Indian empire lies in India itself.

IN his Report on Major Sladen's Expedition to Western Yunan, Dr. Anderson gives some interesting details regarding the Panthay Mohammedans in that province. He was told that a thousand years ago a force of three thousand Arabs entered China at the prayer of its then Emperor, to aid in putting down a rebellion in his dominions. When they had done their work, they settled down in the Chinese country; most likely in the province of Yunan, which Marco Polo in the thirteenth century found to contain a large colony of Saracens. Dr. Anderson thinks that the Arab settlement in Yunan was strengthened early in the eighteenth century by a large influx of Turks from the Chinese provinces of Kansu and Shensi. Another writer however makes Shensi the seat of an Arab colony planted in the seventh century by Ibn Hamsa, Mahomet's maternal uncle; and the traditions of the people themselves, as cited by Dr. Anderson, seem to bear out the notion of a later Arab immigration from Shensi into Yunan.

WITH regard to the sources of the Irrawaddy Dr. Anderson expresses a reasonable regret that so little has yet been done by geographical explorers in that direction. Great allowance must however be made for the extreme repugnance always shown by the Burmese and other nations bordering on India to all attempts at a scientific survey of their respective countries. Perhaps we shall soon hear that one of Major Montgomerie's "Pandits" has started off in search of new light on the question whether the true source of the mighty Irrawaddy lies at the head of the eastern or the western branch of that river. According to Dr. Anderson the body of water below the junction of the two branches is greater than the western branch and another of only equal volume could supply.

WITH regard to the irrigation works of Madras, it is true that exact returns of their yearly revenue are not readily procurable. It appears that no separate and distinct charge is there made for water, the profits from which are included in the land-revenue, as yearly reassessed. But the rise in that revenue immediately after the construction of the water-works was "so great as to leave no doubt that the returns gave a large percentage on the cost of construction." Here again then Col. Chesney seems to be borne out by "R. E. F.," to whose letter we referred last week. In the Punjab however and the North-Western Provinces "an accurate and distinct account of income and expenditure has always been kept." All that is further needed there is the insertion in the Canal returns of the profit yearly accruing from enhancements of the land revenue. It would be well too if the Madras Government were to furnish separate returns of all profits derived from irrigation works in their province.

WE have been favoured with a copy of the petition lately presented to Parliament by Lieut. Colonel T. Eyre, formerly of the Bombay Cavalry, who in August 1858, soon after his return home on furlough, was "surprised and indignant beyond measure" at finding himself "permitted to retire," against his will, on the pension of a lieutenant-colonel. It appears from his own statement, for whose accuracy of course we cannot vouch, that this summary process was carried out in apparent disregard of the usual forms, on grounds of which he had no knowledge either then or afterwards, and that all his subsequent appeals for redress have been met with the comforting answer that it was "impossible for the authorities of the India Office to reopen petitioner's case." He now asks either for adequate compensation for a loss reckoned at £25,000, or for reinstatement in the service, or else for such an inquiry into his case as will enable him to substantiate his charges against the India Office. It is not for us to pass an opinion on a matter of which we have heard but one side; and it is hardly possible that the measure of which Colonel Eyre complains could have been rashly adopted on insufficient grounds. Still we own it to be a serious thing to doom an old officer of thirty-two years' service to retirement on a pension even of £400 a-year, without giving him any formal reason for such a step.

THE Whitworth breech-loading nine-pounder gun, made of steel squeezed together by powerful hydraulic pressure, has lately been fired at Southport, under all kinds of conditions, with remarkable success. Ten rounds of blind shell were first fired with a charge of 2½ lbs. of powder, at an elevation of ten degrees. At a range varying from 4300 to 4438 yards the deflection only once exceeded fourteen feet, while five times it ranged from three to nine feet only. In six rounds fired at forty de-degrees of elevation with a charge of 2½ lbs., the deflection ranged from forty to fifty feet over a distance of more than 10,000 yards. At an elevation of three degrees, with 2½ lbs. of powder, the range varied from 928 to 2,030 yards, while the deflection at the latter range was only three feet. Further experiments brought out the wonderful tenacity of the Whitworth steel and the penetrating power of the guns. The firing with shrapnel at 2,000 yards gave on the whole satisfactory results. So did the tests for rapid firing, five rounds being discharged in forty-seven seconds. Fifteen rounds were then fired in 3 min. 36 sec., including thirty-four seconds lost from failure of the friction-tubes. Ten rounds were afterwards fired in 1 min. 43 sec. Various other experiments with case-shot at short and blind shell at long ranges were carried out with like success.

We observe with pleasure that the countenance shown in the city towards Captain Dickey's scheme for improving the old methods of crossing the Channel has already taken shape in the prospectus of an English Channel Steamship Company, headed by seven directors of good position and repute. The company's object is to acquire the sole right of using Captain Dickey's Patent, for the construction of double-steamers, to run in the first instance between England and the Continent. On the nature and advantages of the principle they seek to apply to the growing traffic across the Channel, we have already commented more than once. The chief recommendations of Captain Dickey's scheme may be thus briefly set forth. First, a form of vessel calculated to reduce to a minimum the pitching and rolling motion. Second, fine airy saloons on deck, and numerous cabins affording greatly increased comfort and accommodation to passengers. Third, special facilities for the shipping and landing of passengers' luggage without removal from the vans. Fourth, the vessel, owing to her light draft of water, will be able to use the existing harbours with great facility and safety. If to these advantages a sufficient rate of speed can only be added, we have little doubt that the proposed steamers will prove a commercial success. It is reckoned, we see, that steamers of the kind proposed can be built and equipped for service at an outlay of £75,000 each.

On his departure for Zanzibar to treat with its Sultan for the extinction of the Slave Trade in his neighbourhood, Sir Bartle Frere will be accompanied by the Rev. G. P. Badger, an excellent Arabic scholar, formerly employed by Sir J. Outram and Sir W. Coghlan; by Major Ewan Smith, who accompanied Sir F. Goldsmid on his recent mission to Teheran; and by Mr. Hill of the Foreign Office. Mr. Charles Grey of the India Office goes out as private secretary to Sir B. Frere. Other officers, appointed by Lord Northbrook, will join the mission at Aden or Zanzibar. Due steps will of course be taken to protect Dr. Livingstone from the ill-will of the slave-dealers, whose profits will be largely curtailed by the almost certain issue of Sir Bartle Frere's undertaking.

By a despatch of the Secretary of State for India in Council, dated 25th July, 1872, the following concessions have been granted to the subscribers to the Bengal Military Orphan Society and their families, from 1st April, 1872:—Subscriptions reduced 12½ per cent. (family contributions remaining unaltered). The pensions of female orphans, above eighteen years of age, on the European scale of £35 per annum, increased to £40 per annum. All other pensions under the old and new rules increased 10 per cent. The final grant to male orphans increased from £63 to £105 in England, or from Rs. 500 to Rs. 833.54 in India. ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL, MONDAY, October 28, 1872.

SIR BARTLE FRERE'S MISSION TO ZANZIBAR.

At last the English Government appears to have made up its slow mind to take decided measures for putting down the slave trade on the eastern coast of Africa. It is many years since the necessity for such a move was first pointed out by the officers of the Indian Government; but all the pleadings and remonstrances of men like Sir W. Coghlan continued to fall unheeded on the ears of our Foreign-office until public opinion in this country began to assert itself in the same direction. The question itself was complicated by our political engagements with the Sultan of Zanzibar, whose chief source of revenue was derived from the very traffic which English perseverance had succeeded in putting down on the opposite coast of Africa. By the treaty made with him ten or twelve years ago, we left him free to fill his treasury according to his own devices so long as he paid his tribute regularly to his former sovereign at Muscat: this payment of tribute being the one condition on which Zanzibar was transferred to the younger branch of the family which had theretofore ruled over both kingdoms.

Meanwhile the traffic in slaves has kept on growing apace, the Sultan himself caring little how they were procured, or whither taken, so long as a certain share both of the slaves and the profits fell to his own hands or those of his subjects. Dr. Livingstone however was not one of those who looked upon the negro as designed by Providence for the special duty of rendering forced service to men of other breeds. In the course of his wanderings on that side of Africa he saw enough of the cruelties inflicted and the harm done to lawful trade by the Arab dealers in negro flesh and blood, to warrant him in raising his voice against a traffic which most of his countrymen still profess to condemn. Happily, the public at home retained some sympathy with the cause so warmly advocated by Dr. Livingstone; and at last the subject forced itself on the notice of the Parliament and the English Ministry. An inquiry, conducted by a Royal Commission, was followed by the Report of a Select Committee. Livingstone's letters furnished Lord Stratheden and the Bishop of Winchester with themes for eloquent speeches last Session in the House of Lords. Lord Granville's assurance that the Government were really taking steps to put down the slave trade was confirmed by a like statement in the subsequent Speech from the Throne. But the taking of "steps intended to prepare the way for dealing effectually with" the traffic in question had been explained beforehand by Lord Granville to mean a roundabout diplomatic process, in which France and several other Powers were to play their part. Meanwhile, fresh letters from Dr. Livingstone had stirred afresh the sympathies of his countrymen at home, and people grew impatient of measures "intended to prepare the way" for an issue which seemed attainable by simpler methods. What was the use, they asked, of seeking help from France or America in a matter which England, if she chose, might easily carry through by herself? To repeat our own remarks of August last, "it would not take many weeks or much money to make the Sultan understand that we mean to put a stop to the slave trade in Eastern Africa, and are willing to compensate him for some probable loss of revenue, by relieving him of his obligation to pay yearly tribute to the Sultan of Muscat."

Whether the Government has at length secured the help it looked for from abroad, or has finally determined to act without it, is more than we can say. But its line of action seems clearly indicated in the selection of Sir Bartle Frere to take charge of a special mission to Zanzibar. The choice of such an agent for such a purpose serves at any rate to show that the Anglo-Indian view of the question has at length been adopted by the English Government, and that a genuine effort will now be made to win over the Sultan of Zanzibar to some arrangement which may satisfy all concerned, except the gentlemen who live by turning freemen into slaves. Sir Bartle Frere has always been a foremost advocate of the policy recommended by Sir William Coghlan; a policy at once thorough, generous, and fair to all. If his appointment means anything, it means a readiness on our part to gain by peaceful means what some persons would rather gain by brute force. We may take it for granted that the envoy elect to Zanzibar is empowered to treat with the Sultan for a fair exchange of good offices. Sir Bartle Frere will no doubt impress upon the Sultan the policy of surrendering his duties on imported slaves, in return for his future freedom from the payment of yearly tribute to Muscat. It is said indeed that the Sultan himself has already hinted his willingness to make a bargain of this very nature; and it is certain that he has never paid with a good grace the tribute imposed upon him by existing treaties. His co-operation will be cheaply purchased by an arrangement which would release him from an irksome liability; and Sir Bartle Frere will no doubt convince him of the increased profits which his revenue may derive from the encouragement of lawful trade. Somebody of course will have to make good in his stead the money due by treaty to Muscat. It is not, in English eyes, a large sum, this matter of 10,000 crowns a-year, however important it may seem to the ruler of Muscat. But our honour is concerned in the paying of it, were it never so large; and the suppression of a trade which involves such horrors as those lately recorded in the Times of India would be worth an outlay of many times that sum. The scenes therein depicted lend a crowning ghastliness to the tales we had already heard from Dr. Livingstone and Bishop Wilberforce. From the reckless waste of life in every village beaten up for slaves, to the ruthless drowning of sick slaves like mere cattle on the way to their intended place of bondage, the Arab man-stealers are consistently cruel. Apart however from such considerations, the mere fact of ninety thousand free Africans being yearly torn from their homes, of whom seven or eight out of every ten die on shore or at sea of sickness and ill-treatment, is enough to warrant us in extending to the slave-dealers of Eastern Africa the principles which have spoiled the trade on the Eastern Coast. England will hardly begrudge a fresh outlay of a few thousands a-year in completion of a purpose to which she has already devoted many millions.

We may fairly however assume that India's share in the new arrangement will not be limited to the loan of one of her ablest statesmen as head of the mission which is early next month to start for Zanzibar. Last July Lord Granville touched upon the need of waiting to see, among other things, whether India would agree to share the cost of maintaining a Resident at that place; and the Bishop of Winchester proposed to divide between India and England the expense of bribing the ruler of Zanzibar to forego his right to import slaves for the good of his own revenue. It may therefore be taken for granted that, in one way or another, India will have to pay for the honour of sending Sir B. Frere to bargain, in the name of the Foreign Office, for the suppression of slavery in Zanzibar. The Duke of Argyll has no doubt done his best to keep down the inevitable tax upon India's revenues; but, in these days of economy at any cost, his Grace may be deemed fortunate if England has agreed to halve with India all the expenses involved in the mission to Zanzibar.

OCTROI.—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

"It is manifest, then, that there is nothing so chimerical as the idea of giving a country a government at variance with its nature, its tendencies, and its traditions. When the government does not emanate from the people itself, from its manners, its character, its faith, nay even from its prejudices, whatever the Chambers may construct beyond this base line is an illusion and certain to decay."—Louis Napoleon on the Parliamentary form of Government in France and in England, December, 1851.

SIR,—A friend in a letter dated 19th instant writes as follows:—

All the people in India, I think, are mad on octroi. I continued to keep it out of — as long as I was there, but since I left they have introduced it. The rich men on municipal committees like it better than any system of taxation which involves their paying Rs. 20, Rs. 30, Rs. 50, down in hard cash. I think that it is a system which when first introduced, if vigilantly watched, does well enough, but every day the control becomes less vigilant, and the native establishment, as they get to know each other, become greater adepts in extortion and embezzlement.

When the advocates of octroi in India compare their system with the French, they forget two things:—1. That in India the towns are unwalled, and it is therefore impossible to prevent smuggling; in fact, octroi becomes a reward for dishonesty, and the share of taxation, due from those who smuggle, has to be paid by the honest and helpless poor. 2. That our means of supervising and controlling our badly paid native agency are very small in comparison with what the French authorities possess; the majority of our European officers are very imperfectly acquainted with the language, slang, and tricks of the natives; they can be cheated with impunity.

The natives, who are entertained and badly paid by the Octroi Department, find their appointments very lucrative.

The officers of Government have no right to throw off their own shoulders the responsibility of permitting universal corruption, such as has been so graphically described by Sir Charles Trevelyan. English Governors have no right to leave municipalities to decide whether octroi should be levied or not. Most of us have received some education in the science of political economy, and we have no right to make over the helpless poor to the tender mercies of Municipal Baboos, who wish to save their own and their friends' pockets, and who are in fact under the dictation of the district officers; the latter dislike the trouble of collecting other taxes; and like the honour and glory of expending large sums of money, and of seeing their names in print under the guise of public benefactors.

Louis Napoleon in his admirable pamphlet pointed out that the French have never permitted their sovereigns to transfer their responsibility to their Prime Ministers; the English in India will sooner or later discover that the natives hold the Heads of Districts, the Heads of Provinces, and the Head of the Empire, responsible for all injustice and extortion committed under official permission. Nations living within 34 deg. of the Equator refuse to be subjected to the cruelty of cold and naked Law. They cry aloud for justice, and demand patriarchal government. The District Officer in India is considered responsible for securing equitable taxation, and its equitable collection, as well as for the administration of civil and criminal justice. It is just possible that in the performance of his duties he may be murdered, for who can understand the unfathomable wisdom of the Almighty? but what death can be more glorious than to be assassinated in the performance of one's duties, with the knowledge that one's departure from this life will be deplored by a million of immortal souls.—Your obedient servant,

P.S.—The supplement to the Gazette of India is unfortunately printed in a very inconvenient form; they are frequently lost or mislaid in the public offices. The Secretary to Government in one of our Provinces and his clerks were unable to find in their office the Supplement of the Gazette Extraordinary of the 14th of September, 1864, in which Trevelyan's masterly Report was reprinted.

Before Parliament meets again three documents should be reprinted by order of the Secretary of State for India and formed into a Blue-book, together with any other documents which may throw light on the important subject of octroi in India.

1st. Trevelyan's Town Duty Report of 1833, republished by the Viceroy on the 14th of September, 1864.

2nd. The Viceroy's own Minute of the 14th of September, 1864.

3rd. The Viceroy's own Minute of the 14th of November, 1868.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In this progressive age of man when the sunbeams of European enlightenment and Western civilisation have at length reached my country, so that many inhabitants of the burning plains of Hindostan come annually to England, perhaps a short jotting of a few items that have struck one of them—namely, myself, during my visit may not be badly accepted, particularly as I observe that the lucubrations of other foreigners resident here, such as Mr. Taine, the French literary gent, are tumultuously appreciated by the Metropolitan press of London.

I arrived in this Great Babylon September 20 last, in afternoon, and was soon lodged in a fashionable public-house of entertainment in the Strand vicinity. I same evening went immediately to submit my credentials and introduction documents to their respective recipients, by calling in a cab at their residences, and giving them to the handsome domestics. But of course I did not request admission. I sowed my seed in the mould and waited patiently to see if it would sprout. So I went back to my hotel admiring with all my heart on the road the splendid shops and streets lit up with gas and thronged like an ant-hill with crowds of human beings neatly dressed and cheerfully faced. I reflected that to leave this fairy-like scene for India, was like leaving paradise for hell, and must require the courage of Hercules, and I wonder not that European gentlemen in India are only anxious to procure the customary pension, and to come home before they die. I found a Mussulman native friend named Mahmoud Shah, who has resided long time in Europe, at Conway's establishment, waiting for me in the coffee-room. I asked him how he found the air and the water agree with him, and whether he did not experience distress in his constitution from the cold, but he assured me no! Both the air and the food are stronger and better here than in Hindostan. My mind was excessively comforted to hear that England was so wholesome.

Next day Mahmoud Shah and I went out to view the architectural and other curiosities. I was astonished to see so many European gentlemen, most of whom looked of the same sort as our collectors, assistant commissioners, &c., in India, hurrying ceaselessly to and fro on foot in the dirty mud, and with a thick fog in the air! Such dignified and influential looking English persons in Hindostan always ride about comfortably in buggies and do not walk. Mahmoud Shah explained to me that they do this through pride, because they wished to be recognised as great men in India. Here they are less than nothing. He had hardly said so, when I saw his Honour the late Lieutenant-Governor of Delhi, who would not speak to our rajahs and nawabs so noble he was without frowning haughtily at them, descending out of a mean looking omnibus and pay a few pence! He was very dirty in dress and humble in aspect and looked like a poor miserable clerk! If his Highness the Rajah of Puttialah should arrive and recognise he would bite his thumbs with shame and remorse! Another thing I remarked is the crowd of youthful ladies, fair and rosy, fashionably attired, that everywhere without fear are running busily about the streets. I asked Mahmoud Shah if these are the wives and daughters of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Delhi and of other similar personages, but he informed me no! The caste of ladies in the streets is lower than the men, because these are called the "breadwinners," and are engaged in menial and industrious pursuits. These females are very ingenious to make money, and some of them are so boldly countenanced that they cause photographic portraits of their own figures to be concocted, and then exhibit themselves handcoloured in the shop windows at 2s. each!

Another impression that has struck me since my arrival, is that all the gentlemen and ladies are extremely condescending and kind. In India they do not ask us to their houses, but behold No. 1 fruits of my introduction, letters came to hand, in shape of a scented chitty with "At home" written inside, also "Please come in Oriental costume." Accordingly I presented myself in the distinguished mansion. Ladies magnificently dressed with glittering jewels swarmed like ants on an anthill, and aristocratic noblemen addressed me without pride. Then there was dancing in another room. I had once peeped through a purdah in messroom at Benares, but this was the first time I see it distinctly first-class. Many reflections arising in my breast at this time. In the first place, how marvellous that these English people have no jealousy? In Hindostan, if a wife is discovered even to speak to a strange man, it is our custom to punish without ceremony. Here hymeneal females promiscuously embracing strange gentlemen with head on collar are coolly revolving round, husbands looking on gaping! Surely the English race is not concocted of the self-same materials as ours! I decide to accept the kind invitation of a fat talkative whiteheaded old gentleman, to visit the Royal learned Anthropological Society, in hopes, perhaps, to hear this curious problem explained. I will not now intrude upon your valuable space. If my humble impressions of England from a Hindostanee view, Mr. Editor, are acceptable, I another day am sending you another letter.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Conway's Boarding House, London, FAIZ ALI KHAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—“Deeds not words” is a motto very appropriately adopted by one of your correspondents in reference to the above.

Absence from London prevented my seeing a notice issued by the so-called “Indian Army Defence Institution,” which appeared in the Homeward Mail, and to which my attention was called by one of the petitioners whose claim is in the hands of the Bonus Committee; I find the same or a similar one in Allen's Indian Mail of the 14th inst., and I feel that silence in respect to the above Institution is no longer possible.

I must, however, request you and your many interested and other readers to understand that what I am about to say or to write is said and written on my sole and personal responsibility, dictated by a sense of right and by what is due essentially to the spirit and intentions interpreted in and by the successive representations made by and on behalf of the late Hon. East India Company's Army officers.

I write simply as one of those who has a claim, though no doubt previous communications signed by me on behalf of the Bonus Committee will readily enough show that my acquaintance with the whole subject is of much older date than that of the Institution above referred to, and entitles me to speak that which must satisfy all who are interested in this important question.

Firstly then, let me say, without sarcasm, that the Indian Army needs no “Defence” of any sort, representative or otherwise; that for a trio or any number of gentlemen forming themselves into an Institution such as that indicated in the notice, and especially if any of them be retired officers, was to place themselves in an utterly false position, and that they do or would give to any direct action or proceedings on behalf of the petitioners a false, unfair and prejudicial character. It is but too well-known that the interests of the officers, as touching on the above question, have, so to speak, never been attacked by the Government, but that the latter deemed the whole system illegal and therefore only not recognisable. The Government so far, and not the Army, has all along, and notoriously been on what, I may, with all respect, term the defensive; and it is quite as well known to you and all your readers that we the petitioners have step by step substantially gained ground and conclusively shown that our representations are both consistent and well-founded. But we have only attained to this point by adopting a course which alone can carry weight; that is, we have simply but perseveringly submitted our claims, in a patient and impartial tone and manner. We have never wanted to be defended, since all know well enough that on every occasion of the question being brought before the House of Commons a distinct acknowledgment of our claim being well-founded has been made by considerable majorities.

I will add that it is also well known that the same slow and silent action is proceeding, and has been proceeding uninterruptedly, and that the position in which we now stand through that dignified and only proper course adopted by the Bonus Committee justifies the anticipation of an early and satisfactory settlement of this question.

But I am bound to go further, and say that this supplementary body is in a certain sense, and if anything an impediment, and can only cause confusion, whilst it is in itself powerless and inoperative.

I have reason to believe that the forms of petition which they first sent to their subscribers proved informal, and were one and all returned as such from the immaculate Chamber, and as the major part of them came from India, it follows that through want of proper knowledge and care a whole twelve months' action (supposing action had resulted from the proceedings of the Institution) was utterly lost, and this is, or would be, more likely to damage the locus standi and prospects of a cause than even years of delay or seeming inaction.

It stands to reason that once the chief grievances of the Indian Army (as to promotion) had been so far redressed, and those relating to the above question alone left unsettled, the only thing which remained to be done was to confine all action to that one subject, and certainly no simpler, unmistakable, proper title could have been adopted or thought of than that of the "Bonus Committee," and it is equally certain that there has been and is now only one such committee, and that one really, effectually, and by proper right and precedence representing the petitioners; and, as I also know, the only one that has any power or influence for good.

Let me, then, ask those officers who have for a year past contributed the sums and subscriptions set down in the circular of the Institution above referred to, what good or effect have those contributions produced. What prominent or any really interested members of Parliament have they got to espouse their cause? Or is it the fact that they have lived and flourished under the borrowed light of the Bonus Committee, which alone was recognised and actively supported by that gallant veteran who departed this life in June last, well stricken in years, but yet in harness, and bent on seeing the action of the Bonus Committee crowned with success?

Let me tell all officers interested in this question that their interests are in the right worthy care of the Bonus Committee, and that if they desire to succeed they can only do so by supporting the action of this Committee, and not turn off to an unknown and endless road, indicating only defence where no defence is needed.

I observe in the notice under consideration a lurking desire on the part of the institution to make arrangements with the Bonus Committee; that is to say, they would desire an amalgamation. Let me say, firstly, that amalgamation of another sort is already the cause of any action having to be taken, and the Bonus Committee, consequently, and very naturally, object to adopting such a course; and, secondly, that it is not in any way called for or necessary, seeing that the Bonus Committee alone has prosecuted the question rightly, and has alone the support and countenance of a large number of M.P.'s.

If the gentlemen representing the Institution wish well for the cause, their best and only course is to resign their functions and leave it to the Bonus Committee to accomplish a task undertaken long before the Institution was formed or probably thought of.

By inserting this letter in your columns you will be rendering the body of interested petitioners a service.

I may take this opportunity of stating that the only address of the Bonus Committee is at 55, Parliament-street, S.W.—I remain, Sir, yours very faithfully,

FRANCIS PICTET,
Captain, Retired List, Madras Army.

THE MINERAL WEALTH OF HAZARIBAGH.

The Indian Daily News hopes that the prolonged visit of Mr. Campbell to Hazaribagh will have one good effect, that of settling the future position to be held by this important plateau. It is less than 250 miles from the capital, and has an elevation of at least 1,800 feet. It is so rich in minerals that if the difficulties in the way of obtaining land were removed, it would soon become the centre of a great manufacturing industry. Its agricultural capabilities, again, are, to the full, as rich as its mineral resources. Were this healthy upland tract once connected by railway with the capital, we have no manner of doubt that it would speedily become a favourite and successful tea district, as well as a source of general supply for Calcutta. Just now, however, the great question is that which turns upon the development of its inexhaustible beds of iron and coal. On this subject the Public Works and Geological Departments have minuted and reported ad nauseam. Information has been collected, re-collected, revised, supplemented, and condensed, without being able to free itself from the thrall of red-tape. The Supreme Government has considered the subject, so has the local Executive, but, from some unexplained cause, years have slipped by, in re-doing work that was done well years ago, without a single step being taken to come to a practical decision. Under these circumstances, and remembering how much time and labour have already been devoted to the subject, the public have a right to expect that the visit of the Lieutenant-Governor will result in a decision one way or the other. The questions to be resolved are, admitting the necessity for India of such a centre, the superiority of Hazaribagh as a possible mining and manufacturing centre, to Beerbhoom on the one hand, or Kumaon on the other. Such industries require for their successful working a numerous staff of European skilled workmen, as overseers, foremen, superintendents, and even as leaders of gangs; and if established, would speedily cause to spring up a settlement similar in its composition, but more promising than that of the East Indian Railway at Jamalpore, or of the Eastern Bengal Railway, at Kanchraparah.

REPRESSION OF CRIME.

The Bengalee is glad to find that at least one Judge of the High Court has been impressed with the necessity of rigorously putting down the crime of perjury. We doubt whether in the ordinary intercourse of life the standard of veracity in Bengal falls short of the standard of veracity in England; but there cannot be the least doubt that the notion that all strategy is fair in the warfare of litigation is very extensively prevalent in this country. In Backergunge and Jessore especially perjury prevails to an extent which would go far to palliate Macaulay's libel on our national character. We may have a better set of judges and magistrates than those who preside over our Courts at present; we may have an abler and more upright bar. However much the judicial machinery may be improved, glaring miscarriages of justice will occur so long as our Courts constantly present the scandalous spectacle of one set of witnesses contradicting another point-blank. All judicial reforms will be useless, so long as perjury is not put down by the strong arm. By vigorous repression we do not of course mean increased penalties. The penalties provided for perjury in the Penal Code are strong enough, ranging from three years' rigorous imprisonment in simple cases to capital punishment in cases of the Titus Oates type, i.e., when the perjurer falsely swears away a man's life. In fact we maintain that it is because judges inflict severe penalties for perjury that prosecutions for the offence are so rare, convictions by Sessions Courts still rarer, and the upholding of such convictions by the High Court rarest of all. There are many Sessions Judges, who think that three years' imprisonment is not too severe a punishment for a wretch who falsely denies his relationship to the party for whom he gives evidence. Men are naturally reluctant to prosecute such wretches. Magistrates hesitate to commit them, juries hesitate to convict them, and the High Court sets aside the convictions on the most trivial and technical grounds. If ordinary cases of perjury were more lightly punished, prosecutions and convictions for the offence would be far more numerous than at present. Section 193 of the Penal Code would cease to be a dead letter, and civil and criminal justice would be far better administered than at present. We cannot too strongly impress on judicial officers, the Legislature, and the Government that it is the certainty of punishment, not its severity, which most effectually checks crime. This maxim was the basis of Sir Samuel Romilly's law reforms, and it should be borne in mind by all judicial and magisterial officers when dealing with offences in which public sympathy is likely to be aroused on behalf of the accused. When grand larceny or the theft of property above twelvepence in value was a capital crime in England, juries used to perjure themselves wholesale and deliver verdicts of acquittal, or conviction of petty larceny, in the face of overwhelming evidence as to the fact of theft, and the value of the stolen property.

PAST AND PRESENT.

The Indian Daily News remarks that before the assumption of Indian rule by the Crown it was the fashion to regard things Indian as differing toto celo from things English. It is now the fashion to judge of a measure simply as it may recommend itself to an English statesman who, from a controlling and supervising authority, has become in theory the administrator of India. We are trying to do in India what we have failed to do at the Cape, in Australia, in Canada. General Jacob summarised the tendency of the Government by saying,—"You imagine that liberty means the same thing in all parts of the world, and that all mankind equally desire it. You could not make a greater mistake. Liberty with you means that you have a right to govern yourselves, and that it is tyranny to govern you. Liberty with an Asiatic means that he has a right to be governed, and that to make him govern himself is tyranny. If the people of India were your equals you would not be here—your mission is to govern them, and you must govern them well, or they will cut your throats!" Just so we must govern, and govern well; but the point at issue is whether we govern well by forcing on the people an endless succession of reforms of an approved English type. The natives of this country are not Englishmen, and never will be Englishmen. But even if they were Englishmen, experience, as well as the truest principles of policy, would unite to convince us that the government which would be best for Englishmen in England would be very far from being the best for Englishmen in India. By all means regularise and strengthen the Government in India; if indeed the English are to retain India at all, the Government must of necessity assume a more regular—scientific, if that word be preferred—form than was perhaps possible under the Company; but when we have admitted this, it does not follow that that only is scientific government which approves itself to Western notions. The Government has to retrace its steps, to recast its policy, and to regard Indian requirements as of more importance than English theories. It has lost much time, and has not yet begun to consolidate English rule in India, as an Indian system of government administered by Englishmen. In proportion as it succeeds will the natives more and more regard the English as the national rule, and adopt and cherish the institutions we establish. At present the simple fact that the natives regard the Queen's rule as more foreign than that of the Company is a proof that hitherto scientific government is a failure, not because it is not required, but because it has been deflected into a channel which carries it beyond the reach of native sympathies.

MAJORS OF ARTILLERY.

The Times of India, commenting on the late Royal warrant and the subsequent orders of the Indian Government, observes that the services of a Major of Royal Artillery in India are valued at exactly Rs. 533-10-0, while those of his brother in the Infantry are worth Rs. 819-3-0. Further, the Artillery man is not even a mounted man, though a full-blown Major; and he receives no horse-allowance under any circumstances. We can only suppose that the magnificent addition of Rs. 70 to his command allowances is intended, besides "improving his position," to pay for the temporary services of some old "screw" when he shall be called upon, as he certainly will be, being a Field officer, to perform a Field officer's duty. The position may be ridiculous to the wags of the Horse Guards, but it is serious enough to the Majors. It is well-known that service in India is most distasteful to all Artillery officers—and, for the matter of that, we grieve to say, to any officers now-a-days—but what Royal Artillery officer will now come out as a middle-aged man to serve in the East on a salary that a young assistant in a merchant's house in Bombay would turn up his nose at? Not one will come cheerfully, and small blame to them. The Secretary of State may rest assured that he is creating much ill-feeling, not only amongst the officers of the late Indian Artillery if it were possible, indeed, to intensify their indignation at his recent reductions of their so-called junior brigades, but amongst those of the old Royal Artillery, who, coming to this country for the first time, find themselves placed lower than their shipmates, perhaps, of the Infantry, with whom in all other countries they had ranked at least on an equality. We hear that it is reported from Woolwich there is great difficulty in getting young men to enter the Military Academy. No one can wonder at this when we consider that half the future service of all young Artillery officers must be passed in India, where they will be subjected to such treatment as we have endeavoured to set forth in this slight sketch.

THE PALLISER BOOT.—We understand that the reports from the various regiments, after a six months' trial of the boot proposed by Major Palliser, are very favourable. The Palliser boot is a combination of a shoe and a gaiter. Its peculiarity consists in the back part being made so as to fit well over the heel, while plenty of spare room is left over the instep for pulling the boot on and off. When the boot is on it is fastened round the instep like an ordinary shoe. A further trial on a much more extended scale will be made.

MR. COWAN AND MR. FORSYTH.

In a letter to the Pioneer Mr. Cowan writes as follows:—

In April last I was at Mussoorie, awaiting the final orders of the Government of India in my case. I received a letter from the Supreme Government, informing me that Mr. Douglas Forsyth had drawn up a narrative of the Kooka outbreak which had been laid confidentially before the Acting Viceroy, Lord Napier, whose attention was arrested by a statement made therein to the effect that Mr. Douglas Forsyth had sent orders to me to keep the prisoners for trial, which orders Mr. Cowan must have received some hours before he executed any. His Excellency remarked that this statement was not only opposed to the statement made by me in the official correspondence submitted by the Punjab Government, but was also opposed to the spirit of Mr. Forsyth's own version of the same incident in that correspondence—no mention of a letter to the above effect having been made in it—and explanations were called for. My reply was a distinct denial that any such orders had reached me previous to the executions. I then also for the first time learned that Mr. Douglas Forsyth, whom I believed to have fully approved of the action taken by me, had, in letters to Government, declared that he deprecate and deplored my conduct; and, in self-defence, I submitted to Government the following copy, written from recollection, as all my papers were at Loodiana, of a demi-official letter addressed to me by Mr. Douglas Forsyth on the 18th January, after the receipt by him of my report of the executions on the 17th:—

18-1-72. T. D. FORSYTH."

On my return to Loodiana, some time afterwards, I discovered that the above was not a correct copy of Mr. Douglas Forsyth's letter, and I submitted to Government a correct copy, which was as follows:—

"MY DEAR COWAN,—I write a line to say that I fully approve and confirm all you have done. You have acted with energy and promptitude. I am coming out.
"18-1-72." (Signed) "T. D. FORSYTH."

The discrepancy, as will be seen, is trifling, and an unnecessary fuss has, I think, been made about it. In his letter to the Times Mr. William Forsyth asserts that the above letter was written before his brother knew that I had disobeyed his orders, i.e., before he heard of the executions. This is simply at variance with fact. Mr. Douglas Forsyth has never attempted to deny that my report of the executions reached him some hours before he wrote the above letter, which contained his unqualified approval of them. In his letter to the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, denying emphatically the use of the words erroneously attributed to him, Mr. Douglas Forsyth unquestionably wishes it to be understood that he did not approve of my action at Mulair Kotla. He has forgotten that in a letter written by him to his brother on the 26th January, nine days after the executions, he stated that undoubtedly the prompt action taken by Mr. Cowan saved the province from a serious rising. This letter was quoted by William Forsyth in a letter which he addressed to the Times, and which appeared in that journal on the 2nd March. It is quite certain that Mr. Douglas Forsyth then thought my conduct admirable. It is equally certain that it was not until the Government of India had expressed its disapprobation of my conduct that he began to deplore and deprecate the action taken by me.

I have to apologise for the length of this letter; but desire to make one more remark before finishing with this unpleasant subject. When two servants of Government commit the same offence, on what principle of justice is the subordinate chosen for exemplary punishment? On the 17th January, in the belief that a serious rising would thereby be prevented, I ordered the execution, without trial, of prisoners taken in open rebellion with arms in their hands. Twenty-four hours later, when the necessity for making an example no longer existed, Mr. Forsyth executed sixteen more prisoners, also without any form of trial. I am dismissed the service; Mr. Forsyth is merely reprimanded.

The following are the names of those whose works have been commended by the judges:—

Oils.—Mrs. Graham and Captain Tanner.

Miscellaneous.

SUBSCRIPTION FOR MRS. ELSON.—The total amount subscribed for Mrs. Elson, the widow of the heroic pilot Elson, is about Rs. 8,800. Mrs. Elson has proceeded home to her father, a clergyman of the Church of England.

THE KULU MINES.—Interesting information is published by our Lahore contemporary regarding the Kulu mines. The new lode in the Shigri mine proves to be one of very rich stibnite. The ore of the Uchich mine on assay turns out to contain both gold and silver.

FINANCIAL.—Mr. George Kellner, Military Accountant-General, proceeds home in March next on urgent private leave. His evidence before the Finance Committee will be very valuable, and may serve to dispel some of the financial mists by which that committee seem surrounded.

COMMISSARIAT.—We learn that Colonel Willes, the Commissary General, now at Simla, will descend from the hills by the beginning of October, and will proceed direct to Peshawur, and thence to inspect some of the Commissariat offices in other parts of the Punjab. He is expected to return to the Presidency by the 12th November.—Indian Daily News.

EDUCATIONAL.—A Calcutta paper learns that the conduct of primary education is to be committed to the charge of District Officers in Bengal; they will have committees and secretaries to help them, but the initiative will be with them. The Bengal Government has just given an extra grant of three lakhs a-year for primary schools; this, with the two lakhs already granted, makes a total expenditure of five lakhs on primary education.

THE LATE MR. FAGAN.—It is proposed to erect a memorial to the Rev. Fekrim C. Fagan, Civil Chaplain of Allahabad, who died lately of cholera. A stained glass window in Trinity Church, where he so long officiated, or the erection of alms-houses for widows in connection with the City Mission, an undertaking in which Mr. Fagan greatly interested himself, are suggested as suitable forms for the memorial.

CHOLERA IN CALCUTTA.—The Calcutta papers report a great prevalence of cholera amongst the shipping in Calcutta. During the last week there have been more admissions at the General Hospital from this epidemic than have previously occurred during such a short period in the whole of the hot season, and the greater portion of the unfortunate men have succumbed to this most fatal disease. As the whole of the patients appear to have come from the river, it is probable that the cause of the disease may, in some measure, be attributed to the men using the river water for drinking purposes.

PROPOSED EXHIBITION IN CALCUTTA.—The Civil and Military Gazette states that it is intended to hold a grand exhibition of arts and manufactures in Calcutta during the early part of next year, and promises to give further particulars as soon as the scheme is matured. Since a proposal to hold an exhibition was first made in our columns, all kinds of rumours have prevailed regarding the intention of the Supreme Government to take up the matter. We hope that the news contained in the Simla paper is something more than one of these rumours.

INDIAN MONEY ORDERS.—The Director-General of Post Offices in India has issued a circular stating that, under arrangements concluded with the Post Office of the United Kingdom, an exchange of Money Orders between England and India will begin on the 1st October, 1872. The offices established in India for the transaction of inland money order business will transact also the business of Overland Money Orders. No Overland Money Order is to exceed £10 or to contain the fraction of a penny. The amount chargeable in India for an order payable in the United Kingdom can be ascertained from any Money Order-office. The scale of Indian charges is liable to vary with the rate of exchange; for the present the scale of charge will be as follows:—

Amount of Order.				Cost of Order.
7	10	11	...	80	11	4
7	10	0	...	80	4	0
5	0	11	...	53	15	4
5	0	0	...	53	8	0
2	10	0	...	26	12	0

The sum chargeable for an intermediate amount can be obtained from the next higher amount in the above schedule by deducting from the "cost" at the rate of eight annas for every shilling and eight pie for every penny, by which the "amount" is reduced. For each order the remitter will be furnished with a receipt with all needful information printed on the back. Orders for remittances from the United Kingdom, payable in India, will be forwarded without charge for postage by the Postmaster, Bombay, to the Receiver in India; if there is no Money Order-office at his address, the Postmaster of Bombay, before issuing the order, will inquire of him as to the office at which payment can most conveniently be taken. These orders will be in the same form, and subject to the same rules with respect to payment, as ordinary Inland Money Orders, except that the receiver will not be required to give information respecting the address of the remitter in England, but simply to give name.

THE RECENT DEATHS AT MEERUT.—John Sabatier Frith was a Lieut.-Col. of 1868, he served with much credit throughout the Indian Mutiny, and his well-deserved reputation had won for him selection as the prospective successor of Col. Bidolph, Adjutant-General of Artillery in England. Lieut.-Colonel Frith was brother-in-law to Sir Archdale Wilson of Delhi; he had long been suffering from illness, the result of climate, when the attack supervened which caused his death. The hon. William Murray Fraser, Major in the Bengal Staff Corps and District Superintendent of Police, was a son of the 15th Lord Saltoun of Abernethy, and brother to General Lord Saltoun 16th Baron; he had only recently returned from Mussoorie, to which place he repaired for the benefit of his health; his attack was sudden and followed in but a few hours by his death.

MISPLACED ECONOMY.—The Hindoo Patriot says:—A rather funny story of the economy enforced by the Bengal Government reaches us. We are told that hitherto four constables were employed to guard the lock-up in Mofussil jails; the Lieutenant-Governor, whom trifles light as air do not even escape, directed his attention to this item of jail charges, and ordered that only two constables should be engaged for the purpose. No sooner ordered than done, and the extra two constables were drafted to the General Police force. Their pay, it would seem, was not saved to the State. The new arrangement has not however worked well. We hear that some ten or twelve prisoners lately broke open the lock-up at Ranaghat and effected their escape. A similar contretemps has occurred in the Dinagore or Rungpore jail. The Inspector-General of jails accordingly urged the restoration of the four constables as heretofore. The Lieutenant-Governor has however ordered the employment of three instead of four!

THE CALCUTTA PROFESSORSHIP OF ANATOMY AND PATHOLOGY.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal having, some time ago, expressed his views in regard to the abolition of one of the minor Professorships of the Calcutta Medical College, viz., that of Anatomy and Pathology, and to the transfer of the institution, the Principal (now on leave) as well as the Professors of the said College have severally recorded their minutes on the subject, expressing an opinion against the measure proposed. Dr. Fayer, in concurring with the views of Dr. Chevers, has expressed his regret that the local government should suggest the abolition of the Professorship of two important branches of medical science in an educational institution where the students are trained up on sound English principles. The learned Professor is said to have observed that the distinction of major and minor professorships is of Indian policy. No such distinction is made in the colleges at home. The Government of India, considering the question in all its bearings, has decided that the Professorship alluded to shall not be abolished.—Indian Daily News.

SOCIAL PROGRESS IN OUDH.—On Monday last there happened at Hurdai an event, the like of which had perhaps never happened there since the spot was marked on the crust of the earth. We are referring to an entertainment given by Mohammed Ikramullah Khan Bahadoor, Extra Assistant Commissioner of Hurdai, to the European officers of the station, the principal feature of which was that men of different nationalities sat down together at the same table and partook of the elegant and recherche treat provided by the good host, and the mutual esteem and cordiality which seemed to mark their intercourse in this pleasant little social gathering. The following European and Mahomedan gentlemen had been invited: Mr. Gibson, Captain Prendergast, Dr. McReddie, Captain Tulloch, Mr. W. White, Mr. Russell, Mr. Fawcus, Mr. Prince, Syed Wassi Hyder, Talukdar of Bilgram, Syed Mohammed Ahmad, Extra Assistant Commissioner of Hurdai, Syed Mohammed Tahir, Talukdar of Bilgram, and M. Syed Hussain, of Canning College, Lucknow. The dancing and singing commenced at about eight o'clock, and at a little after nine the party sat down to supper. Neither the host nor his Mahomedan guests, of course, touched any wine, but they enjoyed the treat nevertheless, and the urbanity of the European guests kept the conversation flowing and free. Mr. Gibson's cordial manner and Ikramullah Khan's kindness and hospitality set every one free from the restraint which often makes merely formal entertainments so disagreeable.—Lucknow Times.

THE ZENANA SCHOOLS AT LUCKNOW.—We have been watching with some interest the excellent work that the Zenana Schools, attached to the Church Mission Society, have been doing at Lucknow, under the superintendence of Miss Hamilton, Miss Keane, and Miss D'Rozario. For the present the attention of these ladies has been concentrated upon girls' schools and especially upon the teaching of Bengali girls, whose parents are more willing and forward in encouraging female education than the members of the Hindustanee and Mahomedan community. Perhaps next to the Bengali, Mahomedan females appreciate education, and we understand that in not a few Mahomedan families have these ladies found access, but the doors of Hindu families are almost shut against them. There is a general aversion in the native communities against religious instruction, and if purely secular education be imparted, the number of Zenana pupils would undoubtedly increase. But as a rule native females have a greater liking for needle-work than education, and it frequently happens that when they have learnt how to make a pair of carpet shoes, cushions, socks, and the like, they cease to read. Constituted as native society is at present, it is no easy thing to create a desire for useful knowledge in the female mind, and the work of educating and elevating Indian females must be slow and gradual, and carried on with great tact and sacrifice, and, above all, with that zeal and noble devotion which the ladies of the Church Mission Society are evincing in their work here.—Lucknow Times, Sept. 12.

FLYING FOXES.—The Bengal Times gives an account of a gentleman who keeps a flying fox. "Its mother was shot one evening about four months ago; and, as luck would have it, the young one, which was clinging to her, escaped uninjured. The gentleman in question took it home and tamed it. We saw it last night for the first time, and were much surprised and interested. The animal was quite free to fly where he liked, and the only accommodation provided for him was a bit of stick, on which a plantain was tied, hung up in a room. Here he sleeps all day, and at night takes up his quarters inside 'X's' mosquito curtains. He can do a few tricks, such as turning somersaults, but he strongly objects to any one reading in his presence, and does all he can to prevent it by flying to the person and crawling on to the book. He plays with one just like a kitten. We were much surprised at the way in which he answered to his name when called by his master who had only to say, 'Jack, come here,' and he would fly to him, and hang, head downwards, of course, on 'X's' waistcoat, and then climb up and lick his face. This all took place at night, and on the table there was a powerful lamp burning, but 'Jack' did not seem to mind it. He is always suspicious of strangers, and flies to them at once and smells them all over. He never bites, though provided with very formidable rows of teeth. It is wonderful to observe the way in which he gets about by the use of the two large hooks on his wings, but when put on the ground it is painful to see how helpless he is. When bathed he uses his wings almost as human beings use a towel. He is extremely restless, his head and ears never being still, and his sense of smell as well as hearing seem very acute. He appears to have no desire to fly away, though he could do so, if he liked, at any moment. Sometimes at night he cries, and our friend assures us that when he does so he attracts a great number of flying foxes, which regularly fester the verandah, and he tells us that it is most curious to see them all hanging wherever they can get a firm hold."

A LECTURE ON HINDUISM.—Baboo Raj Narain Bose at a recent meeting of the National Society delivered a lecture on the "Superiority of Hinduism to other Prevailing Religions." He thus summed up the merits of Hinduism:—1. That the name of the Hindu religion is not derived from that of any man as that of Christianity, Mahomedanism, or Buddhism is. This shows its Catholic character. 2. That it does not acknowledge a mediator between the object of devotion and the worshipper. The Hindu worshipping Shiva, or Vishnu, or Doorga as the Supreme Being, recognises no mediator between him and the object of his worship. The idea of Nabee or prophet is peculiar to the Semetic religions. 3. That the Hindu worships God as the Soul of the Soul, as nearer and dearer to him than he is to himself. This idea pervades the whole of Hinduism from the Upanishads to the songs of the Baools. 4. That the idea of holding intimate communion with God even at the time of worldly business demanding the utmost attention of man is peculiar to the Hindu religion. 5. That the Scriptures of other nations inculcate the practice of piety and virtue for the sake of eternal happiness, while Hinduism maintains that we should worship God for the sake of God alone, and practise virtue for the sake of virtue. 6. That the Hindu Scriptures inculcate universal benevolence, while other Scriptures have only man in view. 7. That the idea of a future state entertained by the Hindu religion is superior to other religions, as it allows an expiatory process to sinners by means of transmigration, while Christianity and Mahomedanism maintain an Eternal Heaven, and an Eternal Hell. The Hindu doctrine of a Future State is also superior to that of other religions, inasmuch as it maintains higher states of existence in consonance to the law of progress prevalent in Nature. 8. Hinduism is pre-eminently tolerant to all other religions, and believes that each man will obtain salvation if he follows his own religion. 9. That Hinduism maintains inferior stages of religious belief in its own bosom in harmony with the nature of man who cannot but pass through several stages of religious development before being able to grasp the Supreme Being. 10. That the Hindu maintains that religion should guide every action of life. It has been truly said "that the Hindu eats, drinks, and sleeps religiously." 11. That the Hindu religion is of a very comprehensive character as grasping within its embrace all human knowledge, all civil polity, and all domestic economy, impenetrating every concern of human life with the sublime influence of religion. 12. The extreme antiquity of the Hindu religion as coeval with the existence of man, thereby showing that there is much in it which can secure a permanent hold over his mind.

A SAD STORY.—The following are the particulars of the sad accident by which Mr. McFarlane of Meean Meer lost his life on the road from Dalhousie. On Thursday, the 19th Sept., he with his wife and two children left Dalhousie for the plains. He was riding a quiet safe little horse. Mrs. McFarlane and the children were in a doolie. Mr. McFarlane left Dalhousie in a weak state of health, and was probably riding loosely. At a part of the road below Doola-suffer, the first kahar chowkie, about six and-a-half miles from Dalhouse, they met two Ghoorkha soldiers from Bukhloh, who gave Mr. McFarlane a military salute. The sudden movement made the horse shy, and Mr. McFarlane fell heavily head foremost on the road. He staggered up, but slipped over the edge of the khud and rolled down a very short distance, some eight or ten feet. He then recovered and scrambled up the bank on to the road, and actually mounted the pony again and rode forward a little distance. Mrs. McFarlane however saw that he was in great pain, and immediately got out of the doolie, gave the children in charge to two kahars and assisted him into the doolie. She then turned the stirrup over the saddle and mounted and rode on, but about ten minutes after, on hearing a noise from the doolie, dismounted and went to look at him. We should mention that during all this time and all the rest of the journey a heavy storm of rain was pouring down, and all the party were soaking wet. Mr. McFarlane had got worse, and said that he was dying, and asked her to carry him on sharp to the next bungalow, so that he might die in a bed. They hurried on to Mamool, and all that weary seven miles his wife ran at the side of the doolie on foot in the rain, wading the Nainee Khud torrent waist deep. On reaching the Mamool bungalow Dr. Chesney, of the 4th Ghoorkhas, was at once sent for, and speedily arrived, but all assistance was in vain. It was found that the base of his skull was fractured and driven in upon the brain, which was much lacerated; he was besides much cut about the head, a very deep gash being right on the top. He died about seven o'clock on the evening of the same day. It was at first intended to bring his body to Dalhousie to be buried, but the weather continued very bad, and it was arranged that the funeral should take place at Bukhloh. The clergyman of Dalhousie, Mr. Lewin, was sent for, and the funeral took place on Saturday afternoon. The unhappy occurrence elicited the greatest sympathy from all in the station. The Ghoorkhas especially besought permission to attend the funeral, and Colonel Tytler selected one hundred men with their officers to attend. At their earnest request they were permitted also to lower the body into the grave. Colonel Tytler and Major Turton being chief mourners. The whole station were present at this funeral;—he is the first European who lies in Bukhloh cemetery.—Indian Public Opinion, Oct. 4.

Madras.

DR. CORNISH has been directed by the Government of Madras to take charge of the completion of the census-returms which were in course of preparation by the late Mr. Gover.

PERAMBORE.—The 17th Regiment N.I. at Perambore are suffering fearfully from dengue. The officers, with many members of their families, have been attacked.—Colonel Batten, Captain Lampen, Captain Butler, and Lieutenant Powis.

THE 2-21ST FUSILIERS.—The Madras Athenaeum hears that the 2-21st Fusiliers are likely to leave Madras for England earlier than was anticipated. The battalion is now under orders to leave Bombay by the fourth troopship, which is arranged to sail on the 11th December from that port.

CAMP OF EXERCISE.—We have every reason to believe that the proposed Camp of Exercise at Bangalore, this cold season, will not be held, partly on account of the 2nd battalion H.M.'s 21st Fusiliers having been ordered to leave Madras for England in November, instead of, as was originally intended, in March next.—Madras Mail.

CORPORAL ALLEN.—We regret to state that by latest accounts Corporal Allen, of the 1-21st Fusiliers, who was so cruelly shot by a private of the same regiment, is gradually and quietly sinking, with no particular expression of pain. He is not expected to live through the day. His intellect is perfectly clear.—Bangalore Herald, Oct. 1.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO MURDER A CORPORAL.—We learn that on Saturday night a private of the 1-21st Fusiliers, named P'pe, attempted to shoot Corporal James as he lay in bed asleep. Fortunately a soldier who was lying awake heard a noise, and jumping out of bed struck up the rifle just in time, and the ball struck the roof of the barrack-room.

SIR MADHAVA RAO.—We mentioned in our issue of yesterday that Sir Madhava Rao was likely to be made Dewan at Indore. According to a Western Coast paper not only is he likely to go, but also his relations, Ragoonath Row, Jaganath Row, and Ramnatha Row, are to accompany him to fill high posts at that State. It is also reported that Sungra Soob Iyen, Deputy Peishcar, Patchepa Naidu, Theravem Pillay, and Mel Elutha Pillay are to be sent for by Sir Madhava Rao after his reaching Indore. We wonder whether Holkar will be glad to see such a gathering.—Madras Times, Oct. 5.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT JAMES LANCASTER.—We regret to record the death, which took place on Thursday last, at his residence, Vepery High Road, of Lieutenant James Lancaster, of the Invalid Establishment. We believe that the deceased was suffering from dengue, which terminated in his death. His remains were buried last evening in St. Mary's burial-ground with military honours. The late Lieutenant Lancaster served in the expedition against China, and was present at the capture of Shanghai, 19th June, 1842, storm of Ching-Keang-foo, 21st July, 1842, and operations before Nankin, August, 1842, and received a medal for China.—Madras Athenaeum, Sept. 28.

ATTEMPT AT MURDER AT BANGALORE.—One of those brutal outrages, only too common of late among European troops in India, was committed at Bangalore on Saturday night, about 12 o'clock. A private of the 1-21st Fusiliers, who had been attending a performance at the theatre, on returning to his barrack-room, deliberately loaded his rifle and shot at a corporal who was in bed asleep. The sleeping man was not more than three or four feet from the rifle, and the marvel is that he was not killed on the spot. The bullet entered near the bottom of the spine and passed out by the hip. Half the bullet was found in the man's shirt; the other half has gone. The poor man is most severely wounded, but the medical officers, we are glad to hear, are hopeful that he will recover. Three or four days must elapse before a definite opinion can be pronounced on his case. It was thought desirable, however, on Sunday afternoon, to take the wounded man's deposition. No reason is assigned for this diabolical outrage. The prisoner on being apprehended showed signs of having been drinking, but he was not drunk or incapable of knowing what he was doing. His general character is good, and he has been in the regiment a long time.—Madras Mail, Sept. 25.

MYSORE.—The affairs in the palace of Mysore appear to be assuming a threatening aspect. Some of the illegitimate grandsons of the late Maharajah of Mysore have been removed from the palace, and the Maharanees have taken much offence at this. The controller of the Royal household is very unpopular with the Maharanees.

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—The Madras Mail understands that his Excellency Lord Napier of Magdala, G.C.B., Commander-in-Chief in India, at present intends paying a visit to Bangalore, on the 20th January, and that he will in all probability be the guest of Colonel Pearce, his brother-in-law, his Excellency having, when Captain Napier, R.E., married (1st) Miss Pearce, the daughter of Dr. Pearce, the Inspector-General of the Madras Medical Department. It is probable, however, that the countermanning of the orders for the Camp of Exercise, which is believed have been resolved upon by Government, may cause his Excellency to postpone his visit to Mysore.

THE BURMESE EMBASSY.—A Rangoon paper has the following paragraph:—"We understand, on excellent authority, that the Burmese Embassy has not been permitted to discuss any subject connected with public business, or with the political relations between Upper Burma and the Government of India. They have been treated precisely as they were formally told by the Chief Commissioner before their departure that they would be treated. They have been received with the hospitality and consideration due to the representatives of a friendly monarch, while they have been informed that all discussions on matters relating to the conduct of affairs between the two countries must be carried on through the prescribed channels of communication. As a natural result of this policy the Embassy is now about to proceed to Calcutta, a step which they would have done well to have taken in the first instance. If they had been better advised the whole of the net expenses of this mission, the only result of which has been to gratify the ambition of a few interested persons, would have been saved to the tax-payers of Upper Burma, who are already leaving the country in large numbers to avoid the extortion of the King's tax collectors."

SERIOUS RAILWAY ACCIDENT NEAR MADRAS.—The Madras Athlete says:—"The two P.M. mail train of the 28th September slipped a few of her carriages off the line near the foot of Balpally Ghaut, a station about ninety-seven miles from Madras on the N. W. Line. Some of the passengers were injured, and were conveyed to Tirupatty, about fourteen miles off, for medical aid. In consequence of the accident the train reached Codoor at two A.M. yesterday, whereas she ought to have been at this place between six and seven o'clock the evening previous. It appears, as far as we can gather, that the engine driver finding that he could not take the whole of the carriages up the incline on account of the rails being slippery, owing to the rains, left a portion of them on the main line, and took the rest on into Balpally Ghaut siding. He had hardly unhooked his engine from these carriages in order to return to fetch the remainder which he had left on the main line, when the carriages in the siding rolled down the incline, and dashed with terrific force into the other carriages, throwing many of them off the line. We did not receive our Bombay newspapers on Sunday till five or six hours after the time for their usual delivery. A painful excitement pervaded Madras yesterday evening on account of the accident."

STATION TALK.

DHULIA, Sept. 23.—Out of all the villages that suffered by the late inundation, Koosomba seems to have been the worst off, owing to its being unfortunately on rather low ground compared with the other villages on the Panjra river. This village is, or rather was, about seven koss from Dhulia (fourteen English miles), and appears to have been built in a fork of the Panjra, for that river ran to the west and north of the village. A nulla used to run to the south, while considerable bagayet (irrigated) land skirted the east. The Panjra river, on which the village was built, is supposed to take its rise somewhere between the Sailbaree and Umlee ranges of the Syadree, and passes through the Pimpulnair and Nizampoor Pergunnas of Khandeish, towards the districts of Dhulia, Sindkeira, and Amulnair. In Nizampoor its stream is considerably augmented by the waters of the Khan, after which, unitely, they form a no inconsiderable stream. During the monsoon it is by no means an unusual occurrence for the river to rise, owing to its being fed by mountain streams and torrents from the Syadree range, but in the memory of the oldest living inhabitant it was never known to rise as it did. It had been raining, they tell me, the whole of Saturday, the 14th September; not a regular honest down-pour, but a confounded, mean, and skulking drizzle, as if ashamed of itself, that kept everything dirty, muddy, and disagreeable. The inhabitants had all retired to rest, hoping for a bright day that would bring sunshine and happiness with it; but, alas for human hopes, there was no to-morrow for many who had laid down that sorrowful night, for the river rose stealthily about twelve o'clock, and before the frightened inhabitants were fairly aroused from their sleep the water had crept up to their doors, sapping the walls and foundations. The scene now was something fearful, and baffles all attempts at description. Amid the crashing in of falling houses, the groans of men, and the shrieks of women and children, were borne along the waters, accompanied by the snortings of terrified and maddened bullocks and buffaloes—shadows of men could be made out in the gloomy darkness hurriedly attempting to cross the nulla to the south of the village, some with women clinging to them, some carrying children, and others attempting to help their aged and tottering relatives through the now violent and rapid current; while the cattle attempted to follow, mutely appealing for help from man. A great number of the people escaped thus, but in a few minutes the low-lying bagayet land to the east was submerged, cutting off communication to that side, and the whole village was very soon hemmed in like an island. Some of the wretched inhabitants now commenced to climb the tall trees, while others sought shelter in one or two of the houses that were built in the highest part of the village; but this time, they say, a shock was felt that made the stoutest and bravest of them quake. Although it was impossible to see anything, owing to the darkness of the night, all knew instinctively what it was. The dreaded "bore" had come down with a noise like thunder, sweeping away in its headlong avalanche-like career the once flourishing town of Koosomba, and out of nearly 600 houses, about a dozen, in ruins, only remain now, with heaps of stones embedded here and there showing wherever the houses once stood, the woodwork, &c., being completely washed away, many of the inhabitants even washed away in their beds, while the surging waters engulfed and carried away others; people could not save anything, everything having been washed away in the darkness and confusion. The survivors are utterly destitute. Those that took refuge in the trees and higher houses have the mournful recollection of seeing their friends and houses, &c., washed away without being able to stretch out a helping hand. All that night nothing was to be heard but the lap lap of the dark and treacherous waters, keeping time to the mournful wailing of the wind, that played a sad requiem of the departed spirits of fifty or sixty of God's human creatures, who only a short three or four hours previously were endowed with life and strength. Next morning some two hundred people were missing, and the countenances of the survivors paled to think that among the corpses being rescued from the oozy and slimy mud on the banks of the river and in the adjoining fields there might happen to be a near and dear relative. The lamentations were loud and deep, one had lost a father, another a wife, a child, a sister, a dear brother: good God! could the sum of human misery go further? Friends, relatives, cattle, houses, stores of grain and food, property, fields, crops—gone, all gone.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

KATTYWAR.—Capt. F. T. Fortenth, of the Bombay staff corps, has been appointed to act as boundary settlement officer at Kattywar.

DR. WILSON.—We understand that the Rev. Dr. Wilson intends shortly to proceed to Calcutta, to visit some hills not far from that city, which are now inhabited by the descendants of the ancient Kavaraws. The hills referred to are prominently mentioned in the Hindu Purans.—Argus, Sept. 21.

DEATH FROM HYDROPHOBIA.—Our Mhow correspondent informs us of the death of Lieut. Woodward, of the 40th Regiment, from hydrophobia. An order was issued soon after his death that every prowling ownerless dog in the bazaar should be destroyed, but the "tender hearted" Banians sent every cur they could catch to Indore, so that they might be out of harm's way!—Bombay Gazette.

EDUCATIONAL.—We (Anglo-Catholic) learn that a proposal is under consideration to amalgamate the Bombay Education Society with the Diocesan Board of Education. In that case we have every confidence that Bishop Douglas will insist on the funds belonging to the institution "for the poor" being secured for its benefit exclusively, and not diverted in the way lately attempted.!

FINANCIAL.—We understand that Col. G. Ashburner, on general duty at Poona, has been nominated to fill one of the vacancies in the Financial Department, caused by the recent retirement of General Barr and the new arrangements which are at once to come into force in the Audit Department.

THE DOG TRADE IN POONA.—The latest thing out in Poona is, we are informed, the buying up of all the dogs in camp. No less than 200 were purchased from European regiments in garrison in one day by an individual who averred that he was commissioned by the Rajah to buy as many as he possibly could. Our sincere thanks we heartily bestow upon this real benefactor to the community at large for thus ridding us of the canine nuisance, but for what purpose they are purchased we cannot imagine—meat is not dear—and our butchers have not struck for higher wages.—Deccan Herald.

FLOODS IN GUZERAT.—We are glad to learn that Messrs. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy and Dinshaw Manekjee Petit have each forwarded Rs. 300 to Dr. Cowasjee Hormusjee Billimora, to enable him to form a fund for the relief of the sufferers by the recent heavy floods in Billimora, and several surrounding villages. The destruction caused to the property of the poor inhabitants, more particularly their clothing and grain, is heavy. The relief that will be rendered to them by funds raised in Bombay will be opportune and acceptable. The good example of the two gentlemen above named will, we hope, be speedily followed by others.—Times of India.

ENORMOUS FAILURE OF A PARSEE MERCHANT.—It is stated that Mr. Ruttonjee Eduljee Bottlewalla, a well-known Parsee merchant of this city, who was engaged in large transactions with China and other places, has stopped payment, and left for Damaun. The liabilities are roundly stated at two crores. It is stated that several local banks and Marwarrie merchants will sustain a heavy loss in consequence of the insolvency. It was rumoured in the bazaar on Thursday that Mr. Ruttonjee had, with a view to avoid disgrace, committed suicide by poisoning at Damaun. We are assured that there is no foundation whatever for the rumour.—Bombay Gazette.

THE COLLECTOR OF BELGAUM.—Mr. Grey, the Collector of Belgaum, is about to go on furlough to England. The importance of not moving an officer from his station, before he has become thoroughly acquainted with the locality, is proved in Mr. Grey's case. He had been more than seven years Collector of Belgaum, and in that time has been able to accomplish many good things for Belgaum, and he has carefully studied the wants of the people under his charge, and his municipal administration has been eminently popular. This is saying a very great deal in his favour, and we learn from a correspondent that "Belgaum sincerely regrets the approaching departure of Mr. Grey, and hopes that his absence will be only temporary."

THE "WRONG SIDE OUT."—The congregation in the cathedral yesterday had an opportunity of witnessing the latest freak of that "best abused" of all Government Departments, the P. W. D., which even when at work upon a holy edifice must have its little joke. The congregation could not but notice that three of the stained-glass windows which were recently sent out from home had been placed in the chancel, and many may probably have admired the flood of party-coloured light which streamed through the stained glass; but most people must have also noticed that there was a something wrong about the panes. The fact is that the genius of the P. W. D. has decided that it would be more for the "general good" that the outside public should have a good view of the figures and inscriptions of the windows than that this should be accorded to the worshippers in the cathedral, a decision which the congregation are scarcely likely to endorse.—Bombay Gazette. Oct. 7.

RE-MARRIAGE OF THE KAPOLI BANIAN WIDOW.—On Thursday afternoon the nuptials of the Kapoli Banian widow Shamkoover and Pragjee Laljee were celebrated at the house of Mr. Jewraj Peerbhoy in Grant-road, in the presence of a large number of Reformers. It will be remembered that some time since the two came down to Bombay for the purpose of being married, and that some of the caste hearing of their intention carried off the widow perforce, and kept her confined for some time. Ultimately she was released, and sent off to Broach from the Bandora Railway Station. Her intended husband, however, received intimation of her whereabouts, and, with the assistance of Mr. Mathooradass Khetsey and the other reformed Banias, succeeded in rescuing her from her place of confinement at Broach, where she was kept under the surveillance of her late husband's relations. They arrived in Bombay on the 24th, and arrangements were at once made for the celebration of the marriage, which was performed with much éclat.—Times of India. Sept. 30.

MR. R. H. VINCENT.—We are sorry to say that Bombay is about to be deprived of the valuable and efficient services of Mr. R. H. Vincent, who has been acting as Deputy Commissioner of Police since the departure for England of Mr. Edgington. He has been appointed to act as District Police Superintendent at Nassick during the absence on leave of Major Scott, and we understand that he will start to-day to assume his new duties. Mr. Vincent's exertions in unravelling the infamous Admedabad conspiracy case make not one of the least services which he rendered to the community during his brief incumbency amongst us. Mr. Vincent's appointment appears in Thursday's Government Gazette. We are glad to learn that his withdrawal from Bombay is only temporary. As there is a jatra or annual fair at Nassick during the present month, at which thousands of Hindoo pilgrims gather together, the services of an energetic and active officer were urgently required for the preservation of peace and order, and Mr. Vincent was selected for the post. Mr. Vincent having received peremptory orders from Government to proceed to Nassick, he left Bombay by the morning train on Wednesday last. Mr. Mills, one of the senior Superintendents, has been placed in charge of Mr. Vincent's office as Acting Deputy Commissioner of Police. Mr. Mills was, up to the time of his assuming charge of his new duties, engaged in arranging and tabulating the census figures taken in February last, which laborious work he has just satisfactorily completed.—Bombay Gazette.

KHELAT.—Referring to Khelat affairs the Bombay Gazette's Jacobabad correspondent writes—"The Khan of Khelat has now seen through his folly. Major Harrison, on reaching Bagwannah, midway between this and Khelat, informed his Highness that he was leaving for British territory and that he could no longer put up with the annoyance he has been giving the Sirkar. His Highness seemed to be under the impression that the Commissioner was merely threatening him and did not mean to do one-half of what he said; but no sooner did he know that the Political Agent was making towards Jacobabad than he sent messengers to beg him to return to his capital and to assure him that he would do all he had promised. After despatching his messengers he himself followed, and on meeting Major Harrison entreated him to return. The Khan and the Political Agent then both hastened to Khelat to ratify the treaty the Wuzzeer had entered into. His Highness has dismissed all his late advisers and taken on those that were in favour before. The Wuzzeer has met with a very good reception and has assumed his duties. The Khan has made every reparation for the injury and insult done to the Wuzzeer's family and will shortly marry the Minister's daughter. The Khandahar merchants have received a recoupment of the losses in money. The Sardars have one and all received back all their land and hereditary rights. The Khan of Khelat has promised to afford every security to the merchants."

"With reference to G.G.O. No. 187 of February 27, 1866, I am directed to request that, to avoid any possibility of apprehension as respects its *4th paragraph, the Right hon. the Commander in Chief may be moved to notify that, though admission to the senior department of the Thomason Civil Engineering College is still open to commissioned officers under the rank of field officers, thus affording an opportunity for study in many of the essential branches of military training, it is to be clearly understood that officers availing themselves of the benefits of the institution must not consider that the completion of the course of study there gives them any kind of claim on the Government for employment in the Public Works Department, or other Civil Department under the Government of India."

INDIAN ARMY DEFENCE INSTITUTION.—The President of the Indian Army Defence Institution begs to notify that the petitions received by him will be presented during the next Session, when arrangements have been concluded for bringing the Bonus question before Parliament. It was not deemed expedient that they should be presented at the end of the last Session, when it was decided that the questions could not be brought forward.

DEATH OF COLONEL PALMER, 60TH RIFLES.—We have to announce the death of Col. F. R. Palmer, C.B., half pay, late in command of the 2nd battalion 60th Rifles, which occurred at Villa d'Eester, Lago de Como, Italy, on the 18th inst., at the age of sixty-three. Col. Palmer, who only retired in April last, obtained his commission as ensign March 15, 1833; became lieutenant April 24, 1835; captain March 11, 1842; major June 20, 1854; lieutenant-colonel June 22, 1858; and colonel June 22, 1863. He served with the 60th Rifles in the campaign of 1857-58 against the mutineers in India, including the siege operations before Delhi, from Aug. 22; assault and capture of the city, with the final attack on and occupation of the palace. Commanded the 1st battalion throughout the campaign in Rohilund, including the action of Bugawalla and Nugena, relief of Moradabad, action on the Dojura, assault and capture of Bareilly, attack and bombardment of Shahjehanpore, defeat of the rebels, and relief of the garrison; capture of the Fort of Bunnai, pursuit of the enemy to the left bank of the Goomtee, and the destruction of the Fort of the Mahomdee (C.B., medal with clasp). He commanded the 2nd battalion throughout the campaign of 1860 in China (medal with two clasps for Taku Forts and Peking). A reward for distinguished service has fallen vacant by the death of Colonel F. R. Palmer.

WILL OF A CALCUTTA MERCHANT.—The will and codicil of Mr. Thomas Fortescue, formerly of Calcutta, and late of No. 10, Eaton-square, and who died on the 7th ult., was proved, on the 5th inst., by Henry Bruce Armstrong and Alexander Erskine Holmes, the executors, the personalty being sworn under £70,000. The testator directs the three bonds for £2,000 each entered into by him on the occasion of the marriages of his nieces, Frances Elizabeth (Lady Boston), Mrs. Geraldine Tynte, and Mrs. Eulalie Emily Agg Gardner, and also the bond for £6,000 given by him on the marriage of his niece, Marie Antoinette, Lady de Saumarez, to be paid by his executors. To his wife, Louisa Margaret, he leaves a legacy of £2,500 and all his furniture and plate (except that with his crest engraved, which, after her decease, is bequeathed specifically), and the income of the residue of his property for life, in addition to £1,000 per annum secured to her by their marriage settlement; to Eliza Ford, during the joint lives of herself and testator's wife, an annuity of £250 per annum, and after the decease of his wife an annuity of £400 per annum. After the death of his wife the testator gives to his niece, Adelaide Grace Northey, £2,000; to his niece, Geraldine Tynte, £4,000; and the residue of his estate is directed to be divided into eleven shares, six of which he gives to his said niece, Geraldine Tynte, three and a-half to his niece, Lady de Saumarez, and the remaining one and a-half to his niece Eulalie Emily Agg Gardner. By the codicil the testator leaves an annuity of £20 to his housekeeper, Mary Baker. The testator expresses in the will his wish and desire that his estate should be wound up and the duties paid in England, and not in Ireland, and that English solicitors should be employed for this purpose.

CURIOUS DEATH OF AN INDIAN.—On Thursday evening Dr. Hardwicke held an inquest on the body of Arab Nannoo Meeya Salem, aged about fifty years, agent and representative of the Nabob of Rhadempore for prosecuting his claims in this country, who was found dead, lying on the pavement in front of his house, 33, Burlington-road, Westbournia, on the morning of Tuesday last. In the absence of any relatives of the deceased, the first witness called was a Hindoo gentleman of high caste and legal standing in Bombay, who handed in his card, bearing the name of Vasudeva Jagannath Kirtikar. He said he was a pleader from India, now residing in England, on a mission for his Excellency the Nabob of Rhadempore. The deceased also represented his Excellency, and was entrusted with the charge of all papers connected with the cause of his Excellency the Nabob now being pursued in this country. He had known deceased about nine years, and last saw him alive at half-past eleven on Monday night, at his residence in the Burlington-road, when he was in perfect good health. Witness resided in the same house, and at nine o'clock on Tuesday morning the landlady knocked at his door, and said that one of the gentlemen had fallen from his window and was dead. Not understanding her, and thinking it was an alarm of fire, he got up, dressed, and went downstairs, and saw deceased in a room leading to the area. A medical gentleman was then present. Seeing a wound on his head, and also blood, witness did not go into the room, but he saw enough to tell him he was dead. Deceased was dressed, with the exception of his shoes. Although differing in religion, he and deceased were on friendly terms. He was not a man who would commit suicide, or he would have committed it in the night, and not have waited until daylight and after he was dressed. Besides, he carried a weapon, and would have undoubtedly preferred certain and sudden death to the possibility of a lingering one by throwing himself out of window. Witness afterwards went into deceased's bedroom, which was on the top floor, and found the window open. The height of the window from the floor was very small, and it was his opinion that deceased had fallen out by accident. After further evidence, the jury ultimately returned a verdict of "Death from accidentally falling from a window."

Spirit of the Home Journals.

RUSSIA AND KHIVA.

The Times can see nothing to regret, but every reason for satisfaction, in the definite announcement that England and Russia at length recognise their independent spheres of action on the Continent of Asia; and refuse to be entangled in the petty rivalries of the native potentates. Those astute, though fanatical, barbarians have long played off the two great Western Empires against each other. They have fostered our jealousies, and have subsisted upon them. They have contrived by such means to keep some of the most interesting regions of the earth under the blighting influence of the most bigoted fanaticism yet known, and, however they might cajole us for their own purposes, they would never of their own accord have admitted a ray of civilisation within their borders. Russia will at least accomplish, in her manner and degree, the same work for these regions as we are accomplishing in India, and she ought to be welcomed as an ally in the great war of enlightenment against barbarism. Indeed, admitting that, in certain contingencies, the proximity of the Russians to our Indian borders might facilitate inconvenient agitation among our subjects, it is very questionable whether any neighbouring Power could be more troublesome to us than that which now reigns in Khiva. The Khanates are the home of Mahomedanism of the most intense and fanatical type; and if Mahomedan conspiracies constitute any danger for us, we ought to be thankful that these nests of fanatics should be broken up. No doubt the proximity of Russia to our Indian possessions may lead to new developments of our relations with that Empire. But it will be strange if our statesmen do not find it easier to cultivate settled and confidential relations with the rulers of a great European Empire than with the chiefs of half-a-dozen lawless States. We have no sympathy with the kind of statesmanship which regards every advance of others as a loss or a peril to ourselves. At all events, such statesmanship is impracticable. To administer the affairs of an Empire like India as if there were nothing to be thought of but the immediate convenience of our own position is to condemn ourselves to be defeated by the irresistible march of facts. It is our first business to accept realities, and the evident reality in this case is that Russia is the destined civilizer of Central Asia. Lord Northbrook is fortunate in laying down for the Indian Government a policy of confidence towards the great advancing Empire and of respect for its independent rights. We doubt not the policy will be reciprocated, and we trust that an era of order and prosperity is commencing for one of the most misused regions of the globe.

The Daily News points out that the Russian Government is resolved to deal with the Khan of Khiva as it has already dealt with the Khans of Bokhara and Khokan, and to obtain redress for long-unpunished injuries to its merchants and traders, by occupying his dominions, and reducing them and their ruler to virtual if not absolute subjection. The wrongs which Russian subjects and merchants have endured at the hands of the Khan are undisputed; they are as notorious as the wrongs of the British subjects whom a British army released from the strongholds of the Abyssinian Theodore. Russian policy may have deliberately calculated on provocation from Khiva. Calculations of that kind may have formed the basis of other than Russian conquests and annexations. The warlike preparations on the Caspian have been no secret for some time past; nor has the course of Russian trade, as the pioneer of Russian arms and rule in Central Asia, wavered or turned back for a single day. The Indian Councils at Calcutta and in London have foreseen and marked this unhesitating but unrelenting march of Russian "civilisation" as vigilantly and as carefully as the school of prophets upon whose hearts "North-Western Frontier" is engraved. What was a distinct prevision is now about to become an accomplished fact. It is worth noting at this moment that during the Crimean War little or nothing was said or thought in England or in India about the progress of Russia in Central Asia. It was well understood that as the "orb of her fate" widened in the East, her capacity for domination in the West would be rather restrained than increased. Should another Eastern Question arise to set the Powers of Europe in hostile array, it is not on the shores of the Caspian or in Central Asia, but on the shores of the Mediterranean and the Euxine that the contest will be fought out. A division of empire in Asia, without conflict or collision, and in the common interests of an advancing civilisation, is a decree of "destiny" which responsible statesmen may and must accept, and which Lord Northbrook, in his answer to the Envoy of the Khan of Khiva, has accepted in effect. Faction at home may, in its dearth of more substantial grievances, pretend to murmur at a policy of conciliation, and to raise a cry of panic, as if Lord Northbrook had sacrificed the honour and prestige of England. But who will venture to affirm that any other Governor-General than Lord Northbrook would have given any other answer to the Khivan Envoy, or have listened to the demand for intervention in the Khanate? Lord Mayo's guarded but watchful policy towards Afghanistan—a policy of neutrality, but not of indifference—was justified at once by prudence and necessity, and we may rest assured that his successors will not depart from it except under the stress of emergencies which are more easily imagined than foreseen, and which belong to a future beyond the reach of statesmanship.

The Saturday Review holds that we could not prevent Russia from attacking Khiva if we wished, and we have no sort of ground for trying to do so. The Khan of Khiva is no doubt a petty despot who fully deserves to be punished. He has given Russia as much provocation as the Emperor Theodore gave us, and probably more. When the Khan recently sent an ambassador to ask help from the Viceroy of India, Lord Northbrook most properly answered that the only help he could give was to offer the advice that the Khan should atone for his crimes as soon as possible, and try at the last hour to avert the anger of Russia. When they have conquered the Khan the Russians will be guided solely by a consideration of their own interests in deciding whether they should or should not annex the conquered territory. They are fully as much entitled to annex it as we were to annex the territory of the Sikhs. Nor do we for a moment question that Khiva and other misgoverned outlandish places have much to gain by being brought under Russian dominion, or that the advance of Russia brings some security for civilisation and prosperity to Western Asia. But none the less can we affect to be blind to the extreme probability that this constant advance of Russia creates new dangers to our Empire in the East. The chief of these dangers, and it is a most serious one, is the effect which the proximity of Russia will have on the imaginations, the hopes, and the ambition of the natives of India. Our rule in India depends in a large degree on the universality of the impression among the people that there is no use in thinking of contending with us; and this impression is produced not only by the ability with which we govern them and the spirit with which we have fought them, but also by the fact that there is no other great Power possessed of the weapons and the organisation of the West that comes into competition with us in their mental horizon. It will be very difficult when Russia, far more powerful than England by land, is known to be coming nearer and nearer towards them, and when they begin to think of England as only one of the two European Powers with which they are concerned. If, after advancing to the borders of India, Russia were at war with England, and obtained some temporary success, which no reasonable man will pronounce impossible, the seeds of a new Indian mutiny might be sown, germinate, and shoot into leaf with inconceivable rapidity. It is not that, wherever attacked, we might not hope to win. We might subdue another mutiny in India at even a less cost than we subdued the last. We might silence the forts and ships of San Juan, and keep open our maritime access to British Columbia. What presses on us is the thought that at points so numerous and so remote we are exposed to dangers so great, and that every day the call upon us seems more severe.

OFFICERS' PAY.

The Broad Arrow holds that, regarding the army, the present insufficiency of pay is positively dangerous; and, as has been well remarked, "the commissioned services will fail to draw into their ranks men of education and position, unless a fair wage be offered to them." Among the junior ranks, if dissatisfaction prevails in India, it surely must prevail to a much greater extent in this country, where the expense of living is far greater. The officers most to be pitied at home are the Queen's half-pay and the retired Indian officers. There is no use in concealing the fact; as a rule, they cannot, with the strictest economy, make both ends meet; and the policy which does not try to better this lamentable state of affairs, there can be no doubt, is "fraught with absolute danger to the State." Not very long ago we heard of an officer on half-pay who was glad to accept a situation in a brewery at one guinea per week. Among the temporary writers in the Government offices may be found military officers of rank who are glad to work in order to educate their families, for a few shillings a day—some of these men who have deserved well of their country, but on whom the kind hand of fortune has never fallen. Instead of rest, they are compelled to work harder than they did when blessed with the health and strength of youth; and although the fact is indisputable that plenty of work is a grand thing for us all, still there is a vast difference between voluntary labour and compulsory work for a subsistence. The whole system of pay and pensions requires immediate revision to suit the pressing demands of the age. The question is one of simple common sense. And why should half-pay British officers and retired Indian officers have no increase when wages in every other calling have been nearly doubled, and every day, before our eyes, and at our very doors, we have continual proof of the inability of officers to get along respectably in the world without some subsidy to their pay or pension. It is all very well to read that "the art of living easily as to money is to pitch your scale of living one degree below your means;" but at the same time something more liberal in the way of "means" should be given at starting for economical officers to try the experiment. We most emphatically assert that with British officers in England, as a rule, full pay, half-pay, and retired Indian pay, are decidedly insufficient to keep up that position which the honour of the services demands. The retired Indian officer has one great disadvantage to contend against, and that is, having been accustomed to a comparatively large salary in India, it is very difficult for him to live easily as to money in this country, where he gets so little of the desirable commodity. Competence is like praise: he who has never enjoyed it can never feel its want.

A BOY BROUGHT UP IN A BEAR'S DEN.—A correspondent writes to an up-country contemporary:—"I see in a late issue an account of a boy being found in a bear's den at Fyzabad, in Oudh. Such occurrences are not uncommon; an old resident of Seetapore told me some years ago of his father having found a boy in a jungle near that station, who had been living with a family of bears evidently for years, as he was then about ten years of age and could not speak. He walked on all fours as in the case reported; but though every effort was made to tame him, and make him conform to the usages of bipeds, he preferred his savage habits, and eventually pined away and died. I have a hazy recollection that this boy's story has been told by Sleeman in his book on Oudh. The Rajah of Bulrampore caught another wild boy since the Mutiny in some jungles on his estate, but I have never heard whether he succeeded in reclaiming him. If the soldier's story be correct, a minute account of the boy's appearance, movements, habits, and the method adopted to restore him to his fellow creatures would be highly interesting."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

NOTHING BETTER.—With the shortening days and foggy atmospheres, the human system will certainly be more or less deranged, and notably these invaluable Pills exert a greater and more beneficial influence over loss of appetite, dyspepsia, bilious errors, irregularities of the bowels, and nervous disorders, than any other medicine. Their mode of action is thoroughly consonant with reason: they completely purify the blood, relieve both head and stomach of all faulty functions, and expel all oppressive accumulations from the bowels.
With the blood purified, and all poisons purged from the system, regularity is obtained.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER
TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.
